An unknown exchange fires the following at kickers: "If there was an ice cold lemonade spring in every village garden, if bread grew on sunflower stalks and every blade of grass was capped with $10 bills a certain class of cranks would kick because there were no sticks in the lemonade, no butter or preserves on the bread and because the grass did not produce $20 instead of $10 on the blades.

Grit.

Nothing is so dependent on false teeth as the hen. She has her likes and her dislikes in other things, but above all she is fond of false teeth. While she does not spend hours in the dentist chair, as her owner does sometimes, still she has to have her teeth fixed often and has to have the right kind. Instead of grinding the food in her mouth she grinds it in her gizzard. This is a most natural process and nature has provided her with the instinct to get the grinders in position to perform the work. Should they be wanting it stands the poultry owner in hand to provide them. Many farms have but little or no grit on them and soon the poultry on the farm will become diseased and the owner concludes that he has a very poor breed or that his place is cursed. Grit consists of gravel, oyster shells, bone, broken crockery ware and such substances as have sharp edges. The hen will select a sharp piece of glass rather than a round, smooth pebble. She knows the value of each for her purpose. If the grit is not sharp it is valueless. Nature has provided that when a pebble becomes rounded the gizzard will void it. For this reason sharp grit is necessary.

Some owners have come to the conclusion that hens require more grit when laying than at any other time, and that oyster shells are the best because they help make up the shell used. Hens do require more grit when laying than at any other time, but it is because they require more feed which calls for more grit to do the grinding. There are many kinds of grit in the market that will give excellent satisfaction. Owners of hens should consult their own situation and buy it if deemed profitable. Broken crockery ware is an excellent grit for proutly and is within the reach of all.

The following clipped from an exchange, is going the round of the press: Take a walk through a cemetery and you will pass the last resting place of a man who blew into the muzzle of a gun to see if it was loaded. A little further down the slope is the crank who shows how close he could pass in front of a moving train. In strolling about you see the modest monument of the hired girl who tried to start the fire with kerosene and a grass covered knoll that covers the boy who put a corn cob under a mule's tail. That tall shaft over the man that blew out the gas casts a shadow across the boy who tried to jump on a moving train. Side by side the ethereal creature who always had her corset laced to the last hole, and the intelligent idiot who rode a bicycle nine miles in ten minutes sleep on undisturbed. At repose is a doctor who took a dose of his own medicine. There with the top of a shoe box driven over his head is the rich old man who married a young wife Away over there reposes a boy who fished on Sunday, and the woman who kept strychnine with powders in the cupboard. The man who stood in front of a mowing machine to oil the sickle is quiet now and rests beside the careless brakeman who fed himself to a seventy-ton engine, and over in the corner of the fence in a potter's field may be seen the bleaching bones of the man who tried to whip the editor.

Queer Titles to Queer Books.

The world of books is full of queer titles, but few will appear more strange to modern readers than that of a book, in five volumes, called; "On the Divine Noble Gift, the Philosophical, highly Dear and Wonderous Art to Brew Beer." This book was published in 1573, by H. Knanst, and it would probably have been forgotten long ago but for its queer title.

Since this work was issued the art of brewing beer has changed in many respects. The beer of those days would hardly suit the discriminating modern palate. Science and art have combined to develop the splendid "Golden Grain Belt" beers, a malt food product of great value, brewed by the Minneapolis Brewing Co., which but to try is to approve, Order of your local dealer, or Alex. The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forcasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth have been plainly printed in his new famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25 cents. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Circulation of Blood.

The mileage of the blood circulation reveals some astounding facts in our personal history. Thus it has been calculated that, assuming the heart to beat sixty-nine times a minute, at ordinary heart pressure, the blood goes at the rate of 207 yards in the minute, or seven miles per hour, 168 miles per day, and 61,320 miles per year. If a man eighty-four years of age could have one single blood corpsule floating in his blood all his life, it would have traveled in that time 5,150,880 miles.

PAIN OPENED HER SKULL

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story—Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, will make you well and strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a physician's prescription, formulated from a discovery after years of investigation and experiment. Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the discoverer. He can be consulted free personally or by letter.

THANKSGIVING.

To the popular mind the word "Thanksgiving" stands for a day of festivity. But they who lose its subjective meaning in mere creature enjoyment suffer a misfortune and miss an opportunity.

To our fathers Thanksgiving was a sacrament. It was one of their acts of religion to set apart for it an annual day. Heaven had blessed their harvests, and they wished to express in a special way appreciation of its favors.

Nothing in their example was more sane and sensible than the creation of this November family custom, now become national. There have been changes of our social life since the old time. These have made it less easy to observe the day so generally with public rites of worship, but the ordinance holds its place with pleasing fitness, and with ample reason.

We have a thousandfold more to be devoutly glad for than our fathers had; and the feeling and the faith they carried with them to the "solemn assembly" we can radiate in brighter homes and wider activities of kindness.

The unfolding Christian age has given us the larger thought of the meaning and mission of freedom and of civilization; the grander type and idea of benevolence; the tenderer beliefs that sweeten life and death with hope. For all these let us thank God.

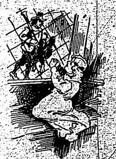
Gratitude is not only "a natural function of the healthy soul"; it is its wealth. Invest it. Its interest will enrich the character, and uplift the whole life.

OLD-FASHIONED CAKE.

It is the part of the good management of a good housewife to have something on hand for emergencies. In colonial days, when cold weather came, a portion of the regular duty of the housekeeper was to prepare mince meat, head cheese, fruit cake, cookies, jumbles and the like, and to store them for safe keeping in huge stone pots, with layers of buttered paper between. These articles were very convenient in emergencies and the only wonder is that the present-day woman does not provide herself with a similar stock.

The propinquity of the bake shop and the traveling baker's wagon have unquestionably had much to do with this change in the methods of housekeeping. Besides this, the making of some old-fashioned cakes is practically a lost art. Very few cooks can make good jumbles and the sugar cookie, which is the delight of the youngster, and is perfectly harmless when properly put together, is rarely found in the average household. A recipe for sugar cookies fished out of an old recipe book will be appropriate to the season and the finished product will be highly appreciated by children of all stages of growth. Cream together in a large earthen bowl two cups of granulated sugar and one heaping cupful of butter. After these ingredients have been beaten and stirred to a cream add one egg, beating it thoroughly through the sugar and butter. Grate in a quarter of a nutmeg, and if one likes add also a level teaspoonful of caraway seeds. Gradually pour in a cupful of milk, stirring gently through the mixture. Sift two and a half cupfuls of flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder into another dish. Gradually stir the flour into the mixture in the earthen bowl. If this amount of flour does not make a paste stiff enough to roll out, add a little more. The paste, however, must be soft to give them the delicacy so desirable. Roll the dough out a quarter of an inch thick on a floured board, cut with the cutter and bake in rather a quick oven, watching closely that they do not burn. In order to have them crisp and snappy do not put in a jar or box until they are quite dry after baking.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.



The snow upon the hillside lay
And thatched the cottage roof.
The web of vines by the Pilgrim's door
Was filled with icy woof.
The boughs were leafless on the trees.
Across the barren plain
The north wind swept despairingly
And moaned like one in pain.

(It whimpered like some hungry child,
That clasps its parent's hand
And pleads for bread when there is none
In all the dreary land.)
Above the little Plymouth town,
Circling with empty maw,
Mocking their hunger, flew the crow,
Shrieking his "haw, haw, haw."

Patience, a blue-eyed maiden,
(Her eyes with tears were dim,)
From hunger feeble, trembling knelt
And raised her voice to Him.
"Dear Dod," she said in pleading tones
Tender, plaintive and sweet,
"We's almost 'tarved, an' won't 'oo please Send down some fings to eat?"

Then all day long her watchful eyes
Gazed down the village street,
Not doubting but she soon would see
Some one with "fings to eat."
And, lo! before the sun had set,
With wild fowl laden down,
Four hunters from the forest drear
Came marching into town.

And (as in answer to the prayer),
To add to all the cheer,
And banish famine from the place,
Came Indians with deer.
The joyous villagers rushed out
The ladened ones to meet,
But Patience knelt and said: "Fanks, Dod,
For sendin' fings to eat."

Where Dr. Hoyt Could Have Stopped.

Dr. Thomas A. Hoyt, pastor of the Chambers-Wylie Memorial church of Philadelphia, was recently entertaining President Patton of Princeton, Gen. John B. Gordon, and other eminent men, at dinner. The guests were speaking in strong praise of a sermon the minister had just preached, and those who were versed in theology were discussing the doctrinal points he had brought out.

Dr. Hoyt's young son was sitting at the table, and President Patton, turning to him, said:

"My boy, what did you think of your father's sermon? I saw you listening intently to it;" at which praise Mrs. Hoyt smiled cordially, and all listened to see what sort of a reply the lad would make.

"I guess it was very good," said the boy; "but there were three mighty fine places where he could have stopped."—Saturday Evening Post.

Knew His Business.

In days gone by, in a country town, there lived and wrought a stonecutter who, besides being reckoned skillful in designing tombstones, was also credited with critical taste in the epitaphs inscribed thereon.

Being requested by the disconsolate, weeping relict of one of his fellow townsmen to place on the slab of her dear departed the words: "My sorrow is greater than I can bear," he took care to space them out so that an addendum was possible, and was by no means surprised by her visiting him a few months after, to ask him, as she was about to remarry, to efface the inscription and substitute a more fitting one.

"No need for that, marm," was his reply. "I always looks to the contingencies where there's widdies lef'. All that's wanted to the inscription on that tomb is jes' to add the word 'alone!'"—Stray Stories.

A LIFE SAVED.

A Druggist's Timely and Straight-Forward Advice Saves the Life of a Prominent Citizen.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally esteemed, than Mr. S. P. Rush, Conductor (President) of Holy Name Court, Number 26.

His many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were, therefore, much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's Disease, that most terrible and fatal disease.

Mr. Rush, however, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions, and pills and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his local druggist, guided by the numerous inquiries being made at his store for Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised Mr. Rush to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Rush says that after commencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, he felt much better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that I owe life and health to them."

What this wonderful remedy has done for Mr. Rush, it will certainly do for anyone. It is the only remedy that has never failed to cure Bright's Disease.

Mr. Rush is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but always finds time to say a good word for the Medicine that saved his life.

Bagging a Peer's Calf.

The moors of Yorkshire and Scotland have been alive with shooters. The crack of the gun has been heard on every hand, for grouse shooting has opened for the year. During the shooting season in Great Britain accidents are comparatively rare, considering the first-class opportunities to blow off a companion's head, or drill a hole in his back. But such accidents do happen, and the first man to be shot this season was Lord Binning. The noble lord is a bit of a wag, and even when his leg was perforated with shot from his own gun, and he was sitting against a hedge waiting for a stretcher to be brought, his wit did not desert him, for, as the doctor was binding up his wounds, he remarked: "I came out to kill grouse—but, 'pon my soul, I seem to have bagged a calf."—Saturday Evening Post.

Silk for Fishing Lines.

The production of what is known as silk-worm gut for fishing lines is a curious industry that has followed the decline of silk culture in the vicinity of Murcia, Spain. The grub is fed on the usual mulberry leaves, but before it begins to spin is drowned in vinegar, and the substance that would have formed the cocoon is drawn from the body as a thick silken thread. These threads are treated with chemicals, dried, put up in bundles of 100 and sold along the Mediterranean.

Women Convicts in Austria.

Austria is the one country in the world which never puts a woman in prison. Instead of giving the female criminal so many months in jail, she is sent, no matter how terrible is her record, to one or other of the convents devoted to that purpose, and there detained during the time for which she is sentenced. The convent is not a mere prison in disguise, for its courtyard stands open all day long, the only bar to egress being a nun who acts as portress, just as in other convents.

"Oh! Dear I'm so Tired."

The ordinary every-day life of most of our women is a ceaseless treadmill of work.

How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system all unstrung!

One day she is wretched and utterly miserable; in a day or two she is better and laughs at her fears, thinking there is nothing much the matter after all; but before night the deadly backache reappears, the limbs tremble, the lips twitch—it seems as though all the imps of Satan were clutching her vitals; she goes to pieces and is flat on her back.

No woman ought to arrive at this terrible state of misery, because these symptoms are a sure forerunner of womb troubles. She must remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is almost an infallible cure for all female ills, such as irregularity of periods, which cause weak stomach, sick headache, etc., displacements and inflammation of the womb, or any of the multitudes of illnesses which beset the female organism.

Mrs. Gooden wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter tells the result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very grateful to you for your kindness and the interest you have taken in me, and truly believe that your medicines and advice are worth more to a woman than all the doctors in the world. My troubles began with inflammation and hemorrhages from the kidneys, then inflammation, congestion and falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries. I underwent local treatment every day for some time; then, after nearly two months, the doctor gave me permission to go back to work. I went back, but in less than a week was compelled to give up and go to bed. On breaking down the second time, I decided to let doctors and medicines alone and try your remedies. Before the first bottle was gone I felt the effects of it. Three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash did me more good than all the doctors' treatments and medicine. I have gained twelve pounds during the last two months and am better in every way. Thanking you for your kind advice and attention, I remain. Yours gratefully,

DAVIS PASSES AWAY

NATION LOSES ITS FOREMOST STATESMAN.

Career of Patriotic Usefulness and Distinguished Ability Is Closed—Whole Country Mourns the Death of the Brilliant Diplomat and Statesman—As Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee He Took a Prominent Part in Shaping the Policy of the Government.

St. Paul, Nov. 29. — United States Senator Cushman K. Davis has been vanquished in his heroic struggle with the grim reaper. Death came at 8:48 o'clock Tuesday night to relieve him of the suffering which he has patiently endured for the last few weeks.

Millions of his countrymen have watched and prayed during the critical period of his illness, hoping that the nation's foremost statesman and diplomat might be spared to continue his labors in behalf of the country he loved so well. A combination of senile gangrene and acute inflammation of the kidneys resulted in death.

Although the end was foreseen weeks ago by the attending physicians, and had been expected from day to day, it comes as a great shock to the members of the family, to whom the senator's great will power and that he made against the progress of disease gave hope of ultimate recovery. It comes as a shock to the people of the city and the state and of the nation that had feared the worst, but had hoped for the best.

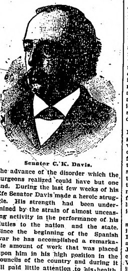
The disease which caused death first made its appearance in August, when the senator's right foot became sore. It was considered by him to be a trifling matter and nothing was done for several weeks. During September the diseased member had become so painful that he considered it worth while to make an attempt at treatment, and it was not until a few weeks later that the services of a physician were secured.

A month ago the true significance of the trouble became apparent and the skill of the best surgeons in the country was called upon

To Check the Disease.

At first it was supposed that the patient was suffering from blood poisoning, but the case rapidly developed into one of senile gangrene. The little toe was amputated in the effort to stay



Senator C. K. Davis.

the advance of the disorder which the surgeons realized could have but one end. During the last few weeks of his life Senator Davis made a heroic struggle. His strength had been undermined by the strain of almost unceasing activity in the performance of his duties to the nation and the state. Since the beginning of the Spanish war he has accomplished a remarkable amount of work that was placed upon him in his high position in the councils of the country and during it all paid little attention to his health. When the crisis came he had little, aside from his superior will power, to rely upon in the Contest Against Disease.

For weeks his condition has been such as to keep his family and friends alternating between hope and despair. Almost every night he has been restless, his temperature has been above normal and pulse and respiration have risen to points that indicated to the physicians the most alarming results. With the return of day he would recover consciousness, would suffer little pain, and, to the watchers at the bedside, appear to be improving. His appetite was good, he read the papers and smoked and apparently was on the road to recovery. With the return of night, however, the presence of the alarming symptoms was again manifest and Dr. A. J. Stone, who attended the senator, could hold out but little hope.

From Unconsciousness to Death.

Monday afternoon Senator Davis sank into a comatose condition and thereafter recognized no one. At 4 o'clock yesterday morning he became very weak and thereafter sank steadily. All day yesterday he lay motionless upon his left side. The physicians feared to disturb him, so he received no nourishment or medicine. At 7 o'clock last evening his respirations, scarcely to be detected, were as infrequent as seven or eight to the minute. Then the senator's father, almost ninety years old, came into the room—woe-stricken but calm. The senator's mother was not called to see her great son die. The senator's sisters, Mrs. Bartlett Tripp and Mrs. T. T. Monford, followed their father to the bedside. Mrs. Davis had not left her dying husband. At 8:47 o'clock Dr. Stone was holding the senator's wrist. A trembling pulsation could still be felt. Dr. Stone took out his watch. The ticking repeated itself again and again in the ears of all within the room. The doctor withdrew his hand and rose from his chair. Senator Davis had been dead several minutes.

SENATOR C. K. DAVIS.

Brilliant Career of the Great Minnesota Statesman.

A patriotic champion of liberty and of law, a profound and polished scholar, a subtle lawyer, and an impressive and convincing orator, a broad-minded, cautious, but alert statesman, a courageous, fertile and successful diplomat, such was Senator Cushman K. Davis. When the momentous events of the past few years are summed up by the historians and added to the stirring pages of this great republic's history, prominently forth must stand the name of Minnesota's senior senator. Inseparably connected with the exciting incidents previous to and during the war with Spain is the name of this great diplomat and statesman, as chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, he had much to do with shaping the policy of the government. His advice was constantly sought by President McKinley, to whom he was a mainstay and support during the whole of that turbulent period.

The exposition of international justice contained in his report upon the Maine disaster, supplied foundation for all subsequent action by congress and the president. It was left to Senator Davis, nevertheless, to focus the mighty forces he had set in motion. This he did by reporting to the senate a resolution demanding the withdrawal of Spain from Cuba and adjacent waters, and authorizing the president, in case of Spain's refusal, to employ such force as might be necessary to enforce compliance. But the Minnesota senator displayed true courage of statecraft, which prepares for the consequence of every voluntary action.

Thus, between Feb. 15, 1898, when the Maine was destroyed, and April 21, when war began, Senator Davis stood forth in the eyes of the world, a sagacious, self-poised director of American destiny. Thenceforth his name, his learning, his talents, were recognized by civilization. Thenceforth his policy was latent in every diplomatic undertaking of the United States. And when some future century confronts Americans once more with the national problems of 1898, the patriotic, safe solution will again be read in the old-time speeches of Cushman K. Davis.

Throughout the Spanish war the calm but formidable attitude of this country offset the most subtle plans for foreign intervention, an intervention directed far more to the humbling of America than at the succoring of Spain. For the maintenance of an attitude so difficult and so essential, the advice of Senator Davis was sought constantly and frankly.

As a commissioner to arrange terms of peace with Spain the senator's peculiar talents found full scope. One of his associates on the commission, speaking afterward, said: "Senator Davis was our magazine, our bulwark. His knowledge of international law awoke the admiration of our antagonists, learned and ingenious as they were themselves. The senator was never at a loss to meet the most unexpected point or to confute the Spaniards with a return quotation from the most obscure authority. His acquaintance with French, Italian and Spanish, as well as with the classic tongues, reinforced the scholarship of our commission and proved of special use to us in documentary references."

Upon his return from Paris Senator Davis was received with distinguished gratitude at Washington, with public welcome at St. Paul. His place as chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs was assured for the future, no less than with his seat in the senate. He had fixed his position as the foremost American expounder of the complex law of nations. He had, moreover, proved his possession of the far rarer abilithy to obtain from that law the utmost advantage in diplomatic argument.

Senator Davis comes of Puritan stock, both his father and mother tracing their ancestry back to the Pilgrim Fathers. Cushman K. Davis was born at the village of Henderson, N. Y., June 16, 1838. He was the oldest of eight children, five of whom still live. When he was two months old his family removed to Waukesha, Wis. For fifteen years his father lived the earnest life of a frontier farmer. He then became a country merchant. During the War of the Rebellion he served as a captain in the commissary department, and was brevetted major by President Johnson. Afterwards Maj. Davis held several municipal and county offices, and was chosen a member of the Wisconsin legislature. He is still living, hale and hearty, at the advanced age of eighty-six.

Cushman attended the district school, later, studied in a small academy at Waukesha, known as Carroll college. In 1857 he graduated from the University of Michigan. He practiced law at Waukesha until 1862, when he enlisted in the Federal army as first lieutenant of Company B, Twenty-eighth Wisconsin infantry. He joined the Army of the Tennessee and participated in the expedition that captured Little Rock. He was not robust, and he suffered constantly from the miasma of the Arkansas swamps. He was frequently detailed for duty as judge advocate, and later served as adjutant general on the staff of Gen. Gorman. But, after two years, Lieut. Davis found himself failing, and was obliged to resign in 1864.

He returned to Waukesha and married. Then he came to St. Paul and became a law partner of his former military chief, Gen. Gorman. Afterwards he became associated with C. D. O'Brien and H. A. Wilson. On retiring from his two-years' term as governor of Minnesota, he, with F. B. Kellogg and C. A. Severance, established the well known law firm of Davis, Kellogg & Severance. They maintained a successful career during twenty-four years.

Cushman K. Davis found ample reason for success at the bar in his distinguishing qualities of earnestness, good judgment, diligence, clearness and breadth of vision, united to subtlety of thought.

When twenty-nine years old, Attorney Davis obtained his first important political office, that of representative in the Minnesota legislature. Appointed district attorney in 1868, he held the office until 1873, when he resigned to take the gubernatorial chair, to which he had been elected as the candidate of the Republican party. During the eleven years that followed his retirement from the governor's office, Gov. Davis sought no political office. His time was divided between his profession and his literary pursuits.

In 1887 he succeeded S. J. R. McMillan as United States senator.

As chairman of the senate's pension committee Senator Davis gained the gratitude of all old soldiers by originating and passing a pension bill both liberal and just. Toward the close of his first term he surprised the country with an elaborate declaration of the present and the future importance of the Sault Ste. Marie canal.

The senator was re-elected in 1893. During this term he was promoted to the much-prized position of chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, succeeding the venerable John Sherman. He made a strong fight against President Cleveland's Hawaiian policy, and when, subsequently, the Hawaiian treaty of annexation failed of passage, he put his subtlety once more in evidence by substituting for the treaty a joint resolution, thus securing immediate annexation through the vote of a mere majority.

Senator Davis' most distinguished service in the senate was before and during the war with Spain. In 1899 he was re-elected for the third term to the honorable body that he had honored.

At the capital he was admired socially. Although by no means rich, he had been long in receipt of a growing income from his legal practice. He entertained with taste. He enjoyed, at his house in Washington, the co-operation of a popular, tactful and attractive wife. He had no children. Before Mrs. Davis married, in 1880, she was Miss Anna Malcolm Agnew of St. Paul. A few years earlier Gov. Davis had secured a divorce, on the technical ground of desertion, from his first wife, Laura Bowman. She retained the esteem of many friends. She had married Lieut. Davis at Waukesha soon after his return from the war. Mrs. Bowman-Davis inherited an extensive property in later years. She is said to be living in Kansas City.

The senator was a Mason and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, but he was allied with few other societies. Although not active in religious concerns, he was nominally a Congregationalist.

Senator Davis was a deep student, and found a special pleasure in his library. To him, as to most productive minds, all literature was valuable. Shakespeare and Balzac were his favorites. His lecture upon "Hamlet," his work upon "The Law in Shakespeare," will remain proofs the most pregnant of his scholarship.

The lecture upon "Hamlet" was written in 1882, and was delivered on various occasions with much success. The treatise upon Shakespearean law was published two years later. It was acclaimed by law scholars of all Anglo-Saxeny as the work of a profound, ingenius lawyer. Minnesota was felicitated that her second great Shakespearean had judgment sufficient for the two.

Cushman K. Davis was an intellectual man. For knowledge, therefore, as the campus of the intellect, he felt the partiality conceived by athletes for the lime-lined field. His was not an abstract, spiritual intellectuality. It was mind applied to man. Senator Davis viewed mankind, dealt with mankind, through his head, not through his heart. He had many convictions. He had few sympathies. His self-sacrifice was only that of the present for the future. He did not disregard the cardinal principles of conduct. He was a faithful son, an honorable lawyer, a patriotic statesman.

His temperment, so cold and so controlling, so shrewd and so self-centered, was reflected in the deep-set eyes tered, was reflected in the deepest eyes below his expansive forehead. In the heavy, projecting eyebrows tilted toward his cheeks. This was the face of Benjamin F. Butler, a polititian profound and ingenious. This is the face, comeliness unheeded, of Li Hung Chang, whose superior diplomacy is confessed by those who hate him.

But, nevertheless, if we do not sympathize with hero or with heroine, we understand, far better than before, the greatness of a great fiction, of a great history. We see with sharper eye, reflect with broader apprehension. For we are guided by an uncommon student of the world, political and social, a student who could align his conduct with his theory, and who turned from no straight course of reasoning to avoid a personal sentiment.

TO SWAMP PHILLIPS.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Frantic efforts are being made by shorts caught in the Phillips corner to swamp him with grain in the last day of the option. It is said to be the purpose to force a reinspection of this week's receipts which have been graded No. 3, one grade too low to pass on contract. "There will be big deliveries Friday," said Charles Sloane, manager for Counselman & Co. "and lots of corn will be reinspected and pass No. 2."

"They won't get a car of it graded up," said Phillips, when he was told of the new tactics of the shorts. Another plan contemplates the purchase and shipment to Chicago of corn which was sold by the elevators in Buffalo and Montreal when they went out of the deal in October.

Fifty-one cents marked up on the board yesterday was a new high price in the November deal. Phillips came into the pit early and listed the price at 48 cents, where it opened. Between 50 and 51 cents he unloaded 240,000 bushels. As he is selling corn bought at 26 cents his day's transactions netted him a profit better than $25,000. Other days this week are said to have been equally profitable to him. Yesterday's close was 50 cents. Big foreigners, who, it is said chiefly constitute the short interest, are still hanging on stubbornly. Predictions are freely made that the last day of the deal will see November corn quoted at 55 cents.

FRENCH CLASH WITH BRITISH.

Shanghai, Nov. 29.—Thirty French soldiers here, while shouting "Vive Kruger!" encountered a squad of British police. A scrimmage ensued, during which several were wounded.

THE LAST OF EARTH

REMAINS OF SENATOR DAVIS LAID TO REST.

Simple and Impressive Funeral Services at St. Paul—Thousands Pay a Last Tribute of Respect to the Memory of the Great Statesman—Committees From the Senate and House of Representatives Participate—Business Suspended During the Funeral Service.

St. Paul, Dec. 2.—With simple ceremony, in keeping with his life and character, all that was mortal of the late Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis was laid at rest to-day in Oakland cemetery. In the presence of thousands of his sorrowing townsmen the last tribute of respect was paid to the memory of the man whose loss has deprived the nation of its most wise and courageous statesman.

Out of respect to the late senator public officers and places of business were closed during the funeral services.

Many magnificent and costly floral tributes were received, among them being an immense wreath of chrysanthemums, overlaid with white roses and orchids, presented in behalf of the United States senate. The G. A. R., Loyal Legion, Old Time Telegraphers and Military Telegraphers of America, Sons of Veterans and other organizations of which the senator was a member sent beautiful and appropriate floral tributes. From all parts of the country and from various cities and towns of Minnesota came floral offerings without number.

The beautiful and impressive service for the dead of the Episcopal church was conducted by Rev. C. D. Andrews of Christ church, assisted by Rev. Theodore Sedgwick of St. John's church. The service at the home of the deceased senator commenced at 11 o'clock. This ceremony was witnessed only by the relatives and their most intimate friends. The streets surrounding the house were packed with a great multitude of people when the casket, borne by the pallbearers, was removed from the house and placed in the waiting hearse. The pallbearers were James J. Hill of St. Paul, Judge Walter H. Sanborn of St. Louis, Hon. John S. Pillsbury of Minneapolis, Hon. W. D. Washburn of Minneapolis, Hon. Samuel R. Fair of Minneapolis, Robert G. Evans of Minneapolis, Judge C. E. Flandrau of St. Paul and E. W. Peet of St. Paul.

The funeral procession was the largest ever seen in St. Paul. Carriage after carriage followed in the wake of the hearse, and many people on foot joined in the long march to Oakland cemetery. A large number of organizations were represented, among them being delegations from the state legislature, Acker post, G. A. R.; Ramsey County Medical society, Jobbers' union, Commercial club, Northwestern Manufacturers' association, Ramsey County Bar association and the Allied National Agricultural Association of America.

Many thousands were assembled at the cemetery when the funeral procession arrived. The service at the cemetery was brief, consisting of the Episcopal rites with appropriate prayers. During the service a quartet composed of Miss Florence Marion Pace, Mrs. Jane Huntington Yale, Harry E. George and Harry E. Phillips sang "Lead, Kindly Light," "For All Thy Saints" and "Peace, Perfect Peace."

Prominent among those who paid homage to the memory of Senator Davis were the committee of his colleagues in the senate and the committee of the house of representatives.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Delay of a Day Out of Respect to Senator Davis' Memory.

Washington, Dec. 2. — Senators Aldrich, Frye, Foraker and Hale and Speaker Henderson of the house sailed at the White House yesterday, and after a consultation with the president announced that the latter's message would not be read to congress until Tuesday. The postponement from Monday will be taken out of respect to the memory of Senator Davis. Congress will therefore meet Monday noon, as it is required to do by law, and will at once adjourn over one day. It was agreed as to the program of congress that the appropriation bills and other routine matters shall be pressed so as to make an extra session unnecessary.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.

Thus Far There Have Been No Deaths From Smallpox.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 3.—There has been much needless alarm occasioned by the smallpox scare in this city. Although there are many cases of disease in the city there has not yet been a single death. At a meeting of the city council a committee of physicians was appointed to act as inspectors. They have quarantined a number of houses, the object being to prevent a further spread of the disease. Two of the schools of the city in the infected district will be closed for one week until the scare abates.

COLLINS OFFERED DAVIS' SEAT.

Friends of the Judge Believe He Will Decline.

St. Paul, Dec. 3.—Loren W. Collins, associate justice of the state supreme court, has been offered the appointment of United States senator to succeed Cushman K. Davis. An intimate friend of Justice Collins stated last evening that there was no doubt but that the appointment had been offered Mr. Collins by Gov. Lind. Mr. Collins was not in the city yesterday and it could not be learned whether he would accept the appointment or not. His friends, however, believe that he will refuse it.

Blue Mounds Will Be Demanded.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 3.—The historic Blue Mounds, twenty miles west of here, the highest point of land between the Rockies and Alleghanies, has been sold by Milwaukee capitalists to Keeven Bros. and Samuel Martin of Mount Horeb, who will cut thousands of cords from the wooded slopes and turn them into pastures. The tract covers over 500 acres. The "Mound" was famous in lead mining in territorial days, being the half-way station and only settlement between Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien, and was the scene of Indian massacres during the Black Hawk war and of several mining tragedies.

Duck Full of Gold.

Waterloo, Wis., Dec. 3.—About thirty nuggets of pure gold were found in the crop of a duck purchased by a lady in Waterloo for her thanksgiving dinner from F. Haberman, whose farm lies about three miles east of here. The farm lies on the west side of an extensive marsh on which are numerous springs which seemingly come from a bed of sand, and it may be possible that the sand contains quantities of placer gold.

Two Safes Cracked.

Mountain Lake, Minn., Dec. 3.—The safes of Hiebert Bros., grain buyers, and Frank Balzer, lumber dealer, were blown open by unknown parties. Only a small amount was taken.

Shot While Hunting.

Waterloo, Wis., Dec. 3.—While hunting rabbits a few days ago Albert Huebner, a deaf mute, was shot and severely wounded in one of his legs by a companion.

Boy Shot by His Brother.

Minneapolis, Dec. 3.—George Murker, sixteen years old, was accidentally shot by his brother while hunting rabbits in the vicinity of the Town and Country club. The injured boy was taken to his home. He will recover.

SNAP FOR DOWAGER

PROPOSITION FOR RETURN OF COURT TO PEKIN.

Empress Will Be Guaranteed Protection and an Income for Life if She Will Return to Pekin—Must Keep Her Hands Out of the Government—Emperor to Resume the Throne and Exercise All Powers Which Were Usurped by the Empress—Would Help Peace Negotiations.

Pekin, Dec. 3.—Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching, the Chinese plenipotentiaries, are considering a suggestion which has been made to them that they ascertain what the dowager empress thinks of a proposition that the court return from Singan-fu to Pekin under a guarantee of protection to be given by all the powers. This guarantee, however, is made conditional upon the empress taking no part in the government in the future. Furthermore, she will have to agree to live at the summer palace or some other place, the choice of her residence being left to her, but the powers will guarantee she will be given an assured income for the Balance of Her Life.

The powers also propose that the emperor shall resume the throne and exercise all the powers that were usurped by the empress dowager, and that the latter shall agree not to interfere with his majesty. It is stated that this suggestion was not made by any individual minister, but there is no doubt that all the foreign representatives would like to know that the court would return here, as its presence would simplify the other difficulties in the way of peace negotiations. England is again assisting the Germans. Previously the Germans were looting furniture from the district controlled by the English. The British commander requested Count von Waldersee to stop this and informed him that Great Britain would provide the furniture needed, agreeing to furnish quarters for a thousand men.

Hope for Early Agreement.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Administration officials continue sanguine that the representatives of the powers at Pekin will soon reach a common agreement to the demands to be made upon the Chinese imperial government for satisfaction for the Boxer outbreak. The state department is in communication with the ambassadors and ministers for the United States to the European powers, and advices which have come from them from time to time lead the officials here to hope that the powers will be brought to the position maintained by the United States in dealing with the Chinese, viz., that there should not be demands made upon the imperial government which it is unable to fulfill. Our government has persistently held to this view in the pending negotiations between the ministers at Pekin, and if the principle of this contention can be maintained in the combined note to be handed to the Chinese plenipotentiaries a decided advantage will be had at the start. The attitude of our government on this subject has been made clear to Mr. Conger. The meeting between him and the German and French ministers Saturday at Pekin presumably was in compliance with the minister's latest instruction from Washington. Nothing has been heard from Mr. Conger by the state department for several days.

QUARREL'S FATAL ENDING.

Man Murdered and His Slayer Fatally Stabbed.

New York, Dec. 3.—Frank Tuscani was murdered at Hackensack, N. J., and the man who slew him was then in turn stabbed repeatedly by friends of the victim, receiving what is said cannot fail to be death wounds. It was practically a lynching on the part of Tuscani's friends. The man who is dying is John Gambola of Cherry Hill. Gambola and his brothers, James and Solomon, came to Hackensack to visit friends and spent the afternoon in drinking wine. By evening the dozen or more men were in a highly heated condition. A quarrel arose and Gambola stabbed Tuscani twice in the neck, the latter dying in a few minutes. Some of Tuscani's friends then started to take Gambola to jail but on the way they went to an unfrequented part of the town and stabbed him in a frightful manner. Four Italians were afterward arrested.

HANGED HIMSELF.

Father of a Montana Man Commits Suicide in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 3. — J. J. Bentley hanged himself with strips torn from the portiers in his room at the National hotel. The improvised rope broke from the man's weight. His body was found lying face downward on the floor, the strips twisted about his neck. He was sixty years old. A letter in his possession gave the police a clew as to his identity, and they will communicate with a son, B. T. Bentley, who is thought to live in Missoula, Mont. Little was known of the dead man by the hotel employes. He came to the hotel Wednesday.

MANY ARE DROWNED AT SEA.

Steamer Is Wrecked and Passengers and Crew Go Down.

London, Dec. 3.—A special dispatch from Naples says the steamer St. Marie, trading between Naples and Marseilles, has been wrecked and that forty-five of her passengers and a part of her crew have been lost.

Lebanon, Mo., Dec. 3.—Ex-Gov. J. W. McClurg, aged 88, died here yesterday of hemorrhage of the stomach. He was elected governor of Missouri as a Republican in 1868 and served one term. He was in congress in 1862-8.

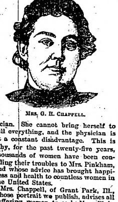
WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician.



MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

Memory of a Benefactor Toasted.

Toasting Sir Francis Drake is an Toasting Sir Thomas tL' etaoin interesting ceremony. The town of Plymouth, Eng., consumes 5,000,000 gallons of water per day, and its first regular supply was given to the town during Sir Francis Drake's mayoralty. Annually the town indulges in the quaint ceremony of toasting his memory, which is done in this way: The pious memory of Sir Francis is drunk in water at the head weir. But then the company drinks in wine, to the sentiment. "May the descendants of him who brought us water never want for wine."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Wonderful Old Lady.

Lord Rosebery's mother, the duchess of Cleveland, is a wonderful old lady. Though she is in her eighty-first year she is still full of energy, and is a delightful companion. The king mentions as an illustration of her activity that she did not indulge her love for travel until she was over seventy years of age, and since then she has made many a journey, including a tour to India, the West Indies and British South Africa. The duchess was married to the late duke of Cleveland in 1854, three years after the death of Lord Dalmeny, Lord Rosebery's father.

AN ENEMY TO DRINK.

One Woman Who Has Done a Great Deal to Put Down This Evil.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 3.—(Special)—When the Independent Order of Good Templars of Minnesota wanted a State Organizer they chose Mrs. Laura J. Smith, of 1217 West 33d Street, this city. The American Anti-Treat League also selected Mrs. Smith as National Organizer. The reason is not far to seek. This gifted woman has devoted her life to a battle against Drink and Drinking Habits. Her influence for good in Minnesota is and has been very far reaching.

About two years ago however, it seemed as if this noble woman would have to give up her philanthropic work. Severe pains in her back and under her shoulder blades, made life a burden and work impossible. Physicians were consulted, and they prescribed for Kidney Disease. Three month's treatment however, failed to give Mrs. Smith any relief. Her husband was much exercised, and cast about him for something that would restore his good wife to health and strength. He heard of the cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and advised her to try them, which she did. She is now a well woman and says:

"Two weeks after I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, I felt much better, and at the end of seven weeks was completely cured. I have had no recurrence of the trouble, but I take a pill off and on, and find that it keeps me in good health."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers at 50 cents a box.

They are easily within the reach of all, and no woman can afford to suffer, when such a simple, and sure Remedy is at hand.

Why Franklin Did Not Write It.

"It has always been a curious puzzle why Franklin, the man of ripe age, of commanding distinction and of approved literary skill, was not selected to write the Declaration instead of Thomas Jefferson, then only 33 years old and comparatively unknown," says John Gilmer Speed in The Saturday Evening Post. "It could not be that Franklin was passed by because he had done everything in his power to avert the war and reconcile the differences between the colonies and the mother country, for all wise men in the colonies did all that honor permitted in that direction until the die was cast. No; it was not a fear of Franklin's earnestness in the cause of the colonies. It was probably the fear of Franklin's humor.

"He was not only the greatest man of his time, but he was one of the greatest humorists of any time. And so his associates were possibly afraid that he would put a joke in the Declaration and passed him by and selected the lank young Virginian with the freckled face.

"As it was, Franklin did have his joke, for when the members of congress were about to sign the Declaration Hancock, whose earnestness is expressed in the bold signature which comes first, said in his own earnest way: 'We must be unanimous. There must be no pulling different ways. We must all hang together.'

"'Yes,' replied Franklin; 'we must hang together, or we shall be pretty sure to hang separately.'"

A Divinity Student Routed.

"One day we were traveling across the plains in the caboose of a freight train," writes Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady of his experiences as "A Missionary in the Great West" in The Ladies' Home Journal. "A young divinity student was with us. He was one of the ambitious kind of divinity students who wreck a parish or two when they begin and finally drift upon the ecclesiastical bargain counter. He was ready to argue about anything with anybody.

"A greasy, dilapidated looking tramp came into the caboose at one of the stations at the end of a division and presently engaged in a heated discussion with the young theologue on the disadvantages of education. He maintained the affirmative—that the less a man knew and the less education he had the happier he was—with so much skill and adroitness and showed such mastery of logic and literature that he routed the poor boy—horse, foot and dragoons—so effectively that the young man rose and went out on the platform to hide his chagrin, leaving the supposed tramp chuckling over his pipe in huge enjoyment at his easy victory.

"The bishop had listened without saying a word, and when the student left he turned to the man and inquired sharply, 'What college do you come from, sir?' 'Yale!' answered the man without thinking. The unlucky admission destroyed the man's argument, for he was a living example of the fallacy of his own proposition."

Europe's City of Crime.

The Italian city of Artena, situated about 40 miles from Rome, is known as the City of Crime. Ever since the sixteenth century every criminal who has escaped from prison or done his time has emigrated to Artena, and today practically every inhabitant is a criminal or the child of criminals. Every family takes the law into its own hands, and it is reported not a day passes without many murders being committed in the streets. The Italian authorities have now come to look upon Artena as hopeless and remark that it is far better that criminals should kill criminals than that innocent persons should be their victims. It is said that on one occasion when 23 murders had been committed in that city in one day the fact was reported in one of the Italian papers in the following terms: "Since our last issue (24 hours before) there have been 23 sudden deaths in Artena," and no further notice of the murders was taken or expected.

Ruskin Didn't Like Hugo.

Did you ever read "The Hunchback of Notre Dame?" I believe it to be simply the most disgusting book ever written by man, and on the whole to have caused more brutality and evil than any other French writing with which I am acquainted. Balzac is sensual, but he is an artist of the highest touch and a philosopher even in his sensuality. Eugene Sue paints virtue as well as vice. Dumas is absurd and useless, but interesting; Beranger blasphemous, but witty; George Sand immoral, but elegant. But for pure, dull, virtueless, stupid, deadly poison read Victor Hugo.—Ruskin.

Public Opinion.

The single snowflake—who cares for it? But a whole day of snowflakes—who does not care for that? Private opinion is weak, but public opinion is almost omnipotent.

THIS IS A MAN'S METHOD.

His Way of Making a Carpet Bargain While His Wife Was Away.

"I want both my upper and lower halls recarpeted," was the remark Charles J. Jones of East Walnut Hills made to a well-known carpet man. "And I'm going to move out of the house until you finish the work! I'll leave the choice and color to you! My wife is out of town, you see, and I want to surprise her upon her return. There is only one condition to this bargain—I must ask you, as we are old friends, to give me a small figure in the carpet."

"All right!" said the carpet man.

And Charles Jones staid away from home for two days, while the carpet man's hirelings banged away with their hammers, and he hugged himself as he thought of the surprise that was in store for his wife when she returned. Last Thursday the carpet man called Jones up by telephone and announced that the carpet was laid.

"It's a dark green!" said the carpet man.

"I'm glad of that!" answered Jones.

"And as small a figure as is consistent with the carpet!" roared the carpet man.

"I'm gladder than ever!" said Jones.

That evening he visited his home and was satisfied that the carpet was a peach. The next morning he met the carpet man.

"How much do I owe you?" inquired Jones.

"It is $98.65," said the carpet dealer.

"What!" yelled Jones. "Where's the small figure you and I agreed on?"

"Why, on the border of the carpet!" said the amazed dealer. "It's a morning glory vine with pink and white flowers! You've got a bargain at that figure!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

HOME LIFE ON THE WANE.

English Hostesses Accused of Being Perpetual Gadabouts.

Slowly, but surely, the pride the English hostesses took in their home, in their reputation for hospitality and in their ability to plan pleasant little entertainments for their friends is passing away. The smart young hostess no longer cares to welcome her guests among her Lares and Penates; it is no longer her earnest desire to display her housewifely genius; no longer her ambition to shine as a "clever little woman who so thoroughly understands just what every one likes."

There are too many irons in society's fire to look after nowadays for her to fritter away time in this fashion. Moreover, people want incessant novelty; they are bored with even good menus, they tire of certain surroundings, they must have everything a little in advance, and as little as possible like anything that obtained a decade, to say nothing of two decades, ago. Thus it is we rush with our friends in unhomelike fashion from restaurant to restaurant, like bona fide travelers; thus it is we inhospitably, one might almost venture to say meanly, ask our friends to share expenses with us in the little pleasures we should once have offered them. The commercial spirit is indeed rampant in us in this advanced age. One almost dreads to think what next must be sacrificed to it and what will be the home life and the English housemother of the next generation.—Ladies' Pictorial.

When You Buy Dollies.

A father was commissioned by his small daughter to buy a dozen little bisque dolls. Her instructions were so many and so detailed that the father found himself hesitating to perform the commission.

"See here, Ethel," he said at last, "I'm afraid I'll make some awful mistake. Don't you think you'd better wait until your cold is better, and then you can go into town some day with mamma and pick out the doll babies for yourself?"

"Oh, no, papa," cried Ethel, "I do so want them right off. And, papa, I'll tell you how to choose them. Just pick each one up and look straight into its eyes, and if it looks at you as if it really and truly loved you, why, you buy it."—New York Sun.

No Flies in Skyscrapers.

"If I was a baldheaded man I would get me an office on one of the upper floors of the tallest skyscraper in town," remarked an attorney. "Why? Because I'd never have to brush a fly from my hairless pate. Flies stay near the ground, seldom getting more than 30 or 40 feet above it. The only flies you get in a skyscraper are the ones that stray up through the interior of the building, and they are mighty few. You will find them on the lower floors, but just keep your eyes open when you are in high buildings, you'll see mighty few of the little pests above the third or fourth floors."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

To Retrench.

"Home is the dearest place on earth," remarked Bilkens to Wilkins.

"Yes," replied Wilkins, "that's why we quit housekeeping and went to board."—Columbus (O.) State Journal.

Mother—Miss Catchem has a lovely voice, and you know it. Why did you ask her to sing for Mr. Richfello?

"Well, Mr. Richfello sits right in range where he can see her face. She looks like a whitewashed chimpanzee when she sings."—Pearson's Weekly.

He Had Her.

It is related that when the young man who afterward became General Fremont ran away with and married Jessie, Tom Benton, the great senator, made terrible threats of what he would do to the young man. He would give him roasts and bullets and hades, to all of which Mrs. Benton quietly remarked, "You had better give him Jessie, my dear."

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent who will cheerfully give rates and information. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from the date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The exact rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until Dec. 24th. Application can be made to him for any future information needed.

Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners.

Special meeting board of county commissioners.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., Nov. 12, 1900.

Pursuant to call dated Oct. 3rd board met in extra session this day.

Meeting call to order by the chairman.

All members present.

Hearing was then had on the following ditch petition:

Petition to establish a ditch, drain or water course.

Petition for a Public Ditch.

To the Board of County Commissioners of the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the drainage ditch, hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a drainage ditch along the following described route in the town of Red Lake Falls in said county of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at the ¼ section corner on the east line of section one, being the NE corner of the SE ¼ of said section one Township 151, Range 44, thence west along the ¼ section line through the center of sections one, two and three and to a point on the quarter section line running east and west through the center of section 4, about 40 rods east of the northwest corner of SW¼ of said section 4, all of said land being in the town of Red Lake Falls, and terminating at said point on the quarter section line running east and west through the centre of said section 4, about 40 rods east of the NW corner of the southwest quarter of said section 4 as its outlet.

Your petitioners further state that there are large tracts of lands lying adjacent to and in the vicinity of the line of said proposed ditch which will be directly and greatly benefited by the construction thereof, said lands being low and wet, and at certain seasons of every year they are covered with water, thereby rendering said lands unproductive and useless: that said water, during portions of every year, becomes stagnant and foul, rendering the atmosphere in the vicinity thereof impure and unwholesome, thereby endangering, injuring and effecting the health of the occupants of said lands and of the public: that for the reasons aforesaid the construction of such ditch is necessary and also for the reason that by the construction thereof there will thereby be removed from off said lands, said waters, thereby promoting the health of the public at large: that the same will be of great benefit to the public highways in the vicinity thereof, by preventing in many places the overflowing of such highways: that large tracts of said lands that are unproductive and useless will thereby be reclaimed and very greatly increased in value, all to the great benefit, utility convenience and welfare of the public, as well as to your petitioners.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter ninety-seven (97), General Laws of Minnesota for 1887, and subsequent amendments thereto.

Virtue Again Rewarded.

"I met a man yesterday," said Mr. Noodleson, trying to make himself agreeable, "who told me that you were an old friend of his."

She did not answer immediately, but after clasping her hands tightly several times and biting her underlip until it nearly bled the beautiful grass widow replied, with forceful mirth:

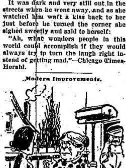
"You mustn't believe all you hear, Mr. Noodleson. I am nobody's 'old' friend."

Half an hour later he suddenly began to laugh with all his might and told her she was the "cleverest girl in the world. Ha, ha, ha! Such a witty thing—that about not being anybody's 'old' friend, you know!"

It was dark and very still out in the streets when he went away, and as she watched him waft a kiss back to her just before he turned the corner she sighed sweetly and said to herself:

"Ah, what wonders people in this world could accomplish if they would always try to turn the laugh right instead of getting mad."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Modern Improvements.



"I see the agent sold yez a carpet sweeper, Mrs. Maginnis. Is it as good as the ould fashioned broom?"

"It is an better, Mrs. Mulduckie. I can knock Maginnis twice as far wid it."—Chicago News.

Mystified.

"Mamma, my birthday comes this year on Monday, doesn't it?"

"Yes, dear."

"And last year it was on Sunday, wasn't it?"

"Yes, dear."

"Did it come on Saturday the year before last?"

"Yes, dear."

"Mamma, how many days in the week was I born on?"—King.

Shown Better by Her Tongue.

"Here is an article in the Sunday paper that says a woman's character can be determined by her nose."

"Well, there may be something in that, but there's a surer way. No one can make a mistake concerning a woman's character if he will look at the noses of other women who meet her. The extent to which they turn up at such times shows just what she is or isn't."—Chicago Times-Herald.

NORSEMEN AT ODDS.

THE PRINCE REGENT OF NORWAY AND SWEDEN IN TROUBLE.

Gustave Is Disliked by the Norwegians, Who Seek Separation—Plausibility of Sweden's Contention—Revival of an Old Quarrel.

The spirit of unrest that sent the Norsemen of old to the ends of the earth—some say to America itself—is again manifesting itself in the ancient kingdom of Norway. The hardy Norwegians, who draw the breath of freedom from their mountains and fiords, are again agitating the question of breaking their unwelcome yoke with Sweden, their sister country.

The present agitation is due to the fact that the king of the dual monarchy, Oscar II, a scholarly and mild mannered man, is ill, and his son, Prince Gustave, has assumed the regency. Gustave is extremely unpopular in the Norwegian moiety of his realm owing to his determined resistance to the demands of the Norwegians for more independence in foreign and other affairs. The Swedes, with Prince Gustave at their head, say that the Norwegians having obtained an ell in having their separate flag granted want a yard and desire the complete separation of the two kingdoms. This they are determined not to grant, for they contend, with great show of reason, that the union of the two kingdoms is all that prevents their sharing the fate of Finland, that of being gobbled up by the Russian bear.

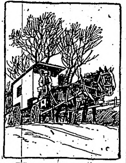
KING OSCAR OF SWEDEN.

Norway and Denmark were united for many centuries as one kingdom until the early part of this century. Sweden was also at one time a part of the union. When the coalition was formed against Napoleon, one of the conditions was that in event of success Sweden and Norway should be united under one king. The Norwegians offered resistance to this plan and elected as king the heir of the old royal line of Sweden. He proved incompetent, and the Swedish king, who was formerly Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte, became king as well of Norway. Each of the two halves of the monarchy retained its own constitution and was in fact autonomous. The union has not proved altogether a peaceable one, and there have been continual threats of secession on the part of the Norwegians. The present king, Oscar II, has been successful in conciliating his rebellious Norwegian subjects, but his heir apparent, Prince Gustave, is a firebrand to them. He has persistently and successfully opposed their desires for greater freedom in foreign affairs and for separation.

HOUSE WAGON AND HEALTH.

Trip of Three Thousand Miles Made by the Farnsworth Family.

Here is a consumptive who has recovered his health in a new way. A year ago when Mr. E. E. Farnsworth left Winfield, Kan., he could hardly walk owing to his weakness and emaciation, whereas now he is the picture of health, brown as an Indian and apparently cured of all his ailments. As a last resort, when he saw that the disease was getting the better of him, he decided to start off on a novel journey. A house wagon was built which for one year was his only home and that of his wife and her father. This was drawn by a pair of horses. The trio covered about 3,000 miles, traversed six states and even entered Mexico. They discovered and investigated some practically unknown cliff dwellings, and not a day's illness marred the success of their journey. When they found a particularly desirable spot, they would remain there until their provisions were exhausted and then move on leisurely.



THE FARNSWORTH HOUSE WAGON.

ANIMALS ASLEEP.

The Attitudes Some of Them Assume During Slumber.

The chimpanzee, as far as I have been able to ascertain, never sleeps upon its back, its favorite position being on its side, with one arm under its head. In this respect it resembles children of from 4 to 10 years of age. The only gorilla which I have had an opportunity of observing also apparently preferred this attitude, but occasionally seemed to sleep comfortably in a crouching position, with its head bowed down between its knees. This latter attitude appears to be the one adopted by nearly all the lower monkeys.

When turned out at pasture, all horses, except those which are crippled by disease or injury, lie down at night with their legs folded beneath their bodies. Some of the short limbed and thick jointed animals, such as the elephant, hippopotamus and rhinoceros, find a difficulty in bending their legs under them after the manner of their more slender kindred. Hence they sleep upon their sides in a piglike attitude.

Bears, as far as I have been able to observe, have no characteristic sleeping attitude, for you see them lying in all sorts of grotesque positions, as if they found one quite as comfortable as another. Indeed, a well favored bear, covered with a good layer of fat and a thick coat of fur, may be said to carry his bed about with him, and any part of his skin will serve either for mattress or coverlet as occasion arises. Nevertheless, the bear, when sound asleep, tends to curl himself up with his nose and paws inward, and this is probably the attitude which in cold climates he adopts when hibernating in his den during the winter season. Kangaroos also appear to be quite indifferent as to the position of their bodies during sleep. Any sunny afternoon at the zoological gardens you may see them sprawling on the straw in all imaginable attitudes. The only things they seem to demand in order to be perfectly comfortable are reasonable warmth and plenty of elbow room.—Dr. Louis Robinson in Pearson's Magazine.

London's Donkey Famine of 1808.

The donkey famine in 1808 was one of the strangest scarcities that ever befell Britain. One cannot eat donkeys, but the dearth of them caused a terrible lot of inconvenience and sent the price of Neddy up to a prohibitive sum. There was an epidemic of disease among the donkeys of the towns, especially those animals belonging to poor people. This so thinned out the donkey roll call that these useful beasts became scarcer than they were ever known to be. It used to be said that no one has ever seen a dead donkey, but the proverb was broken that year—there were and quantity. The price of a good donkey jumped from £6 or £7 to £12 within three weeks, and soon donkeys were scarcely to be had at all.

Costers and other donkey owners held meetings to discuss the situation, but the price rose to £15, and many a poor man was forced to pay it. It was the worst year on record for costermongers. Nobody knows to what price the donkeys would have risen, but an enterprising firm of shippers imported some big freights of donkeys from Spain. These sold like wildfire, and in a fortnight the donkey trade was at its old level. Meanwhile the country districts had been emptied of donkeys to supply the town.—London Answers.

The Speed of British Railways.

The high grade rates of the big railways in Great Britain are shown in a table prepared by the Westminster Gazette. There is not a 60 miles an hour run in the lot, but the Caledonian heads the table with a 59 miles per hour run from Forfar to Perth, distance 32½ miles. The Great Northern comes next as a north going line with 55.3 miles from Petersborough to Finsbury Park. The biggest thing the Southwestern does is 54.3 miles from Okehampton to Yeoford junction—14" miles' run in 16 minutes. The big efforts of the Great Western are made from Paddington to Bath at 54.2 and to Leamington at the rate of 54.3. The Midland has a spurt from Kettering to Nottingham at 53.5, while the premier line, the London and Northwestern, enjoys an historic run from Penrith to Crewe, 123¼ miles, at the rate of 53.0 or a journey run of 2 hours 17 minutes.

True Sports Never Die.

Bicycling is almost as old as the present generation, golf is far older, though Americans in general seem not to have heard of it till recently; football was played in China more than 1,500 years ago and in younger nations ever since they heard of it, and archery and horsemanship hark back to prehistoric man and are instinctive in millions. These sports cannot die or even be killed, nor can any others that are liked; they are as irrepressible and immortal as the human impulse to get out of doors and do something.—Saturday Evening Post.

"Three Days Too Late.

The Duke of Cumberland, whose reconciliation with the kaiser is said to have taken place, is a man of whom English people know little, though he might now have been the first personage in the empire had his father been born a week earlier than he was. He missed the throne of England by three days, having been born on May 2" 1819, exactly 70 hours after Queen Victoria. Had the duke's father been born before the queen he would have been king of England instead of merely king of Hanover.

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

An English Description of Our Men and Officers In Action.

I think if there had been no fighting all the foreign observers would have gone back to their homes with a very poor opinion of the efficiency of the American troops. Luckily for General Chaffee and his soldiers there was fighting.

When you see an American private advancing under fire, you begin to think there is something in the idea that the fighting unit of the future is the individual. Private Silas P. Holt acts by himself, for himself. He and his companions make for a common objective not like stiff trained soldiers, but like panthers stalking a prey. Their eyes flash, their lithe bodies swing forward. There are murder and deadly intentness in every movement. When the American soldier lies down to fire, he does so with the intention of killing somebody. Most troops fire not at the enemy, but in the direction of the enemy. Not so the American.

> Each man drew his watchful breath slow taken
> 'tween the teeth;
> Trigger and eye and ear a-cock, knit brow and > hard drawn lips.

That is a picture of the American soldier firing on his foe. But allied to their feline stealthiness the Americans in battle have a most reckless courage. At times they expose themselves with a strange contempt for death. An officer will take chances no European would care to take. The field battery was generally to be found in places where no one read in tactics would have dared to put it. General Chaffee and his staff always rode where the enemy was most likely to see and shoot at them.

Young and inexperienced correspondents were warned by older hands not to go during an action near prominent buildings, large graves or the American staff.—Taku Cor. London Telegraph.

Physicians and the Hall of Fame.

The Hall of Fame farce should give an excellent subject for some opera bouffe writer. It is plain that the judges have not been chosen for their fitness, have not taken their work seriously, have not been guided by a high and dignified ideal, but have been ruled by class prejudices, local prides and fantastic superficiality. They have thought of the word famous as indicating the person the most talked about, most read or that has happened to get himself before the popular attention. Hardly one judge seems to have asked himself who has best deserved fame, not one has inquired who has done the most good to his fellow men. The name of no woman is thought worthy of a place.

Then consider the blundering crudity itself of wishing for a Hall of Fame. The affair can have but one effect—that is, to inspire the young and ambitious to secure fame by the same means as these famous men have done. But the ethics, the religion of all noble action, is not to seek to do that which will bring human applause and renown, but that which will be right, prevent evil and better human life. Not a physician is to have his name in the New York Hall of Fame, and it is a matter of congratulation. And yet there have been a thousand physicians who have done a thousand times more good to their fellow men than many that are likely to be included, for instance, Edgar Allan Poe or Daniel Boone.—Philadelphia Medical Journal.

A Dress Chart.

Men, who are likely to worry over questions of dress that arise in the complicated social life of New York may find every point settled for them on a new chart. This mentions first the occasions on which formal dress is necessary and then under the various subheadings, such as weddings, afternoon teas and the more or less ceremonious occasions, treats of the kind of coats, trousers, cravats, gloves or jewelry to be worn at these particular times. Informal dress is treated with the same thoroughness, and occasions included under this head are stag or club dinners, business hours and all athletic pursuits such as golf and bicycling. From an attentive study of this chart it is possible to get an authoritative expression on every detail of every kind of dress. Whether gold studs or mother of pearl should be worn at a certain time with evening dress, whether the gloves should be smooth or rough and whether they should be gray or brown are all explained in such systematic fashion that the man who is dressing in the greatest haste may make no mistake in any point if he only keeps this authoritative chart by the side of his mirror.—New York Sun.

The Earth.

The measurement of Mother Earth's exact size and figure is a monster feat of engineering just completed by Uncle Sam. It has cost him nearly 30 years of constant effort and fully $500,000.

The honor of announcing to humanity its most accurate knowledge as to just how large a mass is our great spinning top and just what is its form and shape falls solely to the surveyors and computers of our coast and geodetic survey.

Mother Earth's diameter through her equator is 7,926 miles; her height from pole to pole, 7,899 miles. In other words, she is broader than she is tall.—New York Telegram.

Woman the Weaker.

David S. Sage and wife of Lebanon, Ills., were killed in a storm four years ago. In a suit for a settlement of the estate of $10,000 the question arose which had died first. If Sage, then his wife's relatives would be entitled to her award, consisting of dower and homestead. If his wife died first, then her relatives would be entitled to nothing. There was no way of proving which had died first, and the court held that since woman is weaker than man Mrs. Sage must have died first.

Auditor Dunn Speaks Plainly.

In last week's issue of his Princeton Union, State Auditor Dunn writes upon an important question in the following plain language:

The election table conveys the information that there are 261 asses in Mille Lacs county who voted "no" on the amendment to section 6, article 8 of the state constitution. Why in the name of common sense should any sensible man vote against the amendment? Will one of the intelligent(?) 261 who voted "no" please give his reason for so voting? The amendment simply provided that the permanent school fund could be loaned to villages, towns, counties, cities or school districts on easier terms than heretofore. Under the law at present an amount equal to seven per cent of the realty valuation of a school district, town, etc. can be borrowed and at a rate of not less than four per cent. The amendment provided that an amount equal to fifteen per cent of the reality could be borrowed at a rate of not less than three per cent: The state loans its permanent school fund to other states—Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Delaware and Massachusetts—at a rate of three per cent. Why charge our own citizens four per cent? Again, I ask will any ass in Mille Lacs or any other county who voted against the amendment please advance a single intelligent reason in support of his action? In all probability the amendment is defeated as it required a majority of all the votes cast at the election to adopt, and thousands failed to vote either for or against the proposed amendment.

The boarders of the Hotel Markham will give a grand ball on Friday evening December 7th which promises to eclipse anything in this line gotten up for years. Invitations will be sent out and a fine program of dances consisting of 24 numbers have been arranged that will suit everybody. Music will be furnished by the Red Lake Falls orchestra.

The dance given at the Hotel St. Hilaire last Thursday evening under the auspices of the Cornet Band was a success in every sense of the word. Fully fifty couple were present and all testified of having the best kind of a time. The grand march was called promptly at nine o'clock and was ledd off by the newly married couple Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Adams. Supper was served at midnight after which dancing resumed and kept up until an early hour in the morning. The newly organized orchestra furnished good music.

Here is the way fraternities are caught occasionally and no one is to blame—least of all the dead member. Hermingilde Fontaine made application to become a member of Camp No. 8776, M. W. of A., Valley Falls, R. I., November 20, 1900. He was examined by the physician October 22; his application was approved by the head physician October 26; his benefit certificate was issued October 31; he was adopted November 3; he took sick November 5, and died November 12, of typhoid fever and jaundice, leaving a certificate for $1,000 payable to his wife Rosana. Mr. Fontaine, as far as could be ascertained, was an excellent "risk," of splendid physique, and measuring up to every medical requirement.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent

The death of Senator Davis, of Minn., is sincerely mourned by his colleagues regardless of party. As Senator Martin of Va., truly said of him: "In the Senate his opinion was as highly regarded by the minority as by his own party." As chairman of the committee on Foreign Relations, Senator Davis personally drew up the declaration of war against Spain which congress adopted and later as one of the Peace Commissioners he helped to negotiate the treaty of peace with Spain. The appointment of a successor to serve until the legislature of Minnesota fills the vacancy is in the hands of Gov. Lind, but it is not known in Washington whether he will appoint a democrat or a republican, although some think that the honor may go to ex-Representative Charles A. Towne. The legislature will, of course, elect a republican in January. The same legislature will also elect a successor to Senator Nelson, who is willing to succeed himself. This will add another to the unusual number of legislatures that will elect two U. S. Senators at the same session.

SHEVLIN WOULD DO.

The Present Republican National Committeeman Would Make an Ideal Successor for Senator Davis.

Notwithstanding there is a full realization in the public mind of the great loss to the state and nation sustained in the death of Senator Davis, there is nevertheless considerable interest and speculation as to who will be chosen as his successor by the next legislature. It is probable there will be many candidates for the honor, but there is in Crookston today a man who if he could be induced to enter the contest would become a prominent factor. We refer to T. H. Shevlin the present Republican National Committeman.

While comparatively new in politics Mr. Shevlin demonstrated in the campaign just closed that he could bring to bear upon the work of organizing and conducting a great political campaign the same rare executive ability that he has previously shown in conducting his extensive business enterprise. It is not known that Mr. Shevlin has any desire for public life, but if he should be persuaded to enter the running and would bring his ability, energy and talent for organizing to bear upon the contest, he would stand an excellent show of capturing this great prize. In the northern part of the state especially, where he is well known and has extensive interests, would he develop much strength among the members of the next legislature, nearly all of whom know him personally and recognize his ability and fitness.—Crookston Times.

From Farm, Stock and Home.

Being elected to office is not the only way to be honored, "act well your part" has something to do with it.

As a rule, there is more profit in the products that walk off the farm than in those that have to be carried off.

The soil goes into its winter rest well soaked, any way, and that is believed to be a promise of good crops the next season.

European countries are trying to get rid of their beet-sugar bounties. They better send for the Michigan supreme court.

F. S. & H. introduces to its readers no business men who are not worthy of confidence and patronage. The papers are rare that can truthfully say as much.

The farm should be something more than a workshop, it should be a business establishment, and the more skillfully the business is done the greater the profit.

Some of these days sharpers will be advertising "pedigreed" prairie chickens at fancy prices; and they will be moved to do so by the success in selling pedigreed Belgian hares!

It has been well demonstrated that the best potatoes, containing the least water and the most starch, are realized when grown in a system of rotation, with potatoes from three to four years apart.

The price of meats to consumers was advanced recently by the meat combine and by a singular coincidence the price of live stock fell off the same day! But that's all right, the prosperity of the people can stand a harder strain than that!

At An Inauspicious Moment.

"No," said the bookkeeper, "I don't get that vacation. I met my employer coming back from his summer outing laden with golf sticks and various baggage, and accompanied by his four girls and little boy. I told him I needed rest."

"He looked at me hard for a minute and then exclaimed: You don't need rest. You haven't been away on a vacation."

The man was right. After a long vacation filled with pleasure and excitement, one often returns to work tired out and run down in health. Traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge.

Few people realize the immense traffic of the Brooklyn bridge. Not less than 7,000,000 people cross it during the year, most of them on the trolley cars, which run at half-minute intervals. The terminus of nearly all the Brooklyn street railways is now on the New York side of the bridge, so that it is unnecessary for their patrons to change cars upon reaching the Brooklyn side, and the same plan will be adopted for the new bridge.

The Literature of the Chinese.

Chinese literature is so extensive that a catalogue of the books in the four imperial libraries of the present dynasty classifies and briefly describes no less than 93,000 books, and itself fills 200 volumes. Although some Western writers have described the collection as a whole as a vast library of Oriental conceit and a dreary wilderness of words, the Abbe Remusat, a genuine student of the Chinese language, wrote enthusiastically regarding their charm, saying hme found in them "eloquence and poety, enriched by the beauty of a picturesque language, preserving to imagination all its colors. The description is a very accurate one, too.—Success.

WOES OF WORKERS.

The American man or woman is industrious. Our leisure class is small, our working world very large. Many of our leading citizens of great wealth are hard workers. Our laboring classes are found in herds and hordes in the "hives of industry." What is all this work for? In most cases it is for daily bread, in many for maintenance of others. Great numbers also work to acquire wealth. Some for great commercial prominence. Some to preserve intact a splendid inheritance. Necessity, generosity and ambition are the inspiration of all classes of industry, and the object of every one falls to the ground when ill-health attacks him.

Maintaining health is the most vital thing in the world for workers of every class, and the usefulness of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as a strengthener of the constitutional and vital powers, is beyond all question. This great remedy enters into partnership with Nature and helps human beings do their work without giving up to premature decay. The strain of work is on the minds of some, on the bodies of others, but the nourishing of either, or both, is in the nerves and blood. Nervura acts directly on the fountains of health and its strengthening power is wonderful.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA
for the Blood and Nerves.

What does the worker do when some chronic trouble manifests itself? He takes some stimulant or something which is designed for temporary effect, and simply weakens his already overworked system. How different from this is the work of Nervura! How beautiful its support to the natural powers! Without shock of any kind its purely vegetable elements seek out the weak spots and build them up. Immediately the circulation of the blood improves and the sluggish elements are expelled. The nerves are quieted, the quality of the blood is enriched and the new and strengthening tide communicates itself to every muscle of the body.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, Electrician for the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:

"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not eat regularly, and got only a few hours' sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed.

"I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give all health seekers his counsel free of charge. His office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, and his advice may be secured by personal call or by letter through the mail; no charge is made in either case. The worn-out in body, mind, or sexual powers will get prompt help from Dr. Greene. His advice is absolutely confidential and is free to all.

YOUNG MAN'S MANNERS.

Society Asks That He Behave Well, and Then His Path Will Be Smooth.

Society asks little of a young man except to behave well. If he be manly in looks, if he has a good manner, is civil to his elders, if he has any little gift of entertaining—any "parlor tricks"—if he sends a few flowers occasionally, looks pleasant and is polite, his way will be smooth to success—always providing that he is really a gentleman. He never joins her on a thoroughfare unless the friendship be an established one and only with her permission—nor will he stand and converse with her. It is provincial to walk "sandwiched" between two women, to stare, or look after any one who has passed. In public conveyances a man does not pay a woman's fare unless he is her escort, except in an emergency, when he must ask if he may. Introductions are rarely made in public places or conveyances. A man precedes a woman when entering a theater or public place. In a church the lady goes first. He may precede her up a public staircase, but in a private house in ascending and descending, he follows. In picture galleries, elevators in public buildings, hotel and theater corridors, they being thoroughfares, a man retains his hat. In a hotel he removes it if women are present. In a lady bows to a man in a restaurant he rises slightly from his seat in acknowledgment. When he is with a party, if a lady with her escort stops to speak to his friends he rises and remains standing until she passes on. He also rises if a man is introduced to him when with a stag party. If a bachelor show some little hospitality it advances him much in favor. If he has attractive rooms, or has anything to show, he may give an afternoon tea or a chafing dish supper. Simplicity is in order. A bachelor's entertainment is usually regarded in the light of a frolic and his efforts indulgently considered. A bachelor may live where he likes without loss of social position, if he belong to one good club, which he may only use for the address on his cards and note-paper.—Ladies' Home Journal.

MARVELOUS MECHANISM.

Automatons That Have Excited the Wonder of Many.

Some years ago a jeweler of Boulogne, France, constructed a wonderful automatic conjurer. This figure, correctly dressed in black, performed various sleight of hand tricks with remarkable dexterity, and when it was applauded gracefully saluted the spectators to the right and left. One of its tricks was the following: It struck a table several times, and made an egg come out of it. It then blew upon the latter, when out of it came a bird that flapped its wings and sang, and afterward entered the egg again. This, however, was nothing as compared with the automatic fly, manufactured by John Miller, and which flew around the table during a dinner and alighted upon the hand of its owner and manufacturer, to the great astonishment of the guests. Another wonderful piece of mechanism was a minute coach, to which were harnessed several horses, and which rolled over the table. Upon starting the coachman cracked his whip and the horses began to prance, and then became quiet and started off on a trot. The coach stopped and the lackey jumped from the seat, and, opening the door, handed out a handsomely dressed lady, who saluted and then re-entered the coach. The lackey closed the door and jumped up the box, the whip snapped and the horses galloped off. The famous mechanical flute player was a life-long figure, standing by the side of a broken column, upon which it slightly leaned. It was capable of playing a dozen different airs with remarkable ease. To effect this result, there was a system of weights which actuated a bellows placed in the interior of the automaton and through an invisible tube forced air to the flute, where it acted in the usual way upon the stopple of the opening. In order to obtain the modulations and consequently a complete air, the fingers of the automaton were movable and closed the holes of the flute hermetically when at rest. The fingers were moved by wires and cords that were tautened and relaxed by the play of a toothed cylinder.

The Arctic Expeditions.

It was expected that the Windward would reach St. Johns by the middle of September, but as she started late and had some trouble with her machinery, some delay is to be looked for, says the Philadelphia Times. Still the report of her arrival is anxiously watched for, as she is expected to bring news not only of Peary, but also of Capt. Sverdrup and Dr. Stein. Lieut. Peary is supposed to have established a depot at Cape Hecla, the most northern point of Grinnell Land, at about 82 degrees north latitude, and to have made from there a dash for the pole. At least this it was understood was his intention. Word from him is consequently awaited with some impatience. Capt. Sverdrup, who is on board the Fram with a crew of twelve men, intended rounding the northern boundary of Greenland, coming down its unknown east side to Cape Bismarck. The expedition under Dr. Robert Stein of the United States Geographical Survey, who is accompanied by Mr. Leopold Kann of Cornell university and Mr. Samuel Warmbath of Harvard university, is said to have been poorly equipped and to have been left in a dangerous position.

Origin of the Term "Bonanza."

The word "bonanza" is of Spanish origin and a nautical term, meaning "fair weather at sea." In Matthew viii., 26, we read that after the Lord rebuked the wind and the sea "there came a good, great calm," which last words in the Spanish version are rendered by "bonanza." It is easy to understand how the word came into its figurative use as meaning a happy calm and good hope after a weary stretch. The "bonanza kings" were James Clair Flood, W. S. O'Brien, John W. Mackay and James G. Fair, four men of Irish parentage, who acquired vast fortunes from the gold and silver mines on the Pacific coast. They had various imitators and successors, who shared the names, but these four were the only original bonanza kings.

IT CAME FROM FRANCE.

American Beauty Is Not Really an American Rose, After All, According to a Philadelphia Gardener.

The American Beauty, hailed all over the country as the real American flower, is not an American bloom at all, according to the head gardener of Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia. Of it he says:

"The American Beauty was discovered in France. A Washington florist saw one in a private collection, bought it for $1 and propagated it in the United States. He gave it its present name and really introduced it in this country, where its vogue is still immense. It is really the queen of roses; its odor, its beautiful red, its symmetry and its long life makes it a great favorite. It is an uncertain rose, however; no one can tell when it will bloom, nor in what quantities. That and the long stems demanded, which destroy the bushes, account for its high price."

Holidays for Danish Boys.

There is a pretty custom in vogue in Denmark. During the summer holidays an arrangement is made by which little Danes from town and country change places. The parents of town children send their little folks off to the country and receive in exchange country children. The result is that the town children are strengthened and gladdened with country air and sights, while the little rustics enjoy the pleasures of town life and the festivals which are for their benefit. This exchange system results in 10,000 children from Copenhagen getting a country holiday and another 10,000 are brightened up by a visit to the Danish capital.

Mr. Suburb—Long? It's too short. When I take the train in the morning, I know I've got to pitch in and work like a horse the moment the train arrives in the city. That makes the ride seem too short, doesn't it?

"I presume it does. But how about the ride back?"

MRS. F. J. LYNCH, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, 324 South Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering women as it cures quickly. I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."

Chronic Coughs and Colds Are Catarrhal Diseases.

Catarrh Is the Continual Scourge of Christendom.

Catarrh hovers ominously over every city, and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient.

It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breathing of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded form of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral, and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid.

Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting, the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison the kiss of the fondest lovers, and thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste.

Like the plague-stricken Egyptians a cry of distress has gone out from every household, and the mildew of woe clings to every hearthstone.

Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and finishes its fiendish work in heart disease and consumption.

No tissue, function, or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult of cure is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages. Is it therefore any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna are so lavish in their praise of this remedy? That the discovery of Peruna has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

As a drug store in this age of the world is incomplete without Peruna, it can be obtained anywhere with directions for use. A complete guide for the prevention and cure of catarrh and all diseases of winter, sent free by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

A Lucky Conductor.

According to a Rome correspondent of the LYondon Express, a conductor on the enetiaVn electric railroad named Nicol Cicchino has just had a great stroke of luck.

In July, 1898, he found, in the Via San Lorenzo, a draft for $50,500, on the Marseilles Land Bank, payable to bearer in gold. It was signed "Attanasio."

Cicchino deposited the check with the authorities, awaiting the appearance of the owner to claim his legal 10 per cent.

The owner, however, has never appeared, and a few weeks since Nicola received an official notification that the certificate, having never been claimed, was now, by law, his property.

M'KINLEY TO CONGRESS

THE PRESIDENT REVIEWS THE NATION'S AFFAIRS.

Annual Message Is Read in Both Houses of Congress—Various Important Questions Are Discussed—Attitude of the Government in the Chinese Difficulty Is Explained—Financial Condition of the Government Is Said to Be Most Satisfactory—Policy Regarding the Philippines Is Set Forth—Porto Rican Affairs Considered—Business of the Various Departments Reviewed.

The following is a synopsis covering the most important points contained in the president's message:

In opening, the president says:

At the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new century you begin the last session of the Fifty-sixth congress with evidences on every hand of individual prosperity and with proof of the growing strength and increasing power for good of republican institutions. Your countrymen will join you in felicitation that American liberty is more firmly established than ever before, and that love for it, and the determination to preserve it are more universal than at any former period of our history."

The president then refers to the wonderful growth and development of the country during the century just closing. The population in 1800 was 5,308,483. To-day it is 76,304,709.

In our foreign relations, says the president, the dominant question has been the treatment of the Chinese problem. Our relations with all other countries have been happy.

The president goes into the Chinese question at great length. The history of the outbreak, familiar to all readers, is narrated in detail. The subsequent landing of the troops of the allied powers are the events which succeeded are fully set forth.

The president then continues: "The policy of the United States through all this trying period was clearly announced and scrupulously carried out. A circular note to the powers, dated July 3, proclaimed our attitude. Treating the condition in the north as one of virtual anarchy, in which the great provinces of the south and southwest had no share, we regarded the local authorities in the latter quarters as representing the Chinese people with whom we sought to remain in peace and friendship. Our declared aims involved no war with the Chinese nation. We adhered to the legitimate office of rescuing the imperial legation, obtaining redress for wrongs already suffered, securing, wherever possible, the safety of American life and property in China, and preventing a spread of the disorders or their recurrence. As was then said, 'the policy of the government of the United States is to seek a solution which may bring about permanent safety and peace to China, preserve Chinese territorial and administrative entity, protect all rights guaranteed to friendly powers by treaty and international law, and safeguard for the world the principle of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese empire.' Faithful to these protestations, which, as it proved, reflected views and purposes of the other cooperating governments, all our efforts have been directed towards ending the anomalous situation in China by negotiations for a settlement at the earliest possible moment. As soon as the sacred duty of relieving our legation and its dependents was accomplished we withdrew from active hostilities, leaving our legation under an adequate guard at Pekin, as a channel of negotiation and settlement—a course adopted by others of the interested parties. Overtures of the empowered representatives of the Chinese emperor have been considerately entertained. The Russian proposition, looking to the restoration of the imperial power in Pekin has been accepted as in full consonance with our own desires, for we have held and hold that effective reparation for wrongs suffered, and an enduring settlement that will make their recurrence impossible can best be brought about under an authority which the Chinese nation reverences and obeys. While so doing we forego no jot of our undoubted right to exact exemplary and deterrent punishment of the responsible authors and abettors of the criminal acts through which we and other nations have suffered grievous injury. The general basis of negotiations formulated by the government of the French republic have been accepted with certain reservations as to details, made necessary by our own circumstances, but, like similar reservations by other powers, open to discussion in the progress of the negotiations. The matter of indemnity for our wronged citizens is a question of grave concern. Measured in money alone, a sufficient reparation may prove beyond the ability of China to meet. All the powers concur in emphatic disclaimers of any purpose of aggrandizement through the dismemberment of the empire. I am disposed to take due compensation that may be made in part by increased guarantees of security of foreign rights and immunities, and, most important of all, by the opening of China to the equal commerce of all the world. These views have been and will be earnestly advocated by our representatives. The government of Russia has put forward a suggestion that, in the event of protracted divergence of views in relation to indemnities, the matter be relegated to the court of arbitration at The Hague. I favorably incline to this, believing that high tribunal of arbitration could not fail to reach a solution no less conducive to the stability and enlarged prosperity of China itself than immediately beneficial to the powers."

The message states that the relations with the various nations are cordial. Minor diplomatic negotiations with several European and Central and South American countries are progressing satisfactorily or have been happily concluded. Good will prevails in our relations with the German emperor. Our friendly relations with Great Britain continue. The important questions arising out of the war in South Africa and our policy in relation thereto are fully explained.

Our claims upon the government of the sultan for reparation for injuries suffered by American citizens in Armenia and elsewhere give promise of early and satisfactory settlement. His majesty's good disposition in this regard has been evinced by the issuance of an order for rebuilding the American college at Harpoot.

The president announces that formal ratifications of the convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes have been received at The Hague from sixteen powers. In accordance with Article xxiii. of the convention the president announces the appointment as arbitrators of ex-President Harrison, Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, Hon. J. W. Griggs and Hon. George Gray.

On the subject of reciprocity treaties the president says: "Since my last communication to the congress on this subject special commercial agreements under the third section of the tariff act have been proclaimed with Portugal, with Italy and with Germany. Commercial conventions under the general limitations of the fourth section of the same act have been concluded with Nicaragua, with Ecuador, with the Dominican republic, with Great Britain on behalf of the Island of Trinidad and with Denmark on behalf of the Island of St. Croix. These will be early communicated to the senate. Negotiations with other governments are in progress for the improvement and security of our commercial relations." Continuing this subject, the president says: "The policy of reciprocity so manifestly rests upon the principles of international equity and has been so repeatedly approved by the people of the United States, that there ought to be no hesitation in either branch of the congress in giving to it full effect."

Touching on the subject of an interoceanic canal, the president says that this important matter has assumed a new phase. He refers to the forfeit of the contract of the Maritime Canal company, and explains the reason therefor. Continuing, the president says:

"Overtures for a convention to effect the building of a canal under the auspices of the United States are under consideration. In the meantime the views of the congress upon the general subject in the light of the report of the commission appointed to examine the comparative merits of the various trans-isthmian ship canal projects may be awaited."

Taking up the question of finances, the president says:

"It is gratifying to be able to state that the surplus revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1900, were $79,527,060.18. For the six preceding years we had only deficits, the aggregate of which from 1894 to 1899, inclusive, amounted to $233,022,991.14. The receipts for the year from all sources, exclusive of postal revenues, aggregated $567,240,851.89, and exports for all purposes except for the administration of the postal department, aggregated $487,713,791.71. The receipts from customs were $233,164,871.16, an increase over the preceding years of $27,036,389.41. The receipts from internal revenue were $295,327,926.76, an increase of $21,890,765.25 over 1899. The receipts from year. It is gratifying also to note that miscellaneous sources were $38,748,053.97, as against $36,394,976.92 for the previous year. It is gratifying also to note that during the year a considerable reduction is shown in the expenditures of the government. The war department expenditures for the fiscal year 1900 were $134,774,767.78, a reduction of $95,066,486.69 over those of 1899. In the navy department the expenditures were $55,953,077.72 for the year 1900, as against $63,942,104.25 for the preceding year, a decrease of $7,983,026.53. In the expenditures on account of Indians there was a decrease in 1900 over 1899 of $2,630,604.38, and in the civil and miscellaneous expenses for 1900 there was a reduction of $13,418,065.74. Because of the excess of revenues over expenditures the secretary of the treasurer was enabled to apply bonds and other securities to the sinking fund to the amount of $56,544,556.06. The details of the sinking fund are set forth in the report of the secretary of the treasury, to which I invite attention. The secretary of the treasury estimates that the receipts for the current fiscal year will aggregate $580,000,000, and the expenditures $500,000,000, leaving an excess of revenues over expenditures of $80,000,000. The present condition of the treasury is one of undoubted strength. It will be the duty, as I am sure it will be the disposition of the congress, to provide whatever further legislation is needed to insure the continued parity under all conditions between our two forms of metallic money, silver and gold. Our surplus revenues have permitted the secretary of the treasury since the close of the fiscal year to call in the funded loan of 1891 in the sum of $25,364,500. To and including Nov. 30, $23,458,100 of these bonds have been paid. This sum, together with the amount which may accrue from further redemptions under the call will be applied to the sinking fund."

The president says that the beneficial effect of the new financial act, so far as it relates to the modification of the national banking act, is already apparent. In concluding this subject, he says:

"A large increase in national bank note circulation has resulted from the act, which permits national banks to issue circulation notes to the par value of the United States bonds deposited as security instead of only 90 per cent thereof, as heretofore. The increase in circulating notes from March 14 to Nov. 30 is $77,889,570. The party in power is committed to such legislation as will better make the currency responsive to the varying needs of business at all seasons and in all sections."

"Our foreign trade," says the president, "shows a remarkable record of commercial and industrial progress. The total of imports and exports, for the first time in the history of the country, exceeded $2,000,000,000. These exports are greater than they have ever been before, the total for the fiscal year 1900 being $1,394,483,082, an increase over 1899 of $167,459,780. The imports for the year amounted to $849,941,184, an increase over 1899 of $152,792,695. The increase is largely in materials for manufacture, and is in response to the rapid development of manufacturing in the United States."

The president recommends that congress, at its present session, reduce the internal revenue taxes imposed to meet the expenses of the war with Spain in the sum of $30,000,000. This reduction should be secured by the remission of those taxes which experience has shown to be the most burdensome to the industries of the people. He specially urges that there be included, in whatever reduction is made, the legacy tax and bequests for public uses of a literary, educational or charitable character.

In again urging immediate action by the congress on measures to promote American shipping and foreign trade, the president directs attention to the recommendations on the subject in previous messages.

On the subject of trusts, the president says: "Restraint upon such combinations as are injurious and which are within federal jurisdiction should be promptly applied by the congress."

Touching the Philippine question, the president adverts to his former declaration to use the authority vested in him to uphold the sovereignty of the United States in those distant lands, as in all other lands where our flag rightfully floats. He has steadily pursued the purpose thus declared. Our forces have successfully controlled the greater part of the islands, overcoming the organized forces of the insurgents and carrying order and administrative regularity to all quarters. What opposition remains is, for the most part, scattered. Desiring to bring about a stable administration of affairs as early as possible, the president says, he appointed for that purpose the commission headed by Judge Taft. "This commission," says the president, "is composed of eminent citizens, representing the diverse geographical and political interests of the country and bringing to its task the ripe fruits of long and intelligent service in educational, administrative and judicial careers, has made great progress form the outset. As early as Aug. 21, 1900, it submitted a preliminary report, which will be laid before congress, and from which it appears that already the good effects of returning order are felt; that business, interrupted by hostilities, is improving as peace extends; that a larger area is under sugar cultivation than ever before; that the customs receipts are greater than at any time during Spanish rule; that economy and efficiency in the military administration have created a surplus fund of $6,000,000, available for needed public improvements; that a stringent civil service law is in preparation; that railroad communications are expanding, opening up rich districts, and that a comprehensive system of education is being evolved. Later reports from the commission show a yet more encouraging advance toward insuring the benefits of liberty and good government to the Filipinos, in the interests of humanity and with the aim of building up an enduring, self-supporting and self-administering community in those Far Eastern seas."

"I have, upon another occasion," continues the president, "called the Filipinos 'the wards of the nation.' Our obligation as guardian was not lightly assumed; it must not be otherwise than honestly fulfilled, aiming, first of all, to benefit those who have come under our fostering care. It is our duty so to treat them that our flag may be no less beloved in the mountains of Luzon and the fertile zones of Mindanao and Negros than it is at home; that there as here, it shall be the revered symbol of liberty, enlightenment and progress in every avenue of development."

"The civil government for Porto Rico, provided for by the act of congress approved April 12, 1900, is in successful operation, according to the president. The courts have been established. The governor and his associates, working intelligently and harmoniously, are meeting with commendable success. On the 6th of November a general election was held in the island for members of the legislature, and the body elected has been called to convene on the first Monday in December. He recommends that legislation be enacted by the congress conferring upon the secretary of the interior supervision over the public lands in Porto Rico."

TThe president renews his recommendation as to the necessity for cable communication with Hawaii, with an extension to Manila. The territorial government of Hawaii is in full operation, and conditions on the island are highly satisfactory.

On the 25th day of July, 1900, the president says, he directed that a call be issued for an election in Cuba for members of a constitutional convention to frame a constitution, as a basis for a stable and independent government in the island. The election was held on the 15th of September, and the convention assembled on the 15th of November, 1900, and is now in session. When the session concludes its labors the president says he will transmit to the congress the constitution as framed by the convention, for its consideration and for such action as it may deem advisable.

The president next takes up the question of an increase in the army. On this subject he says: "The present strength of the army is 100,000 men—65,000 regulars and 35,000 volunteers. Under the act of March 2, 1899, on the 30th of June next, the present volunteer force will be discharged, and the regular army will be reduced to 2,4447 officers and 20,025 enlisted men. In Porto Rico we have reduced the garrisons to 1,636, which includes 896 native troops. There is no room for further reduction there. We will be required to keep a considerable force in the Philippine islands for some time to come. From the best information obtainable we shall need there for the immediate future from 50,000 to 60,000 men. I am sure the number may be reduced as the insurgents shall come to acknowledge the authority of the United States, of which there are assuring indications. It must be apparent that we will require an army of about 60,000, and that during the present conditions in Cuba and the Philippines the president should have authority to increase the force to the present number of 100,000.

"The continued and rapid growth of the postal service," the president says, "is a sure index of the great and increasing business activity of the country. Its most striking new development is in the extension of rural free delivery. This service ameliorates the isolation of farm life, conduces to good roads and quickens and extends the dissemination of general information. Experience thus far has tended to allay the apprehension that it would be so expensive as to forbid its general adoption or make it a serious burden."

The president approves the recommendations of the secretary of the navy for new vessels, and for additional officers and men, which the required increase in the navy makes necessary. He commends the establishment of a national naval reserve and of the grade of vice admiral.

Pension matters were touched on briefly. The president says; The act of May, 1900, among other things, provides for an extension of income to widows pensioned under said act to $250 per annum. The secretary of the interior believes that by the operations of this act the number of persons pensioned under it will increase, and the increased annual payment for pensions will be between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

In conclusion the president says:

"In our great prosperity we must guard against the danger it invites of extravagance in government expenditures and appropriations; and the chosen representatives of the people will, I doubt not, furnish an example in their legislation of that wise economy which in a season of plenty husbands for the future. In this era of great business activity and opportunity caution is not untimely. It will not abate, but strengthen confidence. It will not retard but promote legitimate industrial and commercial expansion. Our growing power brings with it temptations and perils requiring constant vigilance to avoid. It must not be used to invite conflicts, nor for oppression, but for the more effective maintenance of these principles of equality and justice upon which our institutions and happiness depend. Let us keep always in mind that the foundation of our government is liberty; its superstructure, peace."

LOST HIS TEMPER.

Result Was He Found Just What He Was Looking For.

The fur salesman was holding up on his arm a very handsome specimen of what appeared to be Russian sable.

"You wouldn't think," he said, "that that color was indirectly due to a loss of temper, would you?"

"I didn't know that the Russian sable had a bad temper," responded the customer.

"Your knowledge is not always to be relied on," laughed the salesman. "This is not a Russian sable skin. It is a red fox, and thereby, so to speak, hangs a tale."

The customer asked that it be unfolded.

"In New York city," responded the salesman, "lives a furrier, who, knowing a good deal about the dyeing of seal skins and other furs, sought for years and years to find a dye that would transform a red fox skin into a Russian sable, as far as appearance went. All his efforts were nugatory and void, as the lawyers say, but he would not give up the search. One day, less than two years ago, he was busy over his dye pots seeking the elusive alchemy. He thought this time he had it sure, but he was disappointed once more, and I am sorry to say he lost his temper and acted in a most unseemly manner. He held in his hand a bottle with a chemical of some kind in it that he had intended using in some other dyes that he did know about, and in his violence he knocked the bottle against a box and broke its neck. This made him madder than ever, and with a bad word he hurled the broken bottle and its remaining contents into the disappointing dye pot. Then he left the place, and when he came back, much cooler in mind, behold, there was that in the dye pot which caused his special wonder and he began an immediate investigation. Just what effect the chemical or the broken bottle had on the dye he could not tell, but a very apparent change had been effected, and he hastened to try a strip of fur in it. When the fur was taken out it was no longer red fox. Neither was it quite Russian sable, but it was on the way, and after a little experimenting with the unexpected chemical he hit upon the right thing, and the secret was his. To-day he is converting red fox skins into Russian sable for 1000 firms in all parts of the world, and it is needless to say he is not getting poor at it. Russian sable is a beautiful and expensive fur, but this imitation is quite as effective, for three or four years, as the genuine thing, and doesn't cost anything like as much. Cheaper furs, that look as well, while they last, as expensive ones, are more satisfactory anyway to the majority of purchasers, because styles change and people want something new once in awhile if they can afford it."—Washington Star.

Friendly Dog Stopped the Fight.

On one of the most pleasant side streets of Cleveland live two dogs—a large, dignified hound and a saucy, small fox terrier. The two are the best of friends, and the big dog is always watching over the little one and doing his best to keep the pert fellow out of a fight. But the other day his watchfulness failed. Another terrier came and yelled defiance at the hound's comrade and when the big dog arrived upon the scene it was to behold a frantic, tumbling, snapping heap, of which his favorite was part. He seemed to consider the state of things, then gave a sigh of patient dignity and began to walk around the combatants, keeping a critical eye on the struggle and evidently acting the part of umpire. His favorite was getting the worst of it, but he did not interfere. Maybe he thought the punishment of defeat was better than any he could bestow. He watched silently till all at once his friend gave a yelp of real pain and trouble. Then suddenly the big dog awoke. With a bound he was beside the other two. With one tap of his paw he sent the victor over into the dust, grabbed his favorite in his mouth as a cat grabs her kitten and made off to his own back yard. During the next hour he licked, scolded and fondled the repentant terrier. And now the two are more devoted than ever, though the little dog seems more meek and decidedly more obedient than of yore.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ENGLAND DILATORY

CAUSES DELAY IN THE CHINESE NEGOTIATIONS.

All Other Allies Have Agreed to the Preliminary Demand Note Which Is to Be Presented to the Chinese Government — Question as to Li Hung Chang's Credentials Again Raised—Neither Chinese Commissioner Has an Official Copy of the Edict.

Pekin, Dec. 10.—The dilatoriness on the part of the British foreign office in instructing its minister is responsible for the delay in signing the preliminary demand note which is to be presented to the Chinese government through Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching. All the other allies have agreed to the preliminary demands and also to the language of the full note, the text of which was cabled to England several days ago. As soon as the British representative receives his instructions another meeting of the ministers will be called. Unless his instructions demand an alteration in the preliminary note, which it is believed will not be the case, and unless some of the other governments change their attitude radically, the

Note Will Be Signed

and presented to the Chinese representatives. The question of credentials of Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching has again been raised. When Dr. Munn von Schwartzenstein, the German minister, arrived at Shanghai he saw Li Hung Chang and asked to see his credentials. Earl Li informed him that he had received an edict by telegraph appointing himself and Prince Ching representatives of the Chinese government with full powers. He added that he could produce the credentials whenever necessary. Again at Tien-tsin Dr. Munn von Schwartzenstein made a similar request of Li Hung Chang and received a similar answer. It transpires that neither Chinese commissioner has received an official copy of the edict appointing them bearing the great seal, etc. The ministers do not question the statements of the commissioners that they are duly authorized to treat in behalf of the Chinese government, but they know that in dealing with the Chinese it is unsafe to assume anything or to take anything for granted, so they again demanded

To See the Credentials.

The commissioners then acknowledged that they had received nothing beyond the edict. They were informed that this was insufficient. Li Hung Chang spoke of the distance of the court from Pekin, the roads to Singan-Fu, the present seat of government, and the long time that would be required to get a certified copy of the edict. This plea was unavailing. Late on Fiday Li Hung Chang sent word to one of the ministers informing him that owing to the destruction of the tsung li yamun, no copy of his credentials as commissioner was available as a model and he asked the minister to lend him his copy. This request was granted. Li Hung Chang also stated that when the court fled from Pekin the great seal was left in the Forbidden City, and he asked if the arrival of a certified copy of the edict without the great seal would be satisfactory, the seal to be attached when the edict reaches Pekin. This question is in abeyance.

Offended at Gen. Chaffee.

London, Dec. 10. — "Gen. Chaffee wrote a letter to Coun von Waldersee," says the Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post, "complaining of the removal by French and German troops of the astronomical instruments from the wall of Pekin, but the letter was returned to him on account of its tone. He has notified the foreign envoys that all persons are prohibited passing the American guard on entering the south gate of the palace, owing to the frequet cases of looting. The ministers are offended at this individual assumption of authority."

CHRISTIANS MASSCRED.

One Hundred Put to Death by Order of the Taotai of Rivei Hua Cheng.

Pekin, Dec. 10.—One hundred native Christians have been put to death by orders of the taotai at Rivei Hua Cheng. Twelve Europeans, mostly Swedish and Norwegian missionaries, besides Capt. Watts Jones, were also massacred. Such is the report brought by Captains Wingate and Ryder, who accompanied the expedition to Kalgan and who returned yesterday. During their absence they visited several places to which the Germans did not go, but they encountered no opposition. The details of the outrages are most revolting.

Much Money Must Be Spent to Fit Out Torpedo Boat.

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 10. — The United States torpedo boat Craven, which was in collision recently in Newport harbor with the Dahlgren, was hauled into the navy yard, and upon examination was found to have sustained more serious damage than outward appearances would indicate. Timber Belt to Be Opened.

Osceola, Wis., Dec. 10.—One of the largest enterprises in the lumber world will be established in the little village of Clam Falls, in the northeast part of this county in the near future. Capitalists from Chicago have already bought large tracts of fine oak timber in a belt that has never been touched by the woodman's axe, and will cut 5,000,000 feet of logs this winter. They will erect one of the best equipped sawmills in the country. A large belt of fine oak timber lies in that region—enough to last the mill for ten years—and the only drawback is the lack of railroad facilities, but it is believed from this venture that a road will be built next year.

Acquitted but Rearrested.

Milwaukee, Dec. 10.—Thomas Farrell, alias Old Dad Flynn, and William Harrison, alias "Lefty" Fitzgerald, claimed to be pals of the notorious Tornado Jim, were acquitted in the United States court of the charge of robbing the Berlin (Wis.) postoffice in February last. The prisoners were immediately rearrested. They are suspected of being connected with big robberies at Galena, Ill.; Chilton, Fond du Lac, Waukesha, Wis., and other places.

Stiles, Wis., Dec. 10.—Fire broke out in the Anson Aldred company's large stock burned, and before it was put out, caused a loss of about $75,000. A strong wind prevailed and the flames spread rapidly to surrounding buildings, burning the company's store, harness shop, creamery and four dwelling houses, including an expensive summer cottage. The insurance is $40,000. Timely assistance from Green Bay saved the town.

Strange Fatality in Family.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 10. — There has been a rather strange fatality in the family of C. M. Brown, a local drayman. Within six weeks four members of his family, a sister and three brothers, have died of typhoid fever. They were at different points over the country, and the illness was not from the same immediate cause. Another member of the family is ill.

KRUGER GIVES IT UP

ASKS FOR CONFERENCE WITH LORD SALISBURY.

Authoritatively Stated That He Desires to Discuss Terms of Settlement of the War — Believed the Conference Will Be Granted—Great Britain and Portugal Form an Alliance — Evidence of a Perfect Understanding Between the Two Countries — Victoria Thanks King Carlos.

London, Dec. 10. — An authoritative statement is made that Lord Salisbury has received from Mr. Kruger at The Hague a request for a conference for the discussion of terms of settlement of the war between Great Britain and the Transvaal. While Lord Salisbury has not yet replied to Mr. Kruger's request, it is believed that the request asked for will be granted. Statesmen, in speaking of the matter, said that such a reply from the premier could be counted on as almost certain.

England and Portugal Are Allies.

Lisbon, Dec. 10.—King Carlos has received a telegram, as follows, from Queen Victoria in response to the one sent by his majesty:

"I am greatly touched by your kind telegram. I sincerely thank you, my dear nephew, for it and for the good wishes you entertain toward me and my people. It is again with the greatest pleasure that I recognize the cordial and friendly understanding between Portugal and England."

After cordial farewells to the Portuguese officials and an exchange of salutes the British squadron sailed at noon.

At Saturday's banquet on board the British battleship Majestic, when King Carlos, Queen Marie Amelie and Prince Louis Philippe, together with members of the cabinet and other dignitaries, were entertained by Vice Admiral Sir Henry Haldsworth Rawson, the Portuguese premier, Senor J. Luciano de Castro, toasting "Queen Victoria and Great Britain," saluted "the alliance that has long existed in treaties and has been confirmed by recent acts." He said the significance of the alliance was "an assurance that our rights will be respected and our dominions maintained."

Sir H. G. MacDonald, the British minister, in responding thanked the government of King Carlos for the "friendly attitude maintained with such correctness toward Great Britain during the war in South Africa, which has been warmly appreciated by the government of Queen Victoria. The confirmation of alliance which unites us indissolubly is there in the presence of the channel squadron. Ancient ties are drawn closer by recent events. The British government desires that a firm and durable alliance may be ever maintained."

INSURGENTS FALLING BACK.

Sacrificing Their Possessions and Satisfied to Save Themselves.

Manila, Dec. 10.—While the captures of supplies and the occupation of new points are quite numerous, those involving actual fighting are comparatively few. Apparently the insurgents are falling back at all contested points, sacrificing their possessions in most cases and satisfied to save themselves. A detachment of the Forty-seventh United States volunteer infantry from the island of Catanduanes, off the southeast coast of Luzon, relinquished an attempt to land near Pandan. On anchoring the Americans were fired upon by sixty riflemen, and after a short engagement they cut the anchor chain and sailed for Catanduanes with two killed and two wounded. The names have not yet been received here. Capt. Richard T. Ellis, of the Thirty-third volunteer infantry, captured in the mountains near Barbara a large quantity of Krag, Mauser and Remington ammunition, together with a signal outfit, a printing press and other equipment. All of this was destroyed. Thirty rifles and several hundred cartridges were secured at Victoria. A detachment of the Fourth infantry captured Maj. Garlon and three officers of lower rank in the town of Pasay. Another detachment destroyed Gen. Uguad's camp. The enemy had fled, but the Americans subsequently rounded up twenty-five insurgents. Gen. MacArthur has approved the death sentences passed upon several additional persons convicted of murder, arson and pillage. In a few other instances he has commuted the death sentence to imprisonment.

OPERA INTERRUPTED.

Fire at Canton, Ohio, Causes a Loss of $300,000.

Canton, Ohio, Dec. 10.—The Coxton block, one of the largest buildings in the city, was destroyed by fire. The Grand opera house adjoining was also damaged. The loss is estimated at $300,000. The opera house was filled when the fire was discovered, but it was emptied without serious mishap. The block was owned by Mrs. M. C. Barber, sister of President McKinley's wife. Twenty families who occupied the place are homeless. Four firemen were seriously but not fatally hurt.

COURTS RULED BY SUN TIME

Judges In Various States Refuse to Accept Standard Reckoning.

If you ever expect to go to law over a question in which time is involved, however slightly, don't monkey with standard time. It won't go in the courts. To be sure, you can't catch trains if you don't use standard time to do it, but you will miss the verdict if you do. In Georgia the court of appeals decided that the use of standard time instead of sun time in regulating a trial was an error. In the particular case in question the sun time was faster than the railroad time, and a verdict was received after 12 o'clock on Saturday night by the sun time, though before 12 by standard time. It was decided that sun time should have been followed.

In Nebraska a certain summons was returnable before a justice at 10 o'clock a. m. The defendant failed to appear. The justice waited until 11 o'clock standard time, which was about half an hour faster than common time, and then gave judgment by default. The defendant appeared before 11 o'clock common time, and it was held that the judgment by default was premature and invalid.

In Iowa there was a question as to the expiration of an insurance policy, which by its terms extended until 12 o'clock at noon of a certain day. Fire broke out at about 11:45 o'clock a. m. of that day by common time and about two and a half minutes after 12 o'clock by standard time. The court held that the insurance was still in force. It did not appear that any statute had enacted any change in the ordinary rule which regards noon as the time when the sun crosses the meridian. There was evidence of the customary use of standard time at that place, but this was held not sufficient. The court says: "It was not only necessary to show the customary use of standard time, but that by custom of the place at 12 o'clock at noon meant at 12 o'clock standard time."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WOMAN A BEAST OF BURDEN.

Heavy Loads Carried by Italians Through New York's Streets.

It is no uncommon sight to see Italian women walking along the streets balancing burdens on their heads that the average man would prefer to have sent home on a truck. A few days ago one of these women passed through City Hall park. On her head she was carrying what appeared to be the entire woodwork from the interior of some house. The bundle was made up of eight pieces of hard wood, the shortest being fully 12 feet in length. Each piece was six inches in width and an inch thick. The woman steadied this burden with one hand, while in the other she carried what one would consider a good load for one person in the shape of a bundle of shorter pieces of wood.

As she turned into Center street, near Chambers, the end of the load of lumber on her head came in contact with the head of a man who was going in the opposite direction. In order to prevent hitting him too hard the woman tried to turn to one side, and as she did so her burden fell to the walk. In vain she tried to replace it on her head. At last two men took hold of it, one at each end. They found that even their combined strength was just sufficient to lift it up and place it on the woman's head again. When the wood was finally adjusted in a proper position the woman picked up her smaller bundle and started up Center street.—New York Times.

A Little Off.

"My necktie is disarranged." Sherlock Holmes, Jr., suddenly exclaimed.

His companion looked at him and said:

"How do you know? You haven't felt of it, and there is no mirror here that you could have looked into. Sometimes, Mr. Holmes, I am almost forced, in spite of your declarations that you do these wonderful things by reasonable, human processes, to believe that you must be gifted with second sight. Now what has convinced you that your necktie is disarranged?"

"I noticed a man look at my tie just now and then feel of his own," the great detective answered.

"Wonderful! Wonderful! Only your tie is all right."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Hired by the Hour.

When Remenyi, the famous violinist, was a young man, he was engaged by a parvenu to play at a dinner, the agreement stating that he was to furnish music from 8 o'clock to 11. He began with an andante movement from Mozart, a composition which opens very low and soft.

The host turned to his guests. "That's just like those musicians," he said. "I hired him by the hour, and see how slow he plays."—Kansas City Independent.

CLERICAL STORIES.

HUMOROUS INCIDENTS NOTED BY AN ENGLISH CLERGYMAN.

A Bit of Irish Repartee That Restored Good Humor—The Cause of a General Laugh In a Dublin Cathedral—An Interrupted Sermon.

"An Irishman of the full blood cannot resist an opportunity for repartee, no matter how solemn the occasion or what his surroundings," said an English clergyman, a visitor in Washington, the other day, when the conversation turned on the funny experiences of clergymen and the humor that creeps into matters connected with the church.

"I was assisting an old friend of mine, the rector of a church in Ireland, one Sunday, and before the service we were in the vestry room putting on our robes, with the old sexton, a shriveled up Irishman of the perfect type, assisting. My friend, who was somewhat old, was a little testy that morning, and somehow the sleeve of his surplice got mixed up. Notwithstanding the assiduous efforts of the old sexton to direct his arm to the right hole the two would not connect. Finally, losing patience, my friend said sharply: 'Oh, the old boy's in the thing.'

"The old sexton brightened up and, looking over at me, with a twinkle in his eye, said as quick as lightning, 'Not yit, your riverince.'

"It restored the good humor of the situation, and the vestment was properly adjusted.

"The only time I ever heard a congregation laugh unrestrainedly during the regular services in a cathedral was back in the eighties, when I was a resident of dear, dirty Dublin. On one Sunday morning the bishop of Cork preached. He was a splendid man, an Irishman to the backbone and possessed of as fine a brogue as ever distinguished a son of Erin. His congregation was made up of the very essence of fashion in Dublin, which, in those days, was one of the greatest social centers of the world. Notoriously, people were living beyond their means, for the income from the landed estates of Ireland had taken a big tumble. But that made no difference, and good dressing went as a matter of course and was one of the smallest of the extravagances. The bishop preached on the subject of extravagance and spoke particularly of overdressing. His sermon was a bitter arraignment of the sin of debt and the wickedness of setting the heart on fashion and dress. He attacked the overdressed woman and wound up this particular reference this way:

"'Now, supposing every one of ye—every one: man and woman—should stand up in this church, take off the clothes ye have not paid for, just walkin out with the things on your back ye have paid for—a pretty lookin lot of scarecrows ye'd be.'

"There was a pause until the real significance of the suggestion had percolated through the members of his congregation, then some one snickered. Every one was picturing to himself and herself the real scene that would occur should the bishop's idea be carried into effect, while wife looked at husband and members of each family nudged one another. The ludicrous side was irresistible and the laugh was general.

"I once attended church at Whalley, a little village on the borders of Lancashire and Yorkshire, in England. The church, which had been a part of the old abbey, was built in the year 1066 and is today one of the most interesting sacred edifices in Great Britain. The rector was a Mr. Whittaker, very old, very stout and very deaf. He had occupied the living for 30 years, and while he generally appeared in church and took some part in the services, he was able to afford the luxury of a curate and was always glad to secure the services of a friend to preach. On one occasion a gentleman I knew very well was to officiate. It was his custom to limit his sermon to 20 minutes, preaching ex tempore, and always took out his watch and his pocket handkerchief, placing them beside him before commencing. This he did as usual, and, finding a very convenient little round receptacle, stuffed the handkerchief into it, laid the watch on top and fired away.

"The congregation was surprised to see the old rector, who was sitting at the bottom desk of the 'three decker' erection, which I suppose still stands right in the center and half way down the aisle—not in the chancel, as in the modern churches—become very uneasy in his seat. He squirmed around and looked up, though every one knew quite well that he could not hear a word of the sermon. Finally he beckoned to the black gowned old verger, who carried a long wand, and whispered to him. The verger ascended the pulpit and in turn interrupted the sermon by a whispered conversation with the preacher, who was seen to suddenly grasp his pocket handkerchief and watch, smile and nod, and then proceeded with his sermon. He had filled the receiver of the old rector's ear trumpet, which connected with a tube to the lower desk, and the rector had been unable to tell whether any sermon was going on or not."—Washington Post.

Hope For Him.

"Have you ever tried to reduce your flesh?"

"Yes, I'll bet I've spent $500 for anti-fat medicine; but it's no good. I've tried everything and I just keep getting fatter. I'll give it up now and go on and weigh a ton if I have to."

"Oh, don't get discouraged. Come over and try our boarding house for a month or so."—Indianapolis Journal.

Burlington Route

CANADIAN EXCURSIONS

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its track smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul Burlington trains leave St. Paul 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and information. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from the date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The exact rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until Dec. 24th. Application can be made to him for any future information needed.

One of the paradoxes of life insurances is that the richest men, who need it least, carry the largest amount of it. John Wanamakes's policies aggregate $2,250,000, George W. Vanderbilt, J. J. Hill, of St. Paul, Frank W. Peavey, of Minneapolis, all millionaires, are insured for $1,000,000 apiece. Dr. Depew, Theodore A. Havemeyer and W. W. Gibbs, of Philadelphia, carry $500,000 each.

"A Dancing Party."

The "dancing party" given at Hotel Markham Friday evening was a grand social affair. The guests began to arrive at an early hour and the noted hostelry was taxed to its utmost capacity when the hour for opening the ball arrived. The Red Lake Falls orchestra furnished the music and J. Q. Adams directed the dancers. After the programs were distributed the dancing commenced and was kept up until the time for supper was announced. Landlord and Mrs. McAndress took possession of the dining room, arranged the tables and laid covers for fifty-five couple who enjoyed the repast with a relish possessed only by merrymakers and pronounced it a spread worthy of long remembrance. After supper the tables were cleared away, dancing was resumed and continued until four o'clock when "Home Sweet Home" was reached on the program.

Two Minnesota Lake girls became infatuated with the idea of having their heads photographed coquettishly through a torn newspaper, and visited the photographers for that purpose, says the Tribune. However, when the pictures were finished they were horrified to behold what they before failed to notice—the paper through which they had stuck their heads was a Chicago sheet and just beneath their smiling faces was a big display advertisement of a clothing firm, which announced, "Our pants are lined in the seat."—Exchange.

Votes for Flax and Wheat.

I vote for flax and wheat sown together. I never tried it till this year, and never believed in two crops at a time on the same land. But wheat or flax alone is not often the only crop the land carries; grass, clover or weeds, or all together; are nearly always found with the grain, so the land must carry two or more crops at the same time, anyhow, and why not let them be valuable crops, instead of one of them a worthless crop? I got an average yield of wheat and also of flax from the same field, and the field was freer of weeds than it would have been, I believe, if only one crop had been grown.—M. Negus, N. Dak.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

There are some people who boast that they cheat the printer by deadbeating their newspaper subscription. As the law is very clear in regard to newspaper subscription there is no need of a newspaper losing subscription money in the United States of America, and hereafter the News proposes to make the fellow dance to "ragtime" music who takes the paper for a few years and then refuse to pay for it. The "didn't subscribe for it" racket don't go in law after a man has taken the paper from the post office week after week for a year or two. This hint is not nor can it be applied to the honest man who may owe one or ten years subscription, but it is a warning note to the dead-beat of any sex, color or religion.—Wyaconda News.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

The new depot for Wylie passed through Crookston last week and the Times of that city has this to say about it: It has done duty as a pumphouse at White Lake near Willmar, ever since the seventies, when Sup't Jenks, then a freight conductor, lost that car of wheat out of the middle of his train on his run in to St. Paul from Willmar, then the terminus of the only piece of track the Great Northern, then the St. P. M. & M. owned. The building is 7x9 in dimensions, the shingles that projected over the eaves had been knocked off by contact with a bridge, and the most valuable part of it was the keyhole to the door. It is a disgrace to the company and to the thriving little village of Wylie, and cost more to load, transport and place in shape to use than would a new building double the size. It was reported here that when it reached its destination Jake Thill was to make the presentation speech, and furnish four beer kegs which would be used as corner stones.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

A Good Time to Begin.

There are several reasons why now would be a good time to start in the sheep business. Of course all will agree with the old idea that the best time to sell is when everybody wants to buy and buy when people are anxious to sell. This is an axiom that will hold pretty good as a rule. Unfortunately this is not the case now. The demand exceed the supply of really good sheep and yet certain grades of sheep are not too high to make some money on them. A great many common ewes can be had for from $2.50 to $3.00 per head. These are not as good as most up-to-date sheep would like to have, but they will from a nucleus upon which to build a flock of very good sheep. Prices for ewes range from the above price to even $5 and $6 per head. These latter prices are for well bred sheep and where one does not care to wait to breed up a flock it is best to buy this kind in the beginning.

It is a good time to go into the sheep business because the good prices which prevail for wool and mutton are inspiring to a beginner. It is a good time to engage in the sheep business because the signs of the times indicate that there will not be a slump in the business for at least four or five years. It may not come then, but indications are such that prices will be maintained for several years yet. It is a good time to go into sheep because the demand is very great for them. It is a good time to go into sheep because the farm will be all the better for having them on it. There are but few farms that would not be better off for having some sheep on them. Beginning now may be better than waiting a few years to do so. Cholera among hogs may be a help in deciding to keep a few sheep. The man who believes sheep are not money makers should let his mind be disabused.

Horse Food.

Probably no domestic animal is so susceptible to impure, musty, fermented, or partially decayed feeding stuffs as the horse. The effect of musty hay and grain is well known. Damaged grain is still more injurious. Horses do not have to eat fermenting or partially decayed food to produce ill effects, the presence of such things near stables have caused the death of many horses. Horses have died from diseases that could by traced to nothing but offensive pollution under stable floors. Pure food and clean surroundings are well nigh certain safe guards against sickness; at all events, they contribute to health more than any nostrum can.

The local newspaper should be found in every home. No children should grow up ignorant who are taught to appreciate home papers. It is said to be the stepping stone of intelligence in all matters not to be learned in books. Give your children a foreign paper which contains not a word about any person, place or thing which they ever saw or perhaps never heard of and how could you expect them to be interested? But let them have the home paper and read of people whom they meet and places where they are familar and soon an interest is awakened which increases with every weekly arrival of the local paper. Thus the habit of reading is formed, and those children will read the papers all their lives and become intelligent men and women, a credit to their ancestors, strong in the knowledge of the world as it is to-day.—Wells Advocate.

How to Know A Man.

If you wish to understand others, always study their ways after they have worked hard all day, rather than when they are rested. A rested man is on dress parade, but a tired man is absolutely natural. He is too weary to think of the little courtesies he might effect when in a better mood.

If you are on the 6 o'clock car in the evening you will see a number of men who are completely played out. Many of them are big and strongly built, but their faces tell of care and labor and dejection. They are too tired to be generous and gallant. They need a tonic; something to build them up.

Honest labor demands "Golded Grain Belt" beer, an honest brew of pure barley malt and hops. It is a tonic which will bring back strength and happiness to the tired man. Always have a case handy; don't be dejected or worn out; don't suffer from exhaustion. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

—Do you want to sell your farm? The John Grove Land and Loan Company of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Mr. Isaac Brock, the Oldest Man in the United States.

Mr. Isaac Brock, of McLennan county, Tex., has attained the great age of 111 years, having been born in 1788. He is an ardent friend to Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms:

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but I have learned from Dr. Hartman's books that these affections are the same and are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections.

"Peruna has been my stand-by for many years, and I attribute my good health and my extreme age to this remedy. It exactly meets all my requirements.

"I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people."

Isaac Brock.

Catarrh is the greatest enemy of old age. A person entirely free from catarrh is sure to live to a hale and hearty old age. A free book on catarrh sent by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

He Stopped the Noises.

Prof. Tait of Edinburgh, after having subdued a lady pianist, who annoyed him, by taking to the bagpipes; was troubled by an amateur elocutionist in the house. One day, the story goes, when the house was filled with oratory, a volley of explosions came from Tait's room, followed by smoke and unearthly smells. The lessons in oratory were suspended, and every one in the house collected to see what the trouble was. Mr. Tait, with unmoved countenance, said to the landlord:

"As there seems to be no restraint on the nature of the studies pursued in these lodgings, I have begun a series of experiments in high explosives, from which I expect to draw much advantage."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. MINISTER SAVED

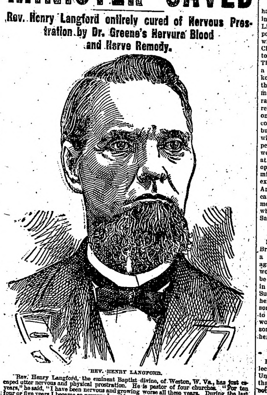
Rev. Henry Langford entirely cured of Nervous Prostration by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.



REV. HENRY LANGFORD.

Rev. Henry Langford, the eminent Baptist divine, of Weston, W. Va., has just escaped utter nervous and physical prostration. He is pastor of four churches. "For ten years," he said, "I have been nervous and growing worse all these years. During the last four or five years I became so nervous I could scarcely sign my name so it could be read. I was so nervous that I could not read my own sermon notes after they had been laid aside awhile.

"I was unable to hold my head steady in the pulpit, nor could I hold or handle my books and papers without embarrassment, owing to the trembling and weakness of my hands and arms. I was so nervous that I could scarcely feed myself. In fact, my nervous system was wrecked.

"I tried many remedies recommended by physicians, but found no permanent relief.

"One day I was in the store of R. S. Ogden, at Sardis, W. Va., and he said to me: 'You take two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and if you say it don't help you, you need not pay for it.'

"I took two bottles of this medicine and found so much relief that I bought two more bottles, and now I am wonderfully improved in health and in strength. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick. Too much cannot be said in praise of this splendid medicine. I say this for the good of other sufferers from nervous and prostrating diseases who can be cured by this remedy. For myself, I am thankful to God that I found Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and for what it has done for me."

DR. GREENE'S OFFER OF FREE ADVICE.

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give his counsel free to all who write or call upon him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. His advice is from his great skill and experience and will shorten the road to health. Thousands come to him and write to him constantly. Do not put off getting the right advice, if you are ill.

PARLIAMENT OF SARK.

Chefs Plaids Is a House of Hereditary Legislators.

The other day I attended the opening of the, as yet, unreformed Parliament of Sark, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. There is but one house, and it is called the Chefs Plaids. So far so good, for I believe every sane political reformer agrees that the model state should have one legislative body only. But alas, this single house is exclusively a house of landlords, exclusively a house of hereditary legislators. The people of the island are not allowed to elect their representatives. Land alone is represented; not wealth, nor intellect, nor the tiling masses, nor the submerged tenth. And the land is represented in a peculiar way. When the island, then uninhabited, was granted in 1665 by Queen Elizabeth to Heller de Carteret, Lord of St. Ouen in Jersey, it was stipulated that he should colonize it and should grant parts of it to 40 of his retainers or followers as copyholders or customary tenants under him. It was also stipulated that these tenants, though they might alienate their holdings upon payment to the lord of a thirteenth of the value, might on no account subdivide them. Thus there are still in the island the original 40 estates, and the holder of each estate occupies with regard to the seigneur, or lord, almost exactly the same position as a "leude" or a baron occupied in the old feudal days of Normandy with regard to the sovereign. The existing Parliament of Sark is, in effect, the "assemblee des leudes et barons" of the island. The law of strict primogeniture obtains, and there would be today 40 hereditary members of the Chefs Plaids but for two circumstances. One is that if a tenant happens to be a woman she does not sit, though she may vote in the house by proxy. The other is that, in the course of years, certain of the members, by inheritance or purchase, have acquired more than one estate. There are now, therefore, not more than about 30 actual sitting members of the Chefs Plaids. They represent—if they can be said to represent—a population of some 570 souls and an extent of about 1,275 acres.

HERMIT'S NIGHT-CAPS.

Reading Woman Bequeaths of These Dainty Garments.

Reading (Pa.) special Philadelphia North American: Miss Catharine Bashore, a hermit, aged 86 years, was recently found dead in her little home in Bethel township. She left a will, in which she bequeathed her personal property to her four nieces—Mrs. J. F. Natzinger, Mrs. Elias Binner, Mrs. Isaac Lengle and Mrs. Daniel Hollenbach. The executors investigated today and found that the old woman had converted her savings into wearing apparel. The larger portion had been made by her own hands, representing the work of years. The property consisted of 111 frilled night caps, 24 calico sunbonnets, 2 silk bonnets, 22 pairs of shoes, 53 calico and gingham aprons, 27 homespun chemises, 22 muslin chemises, 56 calico handkerchiefs, 14 white handkerchiefs, 16 colored handkerchiefs, 16 calico shoulder capes, 12 colored and black silk shoulder shawls, beautifully figured, 61 petticoats, 3 heavy black shawls, 1 heavy cloak, with velvet collar, 33 calico sacks, 4 pairs of stockings, 20 calico dresses, and 5 other dresses.

LIPTON'S LUCK.

Speculators Not Aware of the Scheme Until Too Late.

Sir Thomas Lipton is reported to have cleared $350,000 by a pork deal in Chicago. It has also been said that Lipton had so firm a hold on Chicago pork that he might have doubled his winnings had he been so minded. The Chicago pork speculators are puzzled to know how the thing was done. They had supposed themselves to know a thing or two about the pork market, and yet they let this stranger beat them out of $350,000. This stranger made a corner in October pork, which raised the price from $11 to $20 a barrel. While this operation was going on there was plenty of pork in the country. The pork speculators whose business it was to know where and at what figure pork was held did not suspect what was going on until they were called upon to fill their contracts at Mr. Lipton's own price. This pork operation may inspire a doubt in the minds of yachtsmen if Mr. Lipton's expressed determination to carry the America's cup back with him, if he can do so by fair means, may mean more than it was supposed to mean when the warning note was uttered.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Paid Bet in Kisses.

Samuel Weldon of Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, bet Miss Louise Davidson, a neighbor, a box of fine kid gloves against three kisses that McKinley would be elected. The kisses were to be delivered in Miss Davidson's home in the presence of a number of friends. Sunday night the young woman kept her agreement. At first she appeared somewhat bashful, and Wilson offered to cancel the wager. Miss Davidson would not consent, however, and after some hesitation gave the kisses, while her fiends cheered.—New York World.

Wrongs of the Chinese.

Prof. Maertons, in a recent course of lectures on international law at the University of St. Petersburg, declared that the troubles in China were the reasonable result of "the endless injuries to which China has been subjected by Europeans since the early years of the century. If we stood in the place of the Chinese, attached to his emperor and to his religion, we should understand why the present anti-foreign uprising was inevitable." Prof. Maertons is private counselor and perpetual member of the Russian foreign office.

FROM BRYAN'S OWN CITY

Comes a Startling Story—An Open Letter That Will Cause a Sensation.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 8.—(Special.)—At No. 2115 O street, this city, is the B. & M. wallpaper house. "B. & M." are the initial letters of the proprietors, Mr. A. C. Bonsor and Mr. O. E. Myers. The senior partner, Mr Bonsor, is a well-known and highly respected citizen, and no one has ever doubted his truthfulness. It is, therefore, the pronounced opinion in Lincoln and the state generally that the significant and very strong statements made in Mr. Bonsor's letter will go unchallenged. After explaining his willingness that the matter be given the fullest possible publicity in the public interest, Mr. Bonsor proceeds:

I have suffered untold misery and pain for over ten years. My kidneys were diseased. I tried many so-called remedies, but they did me no good. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I bought some, and commenced to use them at once. I had not been taking them three days before I began to improve. For years I had not had one good night's sleep, and before the first box of the Dodd's Kidney Pills were all used, I could sleep all night without pains. I am now completely cured, and have not a pain or ache left. I cannot recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly, for they are unexcelled as a kidney remedy. Yours truly,

Underwear as a Protector.

The old idea that wool is the only proper protection for the skin is exploded. In my opinion the skin, to perform its functions normally, needs but little such protection, says Melville Black, M. D. In fact, the less the better. By petting the skin and overprotecting it with woolen underwear we make it tender and hypersensitive, thus rendering it unable to withstand sudden atmospheric changes without paralysis of some portion of its vasomoter control. Hence the frequent "catching cold," the bete noir of our existence.

To me it seemed incredible that I could cast aside my flannels and not feel the chill of winter's blast. My patients say to me, "I will catch my death of cold." When I show them that I am wearing linen mesh, and have not had a cold for over a year, and am perfectly warm and comfortable, something that I could not say when I was wearing heavy flannels, they are amazed. Some are not to be convinced—no amount of reasoning will convince them—that the conditions of their skins is responsible for their cold and catharrhal noses and throats.

THE FELLOW WAS STONE DEAF.

"When Will You Have Your Hearing?" Asked the Judge—"Hay?" He Responded.

Justice Sellers was arraigning prisoners in the police court, usually a dry and monotonous proceeding. He had read various complaints, and when he came to one charging a certain prisoner with the larceny of a ham, Detectives Kane and Cotter, who had the case in charge, motioned to a meek-looking fellow to stand up.

"How do you plead—guilty or not guilty?" queried the court, as he finished reading the complaint.

The prisoner remained silent, and his honor, thinking he was one of those "foxy" fellows that prefer to stand mute when asked to plead, entered a record of "not guilty."

"When do you want your hearing?" was the next question of the justice.

The prisoner looked quizzically at the court, and stepping out of the dock and into the sacred atmosphere of the bench, he said, loud enough to be heard on Gratoit avenue, "Hay? What did you say?"

"I asked you when you would like to have your hearing?" repeated the court, with some show of impatience.

Then Justice Whelan, who was present, advanced towards the attorneys' table and, in his usual grave and impressive way, said:

"Your honor, if it isn't out of order, I would move that you give the poor man his hearing right away. He seems to need it."

A light dawned on Sellers. The prisoner was stone deaf.—Detroit Free Press.

ENGLAND INSISTS

ON A MODIFICATION OF THE JOINT NOTE.

Ambassador at Pekin Instructed to Demand a Modification of a Point in the Joint Note—Means Further Delay in the Negotiations With the Chinese Peace Commissioners—Nature of the Demand Not Made Public—Reports of Increased Boxer Activity.

Pekin, Dec. 17.—Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British minister, on definite instructions from London, has demanded a modification of a point in the joint note which the foreign envoys generally regard as important. This means further delay, as all the ministers must communicate anew with their respective governments. Just what is the nature of the objection raised by Great Britain the ministers decline to say, but they admit that the new demand will involve a good deal more diplomatic negotiation.

The "army" of the Netherlands, Col. Knoble commanding, has arrived here. This force consists of four men, which is not a very formidable array of strength, but it is sufficient to enable a for increased indemnities on the ground of the Dutch military operations.

Demand to Be Made

There is increasing frequency in the reports of Boxer activity. A story that Col. Tullock, commanding an English force, had killed forty Boxers on his recent expedition in search of alleged buried treasure at Tiechaying tends to corroborate these reports, but the best information is to the effect that the country is overrun with disorderly characters and disbanded soldiers who have turned bandits, and the outrages committed by them are attributed to Boxers. This condition of affairs was to be expected after the conduct of certain of the allied forces the imperial forces wherever they were encountered. These imperial soldiers were driven from the places they were protecting and everything was consequently left unguarded, which left great quantities of personal property of every description.

Pursuing and Shooting

The condition will undoubtedly continue until the Chinese government is permitted to send back sufficient troops to preserve order. In the meantime, as said before, the disturbances of every description are laid to the Boxers. The reports, however, have stirred the Germans to renewed activity. It is a serious matter for Chinamen to be accused of being Boxers when they are denounced to the Germans, and in a number of cases the unfortunate Chinamen have been beheaded when the evidence tended to show that they were ordinary robbers and not Boxers.

ACTIVITY IN PANAY.

Americans and Filipinos Have Had Several Recent Engagements.

Manila, Dec. 17.—Advices from Iloilo, Island of Panay, are that the American troops have been moving northward and westward for several days and that detachments of the Sixth, Eighteenth and Twenty-sixth regiments have been active near their stations. The insurgent losses during the last ten days there have been 5 killed, 7 wounded and 40 taken prisoners. The Americans have lost 2 killed and 3 wounded. Large numbers of the natives, however, are swearing allegiance to the United States. In several recent attacks and expeditions in Southern Luzon the insurgents have lost 8 killed, 7 wounded and about 20 captured. The Americans have lost 1 killed and 2 wounded.

Cooper swallowed the pin while lying on a couch reading with the ornament in his mouth.

MRS. DAVIS THANKS THE PRESS.

Widow of Minnesota's Former Senator Expresses Her Gratitude to Newspapers.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Anna Agnew Davis, widow of Senator Davis, said Saturday, that in the grief and excitement attending her bereavement she had possibly omitted to acknowledge formally her gratitude to the public press. "I should like," she said, "to publish a formal card of thanks to the press, if some papers did not look with disfavor upon such 'cards.' But I must declare how indebted I am to all the hundreds, even thousands of newspapers that have displayed so appreciative and kindly a sympathy with my husband and so considerate a sympathy with me. These sentiments the senator either read or listened to as long as his mind remained clear. They sustained and comforted him in a remarkable degree. And I am sure that nothing could be more broad-spirited, just and generous than the eulogies which these newspapers published after his death, although many of the papers were politically opposed to his party. He could scarcely have hoped for this rare appreciation. It has touched me so that I wish to acknowledge my gratitude on his behalf and my own."

FIRE AND DYNAMITE.

Iowa Man Accused of Wrecking Threshing Machines.

Grinnell, Iowa, Dec. 17.—One of the most remarkable cases on record is being tried in the district court at Belle Plaine. It is called the case of the State against William Peterson, charged with maliciously destroying property belonging to Tharp & Pitts. The latter ran several threshing outfits in Benton county, and in some way, it is said, incurred the enmity of Peterson. Soon after this Tharp & Pitts lost one of their machines by fire, burned while standing alone in the field. A second machine was soon after destroyed in a more sensational manner. A stick of dynamite was concealed in a bundle of grain and was fed into the machine. The explosion wrecked the machine and the men had a narrow escape with their lives. A third attempt was made by putting stones in bundles of grain.

BIG FIRE AT SHEBOYGAN.

Immense Plant of Zschetzche & Son Destroyed.

Sheboygan, Wis., Dec. 17.—The immense plant of Zschetzche & Son, tanners, was totally destroyed by fire. The cause of the fire is unknown. The flames, fanned by a high wind, scorched the big furniture plant of the Malcolm Manufacturing company adjoining, whose loss will be several thousand dollars. Mayor Born wired Milwaukee and Manitowoc fire departments to hold themselves in readiness, a general conflagration in the manufacturing district being feared. The fire corps of a dozen factories lent aid and finally controlled the fire. Nearly 250 men will be thrown out of employment and the plant may not be rebuilt. The plant was one of the largest in the state, covering an entire block of ground.

JUST LIKE WHITE FOLKS.

Indians Use Gasoline for Kerosene—Six Are Dead.

Cannon Ball, N. D., Dec. 17.—An Indian family, consisting of father, mother and four children, burned to death from an explosion of gasoline. Another family of father, mother and one child are frightfully burned and will probably die. The Benton Transportation company last summer had five tanks of gasoline on the river bank at Bismarck awaiting a gasoline boat. The bank caved and all the tanks went into the river. One of them an Indian named War Bonnet (now dead) found and began selling its contents out to the Indians for kerosene. He lit a match to fill a measure and an explosion followed. A woman and her four children were burned to a crisp. The house and contents were destroyed.

HAD TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Men Found Lashed to an Overturned Yawl in Lake Michigan.

Manitowoc, Wis., Dec. 17. — The steamer Manhattan arrived here with W. A. Shields and William McAuley, lighthousekeepers on Squaw island, and the bodies of Mrs. Shields and her niece, Mary Davis. They were picked up Saturday afternoon in the lake where they were found lashed to an overturned yawl. They had been thus exposed since Friday, when they were capsized by a squall while sailing from the island to the mainland. Lucien Morden of Montague, Mich., was also an occupant of the boat when it capsized, and was drowned before he could be lashed to the overturned craft. The two rescued men are badly frozen, and it is thought they may have to suffer amputation of the lower limbs.

BUY A LARGE TRACT OF PINE.

Wisconsin Capitalists Invest in Idaho Timber Lands.

Marinette, Wis., Dec. 17.—The purchase of over 10,000 acres of government pine lands in the northern part of Idaho by a syndicate, of which Gov. Scofield is the head, has been completed. The tract is a compact one in Shoshone county lying on the north fork of the Clearwater river, a branch of the Snake river, which in turn runs into the Columbia. It is said to contain over 250,000,000 feet of white pine timber, and cost the purchasers in the neighborhood of $60,000. A sawmill will be built on the tract next year by the syndicate.

PLUNGE DOWN EMBANKMENT.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Train in a Frightful Accident.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 17.—News is received here that an engine, twelve cars and five men plunged down a fifty-foot embankment on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway near Murray, Iowa. John Dozle was killed and the four other men were badly hurt, two probably fatally. A trestle gave way when the train's weight was upon it.

PRETORIA CUT OFF

BOERS COMMAND THE LINE OF COMMUNICATION.

Nearly the Entire Line From Pretoria to the Portuguese Border Is Invested by the Boers—Almost a Panic Prevails in the City Owing to the Fear That the Boers Will Make a Descent Upon the Capital—Clements' Defeat Angers London—Boers Take 555 Prisoners.

Pretoria, Dec. 17.—Communication by mail with Lourenzo Marques is entirely cut off, the Boers infesting nearly the whole of the line to the Portuguese border. The military guard in Pretoria has been increased owing to the boldness of the Dutch inhabitants since the news of the Boer success in the fight with Gen. Clements.

Almost a panic prevails among loyal civilians, who fear that the Boers may dash through the lines and take vengeance on those who have been friendly to the British. The outposts have been strengthened to withstand a sudden attack.

A party of Brabant's horse, consisting mainly of raw recruits, engaged a superior force of Boers Dec. 13 near Zastron, Orange River Colony, losing four killed, sixteen wounded and 120 taken prisoners.

Boer Victory Angers London.

London, Dec. 17.—Lord Kitchener officially reports that in the battle at the Magaliesberg, twenty-two miles from Pretoria, last Thursday, Gen. Clements lost 14 men killed, including 5 officers, and had 555 of his men taken prisoners, 18 of them being officers. He makes no mention of the wounded.

It is reported that the Boer loss was heavy, and Lord Kitchener reports that a son of Gen. Joubert was killed.

This news of the latest British disaster, coming on the anniversary of the day when, a year ago, Gen. Buller's army was defeated at Colenso on the banks of the Tugela, has effectually disposed of the impression that the war is nearly ended. All England realizes now that the campaign is likely to drag along for many months.

All sources of information have been crowded all day with anxious people seeking news, but the only details at hand are those supplied by Lord Kitchener's official dispatches. These, although lacking in many details, tell of Clements' disaster and his subsequent retreat. They indicate small advantages over the Boers in other parts of the Transvaal, but even the most optimistic are unable to extract comfort from them.

Grand Island, Neb., Dec. 17.—L. M. Hansen, twenty-four years old, whose family resides on a farm near this city, was found dead in his yard. On his person was found a card, bearing this message: "I have never forgotten my first love; she is most to blame for this. False love is what caused me to do this; but I will be better off. Good night and take good care of yourselves. Your son." Beside the dead man was a cup containing strychnine.

THIEVES COMBINE.

Officials Believe They Have Found a Syndicate of Burglars.

Grinnell, Iowa, Dec. 17.—The private detectives of the Northwestern believe that they have discovered a gigantic thieving plot, and, as a result Mat Herzog has been arrested at Toledo on the charge of being a fence for crooks who have been operating along the Northwestern line, and other arrests will soon follow. The field of operations extended over a large portion of Iowa. Some time ago Herzog was arrested at Marshalltown, where he had been under surveillance for some time by the marshal and Tama county officials. The charge against him was that of receiving stolen goods. The grand jury quashed this particular charge, when he was immediately arrested again for being concerned in the larger criminal scheme. The detectives are of the opinion that Murray and McCabe, the State Center burglars recently sent up, were members of this gang, as Herzog is known to have supplied these men with money while in jail.

STOLEN POSTAL BAGS FOUND.

Concealed in the Cellar of the Postoffice at Kenosha, Wis.

Kenosha, Wis., Dec. 17. — While searching among some old records in the cellar of the postoffice Postmaster Frantz found five mail bags partially filled with postal matter. An examination of the bags showed that they had come into the Kenosha office more than a year ago. Two of them had been opened and the contents missing. The other three were filled with papers and Christmas packages. The department at Washington was at once notified of the find and the mail will be delivered as far as possible to-day. It is supposed that some of the former clerks in the postoffice put the bags in the cellar, which is not used by the postal authorities. No arrests have been made.

POLICE LOOKING FOR ELOPERS.

Father of the Girl Alleges She Is Only Fifteen Years Old.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 17.—The police of this city are still looking for William Long and Bertha Whitner of Frazee, Minn., who are supposed to be in Fargo. The young woman's father alleges that Long eloped with Miss Whitman and that she is only fifteen years of age. They were reported in Moorhead, but came across to Fargo for the purpose of getting married. The officials have been unable to locate them. The father is very indignant over the elopement, owing to the extreme youth of the bride.

Diamonds and Money Stolen.

St. Paul, Dec. 17.—The residence of Theo. L. Hays, manager of the Grand opera house, was entered by a sneak-thief Saturday evening and money and jewelry aggregating $1,500 were secured by the robber. Mrs. Hays has one of the richest collections of diamonds in the Twin Cities, which is worth several thousand dollars, and consists of brooches, rings, earrings, neck chains of rare and costly design. It was only by a lucky chance that all of her gems were not taken.

Big Sale of Land.

Miller, S. D., Dec. 17.—Charles Crabtree of this town has nearly closed a sale of 20,000 acres of land scattered over Hand county to a syndicate of New York capitalists. It is the purpose of the company to put settlers on the land and improve it. The Eastern buyers were here about six weeks ago and viewed much of the land and went away highly pleased. This deal will take the bulk of the cheap deed land of this section out of the market.

Wool Thieves Plead Guilty.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 17.—Robert and Albert Graham, sons of a prominent farmer living in this county, who several days ago pleaded guilty in the state circuit court here to the charge of stealing a large quantity of wool from a neighboring farmer, have been sentenced by Judge Jones to six months each in the Sioux Falls penitentiary. The stolen wool was brought to Sioux Falls and an effort was made to sell it to a local dealer.

Died as He Had Lived.

Blue Earth, Minn., Dec. 17. — Jerry Corbett, one of Faribault county's oldest pioneers, died here in a lonely abode suddenly, practically deserted and alone. During the latter part of his life he had made his living peddling, but he became so crippled that he could go from house to house no more, and died as he lived, alone in squalor.

CHRISTMAS ON THE DESERT

Passenger train No. 2 was whirling its load of humanity over the Mohave desert, a great, wide expanse of mid-mountain country whose parched bosom has exposed many an uncanny secret of death from thirst and Indian devilry. Wearied with the monotonous view of treeless, waterless plains, the passengers gladly welcomed the approach of twilight. The sun went down in an angry glare, outlining the bare peaks of a far-away range in fantastic forms, and gradually, as night came on, there were more hopeful signs of vegetation. It was the 24th of December, and most of the passengers were building on spending a merry Christmas in the favored spots of the land of sunshine and flowers—California.

Suddenly we heard the warning shriek of the engine, and saw a scattered band of cattle flying away in terror from either side of the trtack. Again the engine shrieked, the train jerked nervously and seemed to sway uncertainly on its course.

The next moment we were bounding along the ties in an uncomfortable and terrifying manner. The cries of startled women were drowned in the roar of escaping steam, and panic-stricken men looked vainly for means of escape. A group of Mexicans, awakened from sleep by the jar, plunged headlong through an open window as though the devil were after them. The train finally spent its speed, and the thoroughly frightened passengers emerged to learn the number of the dead and wounded, and to tender what aid they could. The engine was completely hidden in a great cloud of steam, which marked its position about half the length of the train. When the steam finally exhausted itself, a sad wreck was exposed. The tender of the engine was upturned, and the engineer sat upon a piece of wreckage dazedly nursing an injured hand. The fireman was some distance away, his hair and whiskers singed by the hot outpour from the engine. Neither was seriously injured, and not a passenger was scratched. Beside the track, shivering in the throes of death, lay a handsome steer—the cause of all the trouble. His neck had been twisted by a mad rush at the cowcatcher. As the engineer's eyes fell upon the form of the animal a smile of satisfaction spread over his wan face, as he said:

"That critter must have been in the bull fights at some time in his career, for when he spied that red flag yonder on the cowcatcher, he shook his head viciously and refused to leave the track with the rest of them. I slowed up and whistled several times to give him a chance, but he only snorted defiantly, kicked his heels in the air and kept on his stubborn course. Finally he turned, and I opened the throttle wide, thinking that the best method of throwing him clear of the track. With an angry roar he came full at the engine, his head bent low to the track. We all know the rest."

The steer at once became an object of great interest to the relic fiend. One man secured a horn and another cut out a tooth, and the next day various camera views were taken of the valiant animal that had wrecked a train.

We were twenty miles from the next station, and the eastbound passenger was due within an hour. Luckily a telegraph operator was on the train and the wires were hastily tapped so that the dispatchers could be informed of the accident and hold the trains both ways.

We passed a cheerless night on the desert, and Christmas morning found us a disconsolate party. There was no dining car attached to the train, and those travelers that were not provided with lunch baskets railed at the ill-luck that had placed them in so miserable a plight. Finally, some of them went on a foraging expedition, and down the track a few miles they located a section house controlled by Mexicans. Here they appeased their hunger on frijoles, chile con carne and the other warm dishes of the natives. A wrecking train at length arrived on the scene, but the work of repair was slow and tedious. Several yards of track had been torn up, and it was necessary to construct a "shoo-fly" around the wreck. This took the greater part of the day. Meanwhile the passengers looked on in a helpless way, and all vowed that they had never passed a Christmas amid such desolate surroundings.—C. N. Stark.

For Christmas Giving.

The Hopkins family were out of match boxes, and if there is one thing on which the independent and diverse minded Hopkins family stands as a unit it is that a match box be provided for every room. One by one the boxes had disappeared. The tin ones had fallen to pieces and the china ones had broken and for two weeks the Hopkins family trotted to the saucer of matches on the parlor mantel or to the pasteboard box in the kitchen when they wanted a light. Their gas bill increased perceptibly, for with so much trouble as it took to light the gas one could not turn it on so instantaneously as the gas companies have trained householders into doing. Consequently inquisitive neighbors from beneath or above, or across the way, gossiped over the amount of company the Hopkinses seemed to be having lately, for a regular glare of illumination streamed out nightly from their windows.

It was a queer thing that no one seemed able to think of the family necessity till twilight came. Then regular remarks would be made, and Marion would blame Alice, and Alice would ask Tom why in the world he couldn't take a little responsibility, and Mr. Hopkins would inquire of his wife if there was no one in the family who could go surety for the appearance of some match boxes by the next evening. And then next day Alice would come home from down town and her mother would ask her if she had remembered the match boxes, and blank is too feeble a word to describe the expression of her face on those several occasions.

For two weeks they said things under their breaths in the inky darkness, or burned gas recklessly. Then one morning Marion departed for her semi-weekly music lesson down town and said the same old thing—"I'm going to get some match boxes today"—and her mother smiled patiently and replied: "If you should happen to remember it, dear, you might get the whole number—eight."

That noon Alice came home from the north side, where she had been staying for a few days, and laid a parcel triumphantly in her mother's lap.

"I didn't even have them sent out," she said, gleefully. "I was so determined to have them here tonight. I was just getting on a car and happened to think of them by seeing a man light his cigar, so I got off. There are eight of them."

Mrs. Hopkins was properly glad and they laughed together over Marion's declaration that morning, and of how for the last time they would call that blank expression into play before they showed her that some one in the family had at last remembered. By and by Marion came.

"I've got them," she called. "The whole eight."

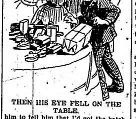
"Sixteen match boxes," said Mrs. Hopkins, with resignation. "Choose the prettiest, girls, and we'll put the rest away for another such emergency."

That evening Mr. Hopkins came in with his face wreathed in smiles.

"The young fry are so hot-headed these days," he remarked, as he complacently laid a knobby bundle in his wife's lap. "I'm sorry for Tom."

"What about Tom?" asked Mrs. Hopkins, as she felt suspiciously of the package.

"We had started home together," said Tom's father, the keenest enjoyment in his voice, "and were up to Van Buren, when Tom jumped up and made for the platform. I called to him and he yelled back 'Match boxes!' and shot out the door. I tried to get to him to tell him that I'd got the batch, but he was gone. What's the matter? Didn't I get enough?"



THEN HIS EYE FELL ON THE TABLE.

Alice exerted herself feverishly to get the twenty-four receptacles arranged on a table before Tom's arrival, and when Tom came he didn't for a minute understand his reception. Then his eye fell on the tableful of distorted shapes and he slowly added his quota to the general contribution, while his father gave an impromptu lecture on haste vs. waste. The Hopkins family have concluded to give match boxes for Christmas presents this year.

A Lover's Wish.

Since you cannot, will not, dear,
Give your tricksy heart,
Let me murmur in your ear
Joy you may impart.
Write to kind old Santa Claus—
Plead—as I would woo—
Beg him just to send to me
Christmas dream of you.

Some people are willing to be good if paid for it and others are good for nothing.

Scaring Santa Claus.

You afraid of Santa Claus? Goodness me, I'm not!
I'm lots too big to let him make me scared;
'Sides, a year ago I saw him, right on Christmas eve,
So now he wouldn't scold me if he dared!

Yes, sirree! He's big an' fat, like his pictures are;
An' I was sittin' by the chimley, too
When he lit right on the hearth, shook the snow flakes off,
An' turned to me, an says: "Why, howdy do?"

Nen I run back to the door—so's to lock him in—
"I'm pretty well," I says; an' nen we sat,
An' talked a lot about his work, an' he told me, he did,
'Twas hard to get around when you're so fat.

Bime-by I says, "I hope you won't forget me Christmas day,
Although I'm not the best of children, 'cause
If you should do so, I'm afraid I'd have to tell the boys
That b'lieve in you 'There ain't no Santa Claus!'"

My! Didn'e he turn pale! He caught holt o' my hand;
Says "Don't do that, please, for—I like you,
I'll give you heaps o' things you want, 'f you'll b'lieve in me,
An' let the other children do so too!"

So we made a 'greement, an' I will have some things
At Christmas time, you bet! What's that you say?
Don't b'lieve I ever scared old Santa Claus? Well now,
Jest ask him, if you see him Christmas day!

DAD AND MOTHER AND ME

Nobody's like old Santa Claus
With his red and jolly face;
There's not another around the globe
Can travel so swift a pace.
His twinkling eyes, and his merry laugh,
His chuckle of bubbling glee—
Nobody else is so dear by half
To Dad and Mother and Me.

He doesn't forget the baby sweet
As she rocks in her cradle white;
He has time to wait for the lagging feet
Of his old, by candle-light.
He has gifts and gifts for the young and gay,
Who encircle the Christmas Tree;
And he has the love to his latest day
Of Dad and Mother and Me.

The frost is chill in the nipping blast,
Smooth is the icy mere;
The short fleet days go hurrying past
To the last of the waning year.
And never was rose of the summer's prime
So royally fair to see
As the rose that blooms in the winter's rime
For Dad and Mother and Me.

—Collier's Weekly.

The Christmas Tree.

The Christmas tree which enters very largely into our festival comes to us from Germany, where, on the eve of the anniversary, a tree is set up in nearly every household, bright with candles and paper decorations of various colors. Underneath the tree are put the presents that each member of the family is to give to the others, and when the tree is still burning, amid the laughter and shouting of the children, the presents are distributed.

In Germany, too, St. Nicholas comes around three weeks before Christmas. It is St. Nicholas' day, and the children on this day make known their wants for the Christmas season. Then he is supposed to drive away to an unknown land and get his loads of goods, bringing them back for the Christmas stockings.

A Child's Query.

In all the Santa Claus pictures,
I've seen in my little day,
He's traveling across the snow-drifts
With a reindeer before a sleigh.

And this is the thing about it,
I'd really like to know—
Does he travel in a wagon
When there isn't any snow?

—Newspaper Clipping.

Answer.

There ain't no flies on Santa Claus,
He's neither old-fashioned nor slow,
I know how he comes to our houses,
When there isn't any snow.

He comes not in any old wagon,
He's smart and as sharp as an icicle,
He straps his pack tight on his back
And wheels into town on his bicycle.

Sugar in the Human System.

Sugar is a substance that dissolves easily and in considerable quantity in water. When in solution it easily passes through animal's membrane by osmosis, and so the question of its absorption seemed simple enough. The disease diabetes showed, however, that sugar might exist very plentifully in the blood and yet the nutrition of an individual suffer very much for the lack of it. Something else besides its mere presence in the system was necessary to secure its consumption by the tissues.

Bernard thought that the liver was active in the consumption of sugar and that disease of this organ caused diabetes. He therefore secured some of the blood going to the liver of a living animal and some of the blood that was just leaving it. To his surprise, the blood leaving the liver contained more sugar than that entering it.

After assuring himself that his observations were correct, he tried his experiments in different ways. He found that even in the blood leaving the liver of an animal that had been fed only on substances containing no sugar, sugar could be demonstrated. Even in a fasting animal the liver itself and the blood leaving it showed the presence of a form of sugar.

The only possible conclusion from this was that the liver was capable of manufacturing this form of sugar out of nonsugar containing material, or even from the blood of a fasting animal.—Catholic World.

Converting the Chinaman.

When I first met him the Greek archimandrite had been 40 years in Peking, and had never been anywhere else except for two caravan journeys to Russia. He was an elderly gentleman, with a smile like Benjamin Franklin's, and was famed at the Chinese capital for keeping the best wines, and the best tobacco. He was a bachelor, and today I recall him when I try to fancy Epicurus in the body. He wore the Chinese pigtail and clothes to match, and people said he could give Chinese mandarins points on etiquette. He gave me, at least, many happy hours, for he talked with a frankness and facility rarely united in a Russian, least of all an archimandrite.

One day, for instance, I asked him bluntly how many converts he had made. He answered that he thought he had made one, but he did not wish to be taken as stating this positively. When I returned to China after an interval of 21 years, all my inquiries led me to respect the honesty of this Russian. He said, furthermore:

"I have been here 40 years, and perhaps I have converted one Chinaman. When missionaries tell you that they have done more than that, do not believe them."—Poultney Bigelow in North American Review.

A Circus Horse In Battle.

Colonel Charles Marshall, who was aid-de-camp to General Robert E. Lee and who went through the battles of the war with his chief, told the following amusing story of his experience with a new horse: His old horse had been shot from under him in the fight of the previous day, and he had taken possession of an animal that seemed to suit the work. In the battle a few hours later he was riding across a field in which there were numerous stumps.

Suddenly the performance opened. The guns roared and the air was filled with smoke and noise. Before Colonel Marshall knew what was happening the horse had his four feet on one of the stumps and was gayly dancing in a circle. In the mean time the firing was increasing, and the situation was anything but comfortable, but the horse kept on as if he were enjoying it.

"It was not until afterward," said Colonel Marshall, "that I found the horse had belonged to a circus and had been trained to do this act amid the firing of cannon."

To Pack Eggs For Long Keeping.

The yolk of the egg spoils much quicker than the white. For this reason it is important that the yolk should be surrounded with a layer of the white. If the egg is placed on the side or large end the heavy yolk will settle to the bottom and come in contact with the shell, which admits the air. If it is placed on the small end it will always have a layer of white between it and the shell. Eggs absorb odors easily, therefore only odorless materials should be used when packing them.—Ladies' Home Journal.

BLIND, OH, SO BLIND!

Isn't it strange how people
Gaze with enraptured face
On the cunning work of the painter
Limning sweet nature's grace,
And yet with eyes that see not
Nor souls that beauty find,
Live in the world the painter paints,
Blind, oh, so blind?

Isn't it strange how people
Thrill in the keenest way
To the stories of life and its living
Told in book or in play,
And yet, with darkened vision,
To naught of their charm inclined,
Live in the world where the stories live,
Blind, oh, so blind?
—Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

THE BOSS DREW THE LINE.

Trading With a Corpse Was Not Allowed In His Camp.

The boss of the lumber camp refilled his pipe and lighted it.

"Yes," said he, "I drew the line on that.

"We had a man die in camp this winter. He lived just over the boundary. Nice feller he was, too—thrifty and all that. Every one liked him. Sorry to have him go. But after he was gone we did the best we knew how. Fixed the body up and sent two of the men out with it.

"He had bought a new pair of boots at the wongan camp two weeks before he died, and we thought it would be only right to put those boots on. So we did. The men started away and came back in three days. One of the men was wearin them new boots. The other feller gave it away. Said that just before they got to the house with the deceased the critter pulled them boots off the corpse and swapped. Other feller didn't like it, and said so. But the critter allowed that he had had some talk with the corpse about swappin a few days before he died. Corpse had allowed that the new boots hurt his corns and said that a pair that had been broken in would do better. Critter said that he couldn't bear to think of deceased bein buried in a pair of boots that hurt his feet. He said that he should wake up in the night, suttin, and think about the thing.

"Waal, course there was somethin in what he said, but as there warn't no way of gettin at the deceased's side of the matter, I concluded that I wouldn't let that trade stand. There's a good many things that go in this camp all right, but dickerin with dead men ain't one of 'em. I draw the line right there, and draw it sharp. I made that feller send them boots back. The deceased has still got the critter's old ones. The feller had to go to the wongan and get some new ones. And that's so much more for the company and a commission for me. 'Twarn't bad all round. When the feller got to jawin about the thing I told him he could still have the comfort of knowin that deceased wasn't wearin tight boots."—Lewiston Journal.

Didn't Work Well.

"We couldn't get along with two office boys."

"Not enough work?"

"That wasn't it; each was afraid he'd get here in the morning before the other."—Chicago Record.

St. Hilaire is represented in the voting contest now being carried on by the Red Lake Falls Couries. Miss Alice Hall's name was sent in last week with 200 votes to her credit which comes under the head of the "Most popular young lady."

The farmers took advantage of the fine weather yesterday and came in to do their Christmas shopping. By noon the streets were lined with teams and in consequence our merchants were kept real busy for several hours wrapping up goods.

The edict has gone forth and no card playing allowed in saloons as per order of council—not even the innocent game of solitaire or "rounce" can be played. It seems to us it would be a little more in the line of reform if orders were issued and enforced to keep "kids" out of such places and stop the scrapping of youth vs. old age.

A Poor-Farm.

The county commissioners have decided to establish a Poor Farm. It seems that the drain on the county on account of the poor is excessive, and after due deliberation the members of the board have come to the conclusion that a poor farm would be practically self sustaining, and would be the means of relieving the strained situation. The committee in charge of the matter has two places in view—the Francois LaBissoniere farm directly south of the city, and the old Marchildon place a little west of this. It is the purpose to make a lease, with privilege of purchase at a set price. The Board have gone into the matter thoroughly and when they finally act, the taxpayers whom they represent may rest assured that the county's interests have been well taken care of. The poor have cost the county for twelve months, outside of medical attendance, some 3,500.—R. L. F. Gazette.

Plants That Bear Jewels.

One of the directors of Kew Gardens in London said, in a recent lecture on some curiosities of plant life, that the pearls occasionally found in the cocoanut palm of the Philippines which are composed of carbonate of lime, were the most wonderful things known to the botanist. The bamboo yields another precious product in the shape of true opals, which are found in its joints. These products are only occasionally found, while American barley gives a much more precious thing and gives it all the time. "Golden Grain Belt" beer. If you reckon the worth of a thing from the good it can do, you must place this health-giving beer above the most costly jewels. It is brewed from the purest barley, flavored with selected hops, and contains, in every bottle, the strength of bread. If you would be happy and healthy keep a case always in your home. Memorial to Congress.

The citizens of Thief River Falls are up and doing and have sent the following memorial address to the Congress of the United States. St. Hilaire will do all in her power to assist and cooperate with the city of Thief River Falls.

To the Honorable, the Congress of the United States of America.

We, the undersigned citizens and business men of the State of Minnesota respectfully pray your honorable body to take such action as may be necessary to secure the opening for settlement and cultivation of the rich agricultural land lying within the counties of Polk, Red Lake and Marshall, in the state of Minnesota, now reserved for, but abandoned by the Red Lake band of Chippewa Indians, and being the western portion of the Red Lake Indian Reservation.

And we do herewith set forth the following facts and conditions which lead us to make petition as above.

SITUATION.

This portion of the reservation is in the form of a wedge, with its base at the Beltrami county line on the east, bounded on the north by the reservation line and on the south by the Clear Water river, with the apex at Thief River Falls, Minnesota. The Red Lake River flows from east to west through the middle of the tract, and is navigable between the Red lake and Thief River Falls.

AREA.

The lands in question comprise about eleven townships, or 253,440 acres, more or less, sufficient to provide farms of 160 acres each for about 1,584 settlers.

CHARACTER OF LAND."

The land is slightly rolling prairie, lying high above the river, with groves of mixed hardwood and poplar, and a belt of similar timber along the river bank. The soil is mainly A 1 farming land, and, with a trifling amount of drainage to the river, every acre of it would be at once fit for the plow.

POPULATION.

About twenty Indian cabins are located at wide intervals along the north bank of the Red Lake river accommodating approximately fifty Indians during the coldest of the winter; at all other times these cabins are closed and boarded up, as is the custom of the Chippewas, and the Indians lead migratory life, living in tepees and seldom remaining over one week at a place.

COMPARATIVE POPULATION.

There are not to exceed twenty-five males of voting age upon the one-third of Red Lake county occupied by the Indians, or less than one to each ten thousand acres. (There are no Indians living upon the small portions of the reservation which lie within Marshall and Polk counties.) The vote of the Red Lake county outside the reservation at the last election was 2,160, or one actual voter for each 220 acres.

A most liberal estimate of the Indian population in Red Lake county could not exceed 75 persons, the white population of the same county by the census of 1900 is 12,195.

REASON FOR INDIAN ABANDONMENT.

This open country is devoid of game and the rivers are by no means so prolific fisheries as are the waters of Red Lake and its tributaries, it is therefore apparent why the Chippewas prefer the timbered country about the lake, which is full of big game and valuable fur bearing animals, and which yields them a livelihood by hunting and fishing and an additional revenue from successful trapping.

EFFECT OF WHITES ON INDIANS.

The Indians who are now occupying the western portion of the reservation, surrounded by whites and cut off from the main portion of their band and the restrictive influence of the agency by the heavy swamps lying west from Red Lake, are in a deplorable state of moral and physical degeneration. They contract all of the vices and none of the virtues of the race by which they are surrounded and have become a prey to their appetites for alcoholic stimulents and permeated with filthy diseases.

EFFECT OF RESERVATION ON SURROUNDING PROPERTY.

The damage to the fine agricultural property directly north of the reservation by reason of its being closed to settlement is incalculable. The most determental features of the situation are three in number.

First. These lands are mostly flat and although lying well above the river ditches are imperatively necessary at certain seasons of the year to assist the natural water courses in carrying off surface water. The narrow strip of forbidden territory lying between this section and its natural drainage outlet, Red Lake river, renders it impossible of drainage and greatly retards the development of this rich farming country.

Second. The reservation lands, abandoned by the Indians (except the north bank of the river) and entirely uncultivated by them, are covered with pools which collect the surface water and form natural breeding places for numberless myriads of flies and mosquitoes which, at certain seasons, spread over the surrounding country in dense clouds. Stock raising would be a highly profitable occupation, were it not for this pest of insects, which discourages cattle raising in this vicinity.

Third. The geographical situation of this portion of the reservation is such as to cut off a large number of farmers from their national market and to compel them to haul their crops to more distant shipping points or make long and unnecessary detours. The unimproved condition of the roads across the reservation renders them impassable except under most favorable circumstances and the hostility of the Indians when in an intoxicated condition, which is frequently the case, makes hauling across the reservation a dangerous enterprise.

ATTITUDE OF THE INDIANS.

The Agency Indians, at the present time, look with suspicion upon the movement for the opening of the reservation; while making no use of it themselves, they are keenly alive to the value of the land and fear being deprived of it without adequate remuneration.

ATTITUDE OF THE WHITES.

The whites of the surrounding territory, while equally congizant of the value of the land for agricultural purposes, do not so much wish the land for their own holding as do they desire its opening to cultivation and settlement under any conditions, which may be suitable to the government and acceptable to the Indians, to the end that this tract of waste land, which extends into and divides a busy community, may cease to be a clog upon the wheels of progress and an actual damage to surrounding property.

Arthur Mattes Dead.

Arthur R. Mattes, a former employee and cashier of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company died at Denver, Colo., December 5, 1900 at the age of twenty-two years and nine months. The remains were taken to his old home at Geneseo, Illinois and the funeral took place on Saturday December 8th.

Following are a few paragraphs taken from the Fulton (Ill.) Journal "In Memory of Arthur Mattes:"

The death of this worthy and upright young man caused deep sorrow and mourning in a large circle of friends and acquaintences. He was born in Geneseo and his parents were Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Mattes. His mother died about ten years ago and his father died last February. Arthur Mattes left Geneseo eight years ago to enter the employment of the firm that founded the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., in St. Hilaire, Minn. From a mere errand and call boy, by his merit, industry, ability and faithfulness he was rapidly advanced to the position of bookkeeper and cashier which he held three years prior to his failing health. A year ago last spring he went to Colorado Springs by the advice of his employers and physicians, as his lungs were weak and he was threatened with tuberculosis. Last May, feeling somewhat improved physically, he accepted a responsible position with a large wholesale lumber firm in Denver. In August he was taken ill and went to the hospital for treatment, his trouble being appendicitis and an operation was performed in September. As his case did not progress favorable, another operation was deemed necessary and on December 4, again patiently bore the ordeal with his brother Albert at his bedside, but it proved unavailing and his death followed twenty-four hours later.

Arthur Matter, while in Denver was connected with the First Universalist church and was one of the teachers in the Sunday school. He remembered the church in his will making a bequest of one thousand dollars for its benefit.

PRIVATE TIERNAN'S
XMAS
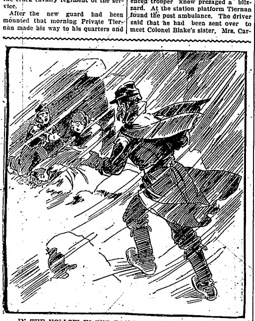
WHISKEY

The roll of the reveille drums and the trumpet's brazen falsetto did not serve in the least to disturb the morose meditations of Private Patrick Francis Tiernan, Seventh United States cavalry, who was walking post at Fort Runyon, Mont., in the gray of that Christmas day morning in the year 1890. Private Patrick Francis Tiernan, Troop K, until day before yesterday a sergeant of twenty-seven years standing, was now walking post like the veriest "rookie" in the Fort Runyon outfit, reduce to the ranks by the finding of a court martial for drunkenness, and that court martial convened by the order of his colonel. And the colonel, the man with whom Tiernan had soldiered all through the years that the officer was rising step by step from the ranks of a subaltern of horse to that of the command of the crack cavalry regiment of the service.

After the new guard had been mounted that morning Private Tiernan made his way to his quarters and without a word to his fellows, left the barracks and headed for the stables. As he passed the door of the commissary the Colonel came out and met him face to face. Tiernan's hand went to his cap in rigid salute.



IN THE HOLLOW IN THE BANK HE SAW THREE FORMS.

"Good morning, Sargeant," said Colonel Blake. The old title slipped out naturally.

"Private Tiernan, sir, now," was the answer in a tone that implied it would be a pleasure to add, "Thanks to you."

"As you will, Tiernan; where are you going?"

"I'm an old guard post; I've walked post all night and I'm going to ride over to Miles City, sir."

"Are you going to drink today, sergeant?"—the title again.

"Private, sir; I don't know; there's not many that care."

"Tiernan, we've soldiered in the same command for nearly thirty years. Yours was a growing fault. A deep interest and a liking sometimes moves a man to do a disagreeable duty. Enough of this, however. I want you to promise me that you won't drink today. Get out of the mud, Tiernan; get out of the mud. Promise me you'll not drink."

PRIVATE PATRICK FRANCIS TIERNAN.

"What's my word worth? I'm not an officer and a gentleman."

"It does not always need a strap on the shoulder to make a gentleman, Tiernan. I've known the chevron and the plain sleeve to do the trick as well. Promise me."

The answer came half sulkily: "Well, if you want me to promise, I will." Then the trooper turned and strode away to the stables, taking no notice of the hand which he knew instinctively was held out to grasp his.

At the stables he threw a saddle on to Joe Hooker, and with a more vicious dig from the spur than the horse had ever before felt from that heel set out at a "charge" pace across the prairie. Miles City came in sight Tiernan rode past the scattered outlying shacks, and reaching the heart of the place made straight for the bar of the "Jolly Trooper." He called for brandy, filled the glass, raised it, and then as if mirrored in its contents he read the words: "I've known the chevron and the plain sleeve to do the trick as well." Tiernan put the liquor back on the bar, paid for it, and turned for the door. Then the thought of the gibes of the recruits came into his mind like a knife. He turned to the bar again, touched the glass, dropped it and then said sharply: "Give me a bottle of brandy." He took the flask outside and put it in his saddle bag. Thus far he had kept the letter of his word.

Tiernan headed Joe Hooker for the railroad station. The wind was soughing along in a way which the experienced trooper knew presaged a blizzard. At the station platform Tiernan found the post ambulance. The driver said that he had been sent over to meet Colonel Blake's sister, Mrs. Carruthers, her son and the Colonel's daughter, Miss Molly Blake.

"They arrived," said the driver in response to Tiernan's question, "on an earlier train than was expected and left for the post in an open wagon before I arrived. Mrs. Carruther's son, who came with her, hired the team, said he knew the way, and would drive the party over. They've had half an hour the start, and if they keep to the new road they can make the post before this blizzard is strong enough to hurt them. It's too late now for me to put back, however, and I'm going to stay here."

Tiernan looked at the sky. The clouds had banked up thickly, and the snow was coming faster and faster, blown by a constantly rising wind. "The last time young Carruthers was at the post," he thought, "the old road was in use." He does not know of the short new one. If he takes the old trail round the bluff they're lost." Then he thought of Molly, whom ten years ago in the far-off Apache country, he had taught to ride. Molly, for whom he had been bodyguard all through her childhood. Without a word to a soul he mounted and struck off into the very teeth of the storm. "Don't fail me this day, Joe Hooker," he said.

The horse, as if in answer, galloped steadily forward. The air seemed turned to ice, yet the wind kept ever rising. They came at last to the parting of the old and the new roads. Tiernan slipped from his horse, and at a part of the now disused trail, sheltered slightly by an embankment, he found the fresh marks of a wheel. Carruthers had taken the old roundabout road. The blizzard was at its height. Tiernan blinded his horse and bending low over the saddle kept him to his task with encouraging words. For an hour they kept steadily on in the face of the tempest. To any others than that plains-tried soldier and steed the blizzard would have meant death. He had hoped to overtake those whom he sought in time to take them back to the new path. The hope was given over long since. Suddenly Joe Hooker stopped. There was an obstruction on the trail. Tiernan slid from the saddle, his limbs already stiffened with the cold, and with one hand on his steed's bridle he led the way gropingly for a few steps. There he found an open carriage empty and with two horses overcome in the trail. Tiernan's heart nearly failed him. He knew he was almost on the point where the trail rounded the bluff. Perhaps the carriage occupants had sought shelter under the lee of the embankment. Toward it he made his painful way. A cry came faintly to his ear above the howling of the storm. He stumbled on with his left hand still grasping tightly Joe Hooker's bridle. In another moment the steep embankment shut out some of the fury of the wind and the driving needlelike snow ceased for a moment to blind his vision. Before him in a hollow of the bank he saw three forms. Two were prostrate, the other was kneeling, and the soldier realized that the white face of young Carruthers was turned toward him, while from the lips came the smothered cry, "Sergeant Tiernan."

Tiernan stumbled forward and sank down beside the motionless figures, half covered with snow.

"Save them," came in anguished tones from the boy. Tiernan raised the nearest form and looked into the face of Molly Blake. Exposure had well-nigh done its work. Then a thought flashed into his mind, and with an action as quick as the thought he sprang to the side of his horse and thrust his hand into the saddle bag. There was the bottle of brandy intact. In a trice a quantity of the stimulant was forced between the lips of the storm's victims and signs of returning consciousness were almost immediate. Tiernan used his saddle blanket and overcoat as a further protection and soon succeeded in getting the three into a still more sheltered nook. After long waiting the storm subsided, and then came the thump of hoof falls. A minute later a troop of cavalry, led by Colonel Blake, broke round the edge of the bluff. The Colonel slipped from his horse and took his daughter into his arms. The troopers started a fire, and when its genial warmth had made itself felt the story was told in a few words.

"Sergeant Tiernan," said Colonel Blake, "that bottle of brandy saved three lives."

"Maybe," returned Tiernan, but you may thank what you said this morning for there being a drop in it."

Patrick Francis Tiernan, retired first sergeant K troop, Seventh cavalry, wears a massive gold watch. Inscribed on the inside of one case are these words: "From Molly Blake to Sergeant Tiernan, Non-Commissioned Officer and Gentleman." Within the back case Sergeant Tiernan had engraved these: "I've known the chevron or the plain sleeve to do the trick as well. Christmas Day, 1890."

The Christmas Tree.

Says an enthusiastic mother: "I don't believe there is anything on the face of the earth that gives more pleasure to the average child than a Christmas tree. It does make a good deal of trouble for the elders, but surely it is worth while! One is only a child such a little while, and one is grown up so very long! We grown up people are very well satisfied to have our yearly presents just given to us, but surely we all can remember how the value of the gifts once increased in proportion to the way they were given. Was anything more delightful than emptying a stocking, especially when each thing was wrapped up and tied. The presents were so much more desirable that way than if they had just been laid out on a chair or table. And if they came on a Christmas tree, words cannot express how much that enhanced their value. Surely that childish delight repaid all the hard work that fell to the elders' share, and the remembrance of it now goes a long way to lighten the work of it all for our own small boys and girls.

"A big tree is glorious, but, after all, the Christmas we always looked back on as the very best was the one where we each had a little tree of our own. They were from about six inches high, for the baby, up to three feet for father. They were planted in lovely pots, and were decorated with little bits of candles and cornucopias, on each tree a different color. There was even one tree for the pets, and no single one was forgotten. Every dog, cat, rabbit, guinea pig, or doll had a gift, with its own name marked on the outside. Truly that was a Christmas! I only wish I had the nine little rascals to make all the happiness for, and the means to do it. Children are endless trouble; but how forlorn it is not to have them to trouble for!"

Rosie Wilcox's Turkey.

Rosie Wilcox was a little girl of 12 years. She lived with her parents on a thrifty farm in the Mississippi valley. She had one turkey of which she thought a great deal. He had always been very tame and was a great pet with all the children who lived on the surrounding farms. His name was Bronzie. Rosie named all of her pets, according to their most striking feature and his color was bronze. As all Mr. Wilcox's turkeys were young, Rosie never feared for hers.

One day near Christmas Mr. Wilcox said:

"I'm ruther sorry, little one, but I'm a gonter sell yer turkey next week."

Rosie was dumfounded, and her father, seeing the pained expression on her face turned away.

When Rosie had partially recovered her senses she sat down on the bottom rung of the ladder that led to the granary and thought. At last a bright thought struck her. She would sell him to Farmer Max. She knew he would take good care of him, as he was making a collection of beautiful fowls of all kinds, and was not Bronzie beautiful? Certainly.

Arriving at this conclusion, which greatly comforted her, she got up and walked slowly toward the house, where mamma had been calling her for at least 15 minutes. Next morning after a troubled night, Rosie arose, and dressing quickly, hurried down the road with her turkey. She paused in front of the large white farm house to recover her breath, and then went on to the barns, where she saw the farmer milking his cows. He was very glad to take the turkey and promised Rosie a good price for him.

Mr. Wilcox did not see his daughter until that noon, when he said:

"Yer turkey didn't like his new home, so he come a-trottin' inter the yard 'safternoon, 's though he owned the whole world."

Rosie could have cried, but she only hung her head.

"Never mind, Rosie," said her father, "I guess yer two good friends fer sure, and I guess, too, that I won't part you."

Where Isinglass Comes From.

The best isinglass comes from Russia, where it is obtained from the giant sturgeon which inhabits the Caspian Sea and the rivers which run into it. The fish often grows to the length of twenty-five feet, and from its air-bladder the isinglass is prepared. A great deal is made along the Amazon, in Brazil, but it is very coarse and inferior, and is used for the refining of liquors and similar purposes.—London Globe.

FOLSOM, Custer Co., South Dakota, Dec. 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. H. D. Hyde has given for publication a letter expressing her unbounded gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills for the double cure of herself and little daughter.

Mrs. Hyde has been troubled with pains in her heart for over three years and for a long time her little girl suffered from weak kidneys. The grateful lady does not seem able to find words strong enough to express her gratitude. She has written the following:

I cannot say too much in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the greatest kidney and heart medicine I ever used. I had been troubled for over three years with a severe pain in my heart, which entirely disappeared after I had taken a few doses of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I also gave them to my little girl, whose kidneys had been weak, and she commenced to improve from the very first dose. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful medicine. I would be pleased to have this, my statement, published, as I feel it my duty to let others know just what the Pills will do for them.

HOPE FOR THE NEGRO.

Free and Easy Life of the Black Man Contrasted With That of the White Man.

It is strange that two races, working side by side should possess so many opposite traits of character. The white man has strong will and convictions, and is set in his ways. He lives an indoor monotonous life, restraining himself like a Puritan, and is inclined to melancholy. The prevalence of Populism throughout the South is nothing but the outcome of this morbid tendency. Farmers and merchants are entirely absorbed in their business, and the women, especially the married women, contrast with the women of Germany, France, and even England, in their indoor life and disinclination to mingle with the world outside. Public parks and public concerts, such as are found in Europe, which call out husband, wife and children for a few hours of rest and communion with their friends, are almost unknown in the South. The few entertainments that receive sanction generally exclude all but the well-to-do, by the cost of admission. The life of the poor in town and country is bleak and bare to the last degree.

Contrasting with this tendency is the free-and-easy-life of the blacks. The burdens of the present and future sit lightly upon their shoulders. They love all the worldly amusements; in their homes they are free entertainers, and in their fondness for conversation and love of street life they are equal to the French and Italians.

May we not hope that the conflict of these two opposite races is working out some advantages to both, and that the final result will justify all the conflict has cost?—Prof. Gerome Dowd, in the Century.

American Nervousness.

A man of good habits and regular life, taking a judicious amount of rest and recreation, need be none the worse mentally and physically for a rather intense concentration upon the work of his life, while that work is going on. Some of the world's greatest thinkers, in lines where the most perfect concentration and specialization were required, have been men of perfect health and nerves and of long and vigorous life. But they have not indulged in fads and follies, their recreations have been simple, they have not undertaken to compass the whole field of human effort, and they have kept their lives free from excesses in all directions.

Dr. Wettler thinks that it is the continuity of work and worry that do harm, rather than the work and worry in themselves. In a measure, this is true; but many persons work for that which does them no good and worry about that which is of no account. If they are made nervous, we do not see why the fault should be charged to civilization. In this respect they are distinctly uncivilized.—New Bedford Standard.

Only a Woman.

The good man, weighing a hundred stone, knocked timidly at the portal of the culinary department, and as the door swung heavily back upon its hinges, doffed his tattered (we must omit the firm name, as this is not an ad) hat, and piteously whispered:

"Kind lady—"

"I'm not kind," she interrupted, rudely.

"Excuse me, lady—"

"Don't lady me!" was her quick response.

"Yer don't mean ter say yer only a woman?" he asked, scaredly.

"That's what I am!" she shouted.

And, as the heavy bolts shot back into their places the vagrant took another reef in the clothesline about his waist and sighed:

"Oh, my! why didn't I take notice of dat bicycle on de stoop before I spoke."—Leslie's Weekly.

The Decay of Oratory.

Last winter the Hon. Henry Watterson of Kentucky sat in a retired corner of Chamberlain's, drinking high balls, so they say, when Senator Thurston walked over to his table.

"What is the matter, Watterson?" he inquired. "You look down in the mouth."

"I was thinking," said the great editor, "of the decay of oratory in this country. Years ago we had many notable orators, Clay, Calhoun, Webster and others—but to-day you can count them on the fingers of one hand. Why, Thurston, I know of but three men in all of the United States who are entitled to be called orators."

"Who are they?" inquired Thuston.

"Yourself, myself and George R. Peck."

The senator from Nebraska smiled contemptuously and remarked:

"What in thunder is the use of dragging George Peck in at all? He is not here at all."—Washington Times.

Not Her Father's Friend.

A doting Chicago father, whose first name is Arthur, has a little daughter four years old. The family recently moved to a new locality in the city, only a few doors away from a street car barn, where several mules are kept.

The next morning after arriving at the new home, the little girl heard one of the street car mules braying. It was the first time she had ever heard a mule bray, and she listened for a long time before she said:

"Mamma, is that one of papa's friends calling him?"

"No," said the mother, "I hear no one calling your father."

"Yes, there is," said the small girl. "Listen, now; don't you hear him calling 'Ar—thur, Ar—thur, Ar—thur?' "

"Oh, yes," replied the mother. "But that isn't one of your father's friends. He has more sense than most of your father's friends."—Chicago Tribune.

MRS. BREWER RECOMMENDS PERUNA FOR GRIP AND FEMALE CATARRH.

The Homeof Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer at Westerly, R. I.

In a letter to Dr. Hartman concerning the merits of Pe-ru-na, Mrs. Brewer writes, among other things:

Westerly, R. I.

"Dear Dr. Hartman—I find Pe-ru-na a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once. There is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na. As for la grippe, there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na.

"I am among the sick a great deal in our city and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In all cases of extreme weakness I use Pe-ru-na with perfect confidence of a good result. In cases of weakness peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and miseries which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by this excellent remedy. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book.

"Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer."

Pe-ru-na will cure the worst cases of catarrh. La grippe is acute epidemic catarrh, for which Pe-ru-na is a specific.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, New Lisbon, Ohio, suffered for many years with chronic catarrh of the lungs, head and throat; continuous cough; many physicians failed to cure. Permanently cured by Pe-ru-na. Thousands of testimonials could be produced. A valuable treatise on catarrh sent free by The Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O.

NOTE IS NOT SIGNED

PRONOUNCED HITCH IN THE CHINESE NEGOTIATIONS.

Foreign Ministers Say the Note Will Be Signed in the Near Future, but the Chinese Believe That It Will Not Be Signed for Some Time—Chinese Look Upon the United States as the Only Power Which Really Desires to Maintain the Integrity of the Chinese Empire.

Pekin, Dec. 22.—Once more there is a pronounced hitch in the proceedings. The preliminary joint note has not yet been signed. Mr. Conger, the United States minister says he does not believe that there are sufficient reasons why it should not be signed in the near future and Sir Ernest Satow, the British minister, takes the same view. Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, speaking for Germany, believes that the existing agreement will be signed sooner or later. The other ministers also say that they consider the probabilities in favor of signing.

Chinese sources of information, however, say there is reliable authority for the statement that there is very little chance of the note being signed for some time. As a matter of fact the members of the staff of Li Hung Chang believe that the note will eventually have to be drawn up either in Europe or America, probably the latter, because they claim that has had most to do with the existing modification of the various forms of harshness. The United States is looked upon by the Chinese as the only power really desiring to retain the integrity of the Chinese empire. The other powers are regarded as desirous of breaking it up, with the possible exception of Russia, who, the Chinese think, merely favors a postponement in order eventually to secure a larger share.

Grave fears are felt regarding the health of Li Hung Chang, owing to a severe cold that he caught on the day he visited Gen. Chaffee. It is said that he is better to-day, but there is a fear of pleurisy, which, at his advanced age, might be fatal. It is generally believed the Chinese get their information as to what is done at the meetings of the envoys through some one connected with the Russian legation.

Delay Charged to Washington.

London, Dec. 22. — "The delay in signing the preliminary joint note," says the Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post, wiring yesterday, "is due to an objection from Washington. Minister Conger, however, has telegraphed his government urging a speedy settlement on the ground that German military control is worse than Chinese management. Prince Ching says the empress dowager and Emperor Kwang Su are both anxious to leave Sinan Fu, as the accommodations there are poor and their environment unfavorable. He points out that the private and government property seized in Pekin is quite equivalent in value to the indemnity of the powers.

GAVE BOGUS DIVORCES.

Henry Zeimer, Head of a Fraudulent Bureau, Gets a Ten-Year Sentence.

New York, Dec. 22. — Recorder Goff sentenced Henry Zeimer, one of the heads of a fraudulent divorce bureau, to ten years in state prison, and James Holden, alias Frank Wilson, a professional co-respondent, to three years in state prison. Mrs. Byrde Herrick and Mary Thompson, who said they had testified falsely in divorce cases, were allowed to go under suspension of sentence.

Currency Plan.

Washington, Dec. 22. — Chairman Southard of the house committee on coinage will call a meeting soon after the holidays to take up the bill suggested by the New York chamber of commerce and introduced by Mr. Levy of New York, providing for the exchangeability of gold for all kinds of money when presented at the treasury. It is expected that hearings will be given to Secretary Gage and representatives of commercial interests relative to the proposed change.

Chance for "Terrible Terry."

London, Dec. 22. — Ben Jordan, the English feather-weight, has accepted the offer of the National Sporting Club of London and has signed articles to fight Terry McGovern. The articles call for a twenty-round bout at 122 pounds for a purse of $3,750, of which the winner is to receive $3,000 and the loser $750. If McGovern consents to meet Jordan it will take place on June 3. The fighters will weigh in at 2 o'clock on the day of the fight.

To Pension Employes.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—A project for pensioning employes and paying benefits in case of sickness, disability or death is under consideration by the directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. The arrangement contemplates assessing the employes for only part—probably half—of the funds necessary to carry out the system, the rest of the expenses to be borne by the company.

Went to the Bottom.

Portsmouth, Va., Dec. 22.—Cut down by a big ocean steamship, name unknown, the little schooner Emblem, Capt. George B. Marshall, went to the bottom of Hampton Roads. The sailors reached the deck just in time to seize the dory which was being towed astern and made their way to Old Point Comfort.

Starved to Death.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Clasped in each other's arms, Margaret Klein, eighty-six years old, and Charles Klein, aged fifty-five, mother and son, were found dead in their little hovel by the police. Starvation is thought to have caused the death of the couple.

Jealousy Causes Double Tragedy.

Carrollton, Ky., Dec. 22. — Arthur Taylor, a farmer, shot and killed his wife and then himself. Taylor lived at Milton, Ky., twelve miles south of here. Jealousy was the cause.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

Takes a Recess Until After the Holidays.

Washington, Dec. 22. — No business was transacted by the senate. The news of the death of Mrs. William P. Frye, wife of the president pro tem of the senate, was conveyed officially to the body, and out of respect to her memory immediate adjournment was taken until Jan. 3, 1901. Senator Fairbanks called the body to order and Rev. Dr. W. H. Milburn pronounced a beautiful invocation. The secretary then read a letter from Senator Frye appointing Senator Fairbanks presiding officer during his absence from the senate. Meantime a conference of senators had been held as to the order of business. The reading of the journal was suspended and at 12:05 the senate adjourned.

In the House.

The house was in session only fifteen minutes, when it adjourned out of respect to the memory of Representative Wise of Virginia, who died at his home at Williamsburg, early in the day. The customary resolutions were adopted and a committee of seventeen members was appointed to attend the funeral. Under the concurrent resolution adopted a few days ago the adjournment was taken until Jan. 3.

SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT.

Gen. Lee Says the American Flag Will Remain in Cuba.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—A special to the Record from St. Louis says: Gen. Fitzhugh Lee made a speech on "Cuba" before the members of the Merchants' Exchange here which caused much astonishment and is creating a great deal of speculation as to the deep significance which an unguarded remark may have in relation to the future of Cuba. Gen. Lee, with his staff and party, arrived here yesterday and were received by the prominent men of the city on the floor of the exchange. When he responded to the address of welcome he touched upon Cuba, reviewing the war, the destruction of the Spanish fleet, the conquest and surrender of the island, and finally the evacuation of the Spanish troops. Then came the utterance which caused so much astonishment. He said: "And now the Stars and Stripes float over Matanzas, over El Caney, over Morro, over Havana, and, I'll tell you on the quiet, that the flag is going to stay there."

VENEZUELA IS MEEK.

Promises That American Interests Will Be Protected.

Washington, Dec. 22.— Assurances have been received from the diplomatic representatives of the Venezuelan government that American interests will be protected in the contest between the miners and Aspinwall concessionists. The formal order assigning the heroic old Hartford, commanded by Capt. Hawley, to a Venezuelan port evidently has accomplished the desired effect. United States Minister Loomis has been authorized to insist upon American rights in the dispute between the rival companies holding liens from the government for mining privileges.

SCHLEY TO RETIRE SOON.

Admiral Will Be Ordered to Return Home Next Spring.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley will be detached from duty as commander-in-chief of the South Atlantic station during the coming spring and will be ordered to return to the United States. Schley's detachment will be in anticipation of his retirement next October, when he reaches the age of sixty-two years. He has served on the South Atlantic station since November of last year.

Murder at Santiago.

Santiago, Cuba, Dec. 22.—The third murder within three weeks has occurred at Cubitas, near this city. The body of a storekeeper there was discovered with the head horribly battered with some blunt instrument. The store had been robbed. The police say that the murderer lived in the city, as the deed was not committed with a machete, which is the weapon universally employed by countrymen.

Little Bat's Slayer Held.

Chadron, Neb., Dec. 22.—The preliminary hearing of J. W. Haguewood, the Crawford saloonkeeper, for killing "Little Bat," the noted Sioux Indian scout, was held yesterday. The defense attempted to prove that "Little Bat" was a quarrelsome, drinking man, who always carried a six-shooter and was looking for trouble. The purpose was to make it a bailable case, but the court refused bail.

Vote of Confidence.

Paris, Dec. 22.—The chamber of deputies at the request of M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the premier, by a vote of 309 to 192, decided to postpone M. Lasies' motion to interpellate the government on the Maj. Cuignet incident until all the other orders of the day are disposed of, thus shelving the Nationalist attack indefinitely and giving the government a vote of confidence.

Stabbed to Death.

Crystal Falls, Mich., Dec. 22.—Fedalia Cesche, clerk of Mansfield township and a prominent Italian, was stabbed to death at the Mansfield mines. His slayer is yet at large. Two men have been arrested on suspicion.

London, Dec. 22.—A dispatch to the Times from Pekin says that the health of Li Hung Chang, owing to his advanced age, is causing much anxiety.

SENDS MORE TROOPS

GREAT BRITAIN REALIZES THE SERIOUSNESS OF SITUATION.

War Department Orders a Large Increase in the Force to Operate Against the Boers—Australia and New Zealand Asked to Send More Men—Detachments Will Leave as Fast as They Are Formed—Reports of Several British Victories Cause Better Feeling.

London, Dec. 22.—The seriousness of the situation in South Africa is indicated by an announcement by the war office that a large increase will be made in the force to operate against the Boers. Australia and New Zealand are asked to send further contingents. The announcement is as follows:

"In view of the general position in South Africa the following reinforcements of mounted troops have been arranged for: Eight hundred will start next week, two cavalry regiments have been ordered to leave as soon as the transports are ready. The colonial police will be increased to 10,000. Detachments will leave as fast as they are formed. Further drafts of cavalry will be dispatched at once. Australia and New Zealand have been invited to Send Further Contingents.

Three thousand regular horses beyond the usual monthly supply have been contracted for."

A better feeling was caused by reports of several British victories. It is reported at Verndale Gen. French has routed 2,500 Boers with four guns and a pompom. Verndale is twenty miles north of Krugersdorp. The fight took place Dec. 19. The British had fourteen wounded and the Boers fled in disorder with about fifty killed. The Boers attacked Zunfontein Dec. 18 but were beaten off. A dispatch from De Aar, Cape Colony, says that the yeomanry have driven the Boers out of Houtkraal, the enemy retiring westward. Gen. Baden-Powell will start from Cape Town for the Transvaal today. The Boers at Barberton, killing an inspector and others. Martial law will be proclaimed in Worcester, Wellington and Stellenbosch.

The London Daily Mail says: "We understand that private reliable advices have been received in London, to the effect that virtually all the districts of Cape Colony in the vicinity of Orange river are in more or less open revolt, and that there is likely to be sharp fighting on a rather large scale before the invasion is crushed. The tactics of the Boers in rallying as many as possible of the Dutch [illegible] back country to their cause are proving successful."

No Compromise, Says Kruger.

William T. Stead has just returned from The Hague, where he had a long conference with Mr. Kruger, and has ascertained at first hand the views of Mr. Kruger and his counsellors as to the present situation and future prospects. Mr. Stead says nothing is decided about his visit to America at present. Present Kruger has not abandoned all hope of securing the support of the governments of the civilized world. The Boers will not listen to any proposals for a compromise. They are unanimous. Failing independence or arbitration they will prefer to die fighting.

BUSY IN COLLERIES.

Great Rush of Work to Make Up for the Late Strike.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22. — The increased demand for coal as a result of the strike in the anthracite region has caused a rush of work in all the collieries. During the month of November the total production of hard coal was 4,944,799 tons, and the operators expect to equal this output during the present month. The stock on hand is very light and some of the companies are not able to lay up any coal for the reason that as fast as it is mined it is sent to points for delivery.

NEW CUP DEFENDER.

Builders of the Genesee Will Enter a Wooden Yacht.

Quincy, Mass., Dec. 22.—C. C. Hanley of the Hanley Manufacturing company of this city, builders of many of the fast yachts, including the American victor Genesee in the Canadian cup races of 1899 and 1900 at Chicago and Toronto, has entered the American cup defender lists and will form a syndicate to build a wooden centerboard yacht to compete in the trial races.

Gov. Wolcott Dead.

Boston, Dec. 22.—Former Gov. Roger Wolcott died at his residence in this city yesterday. He became ill with typhoid fever several weeks ago but reports from his bedside indicated nothing alarming until the latter part of last week when new complications produced a change for the worse. From that time until the end came bulletins of his condition which were more hopeful, though hardly reassuring. His physicians said that death resulted from extreme weakness due to the passing of the disease.

Murdered a Whole Family.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 22.—John Morrison murdered a whole family in the Moosomin district in the Canadian Northwest and has been sentenced to be hanged. His case has been considered by the cabinet and the law will be allowed to take its course. He will be executed Jan. 22.

Attorney General Sheets of Ohio announces that he has decided to request the supreme court to dismiss all the oil trust cases brought by former Attorney General Monette.

SENATOR FRYE'S WIFE DEAD.

Heart Trouble Causes Sudden Demise of Maine Statesman's Spouse.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Mrs. William P. Frye, wife of the president pro tem of the senate, died suddenly yesterday at the Hamilton hotel. Mrs. Frye on Tuesday last suffered an acute attack of indigestion and had since been ill. When she arose yesterday morning she was apparently much improved and partook of breakfast. Shortly after leaving the table the end came without the slightest warning, heart failure causing death. The body was taken to Lewiston, Me., the home of Senator Frye.

AMBASSADOR TO AUSTRIA.

Bartlett Tripp May Be Returned to His Former Post.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Bartlett Tripp of South Dakota, brother-in-law of the late Senator Davis, is believed to be slated for the vacant ambassadorship at Vienna. Big Social Event at Washington to Be Held in the Pension Building.

Washington, Dec. 22. — Secretary Hitchcock has granted the inaugural committee permission to hold the ball and entertainments incident to the coming inauguration of President McKinley in the pension building. IOWA BOY KIDNAPED.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Tonhose the Victim.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 22.—The nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tonhose of Judd, a small town near here, was kidnaped on Tuesday. Although the father of the boy has had detectives and the police on the case who have made a diligent search, nothing has been heard of him. It is expected that a proposition will be received from the kidnapers in a day or so as to the matter of ransom. Mr. Tonhose offers a reward of $500 for the return of the boy or $1,000 for the apprehension of the abductors.

Osakis Creamery Re-established.

TURNING OVER A NEW LEAF
A NEW YEAR'S STORY

New Year's Eve, and at home. This is a cozy little den of mine, just as it looks now; quite eclipses anything I ever see at the club; books, pipes, easy chairs, a cheerful fire in the grate; pictures, busts, my well-beloved etchings all about the walls.

What's the matter with you, old man, tonight? Why are you taking an inventory of these surroundings on this last night of the year? Everybody thinks you are tired of them, don't you know, for you spend very little time in their midst, says some provoking little voice. (Wonder if it's my conscience.)

Dorothy is up stairs, the servants are out; as soon as she finishes the sewing of a button on Johnnie's refractory trousers she will come down, she says, and watch the old year out; being evidently well pleased over the prospect of a club night of our own, a little "Home, Sweet Home" sort of an arrangement.

It seems that Johnnie is the only member of our family not a member of a club. Dorothy simply holds on to the little shaver by the collar, tied to her apron strings he is, and I am glad of it.

Can I ever forget the day when our neighborhood took on a sudden quiet? The question arose, where are those boys? Dorothy and I knew all about it, for were we not invited to become honorary members of their club, "The Ollapodrida?" We helped to foot the bills and evinced an interest in the affairs of the club; we lent them ten cents to buy material to reseat an old worn-out chair; there was another item; twenty-five cents for lumber, etc., and last, but not least, and that which caused Dorothy much suffering, were sundry pieces of rope to be furnished with all the paraphernalia of a trapeze arrangement, preparatory to meanderings aloft, all of which caused a rush of blood to my head, as I thought of these venturesome boys, three of them at work daily, experimenting with the center of gravity, walking on their heads being the objective point apparently.

THIS IS A COZY LITTLE DEN.

We are happily rejoicing these days, however, in a more recent occupant of the family cradle, who so far walks feet downward after the fashion of mortals.

As time goes on, the children's youthful exploits, with the accompanying worries of their elders, fade into oblivion, as the more serious aspect confronts us.

The Ollapodrida members of my family have taken unto themselves a few extra years; two of these aforesaid members are looking collegeward, and I seem to worry about them in a wonderful way quite unlike myself.

The bread and butter question confronts me? What profession will be theirs? Are they sufficiently strong in purpose to resist this or that?

The day will come when Dorothy and I cannot shield them or stand beneath them and the cold world; we won't be here to settle the little accounts or encounters, or watch the little cotillions they are going to have with the dwellers of this mundane sphere.

Then comes the question over again: "Well, old fellow, what's the matter now? Can't you let the boys alone, and let them fight it out just as you did?" Some truth in that, I answer. "I will wait until Dorothy comes and I'll ask her, just for curiosity, what she thinks of my past, and the general outlook."

In part I am going to turn over a new leaf.

Here is a volume of Longfellow beside me on the table; he is so human, you know, and I will close my eyes, open the book (a litite game of chance, you see), and on the page where my finger rests I will try if by chance a word of comfort come to me, that would hit my case.

I seem to have a case of the blues; probably staying away from the club on this convivial occasion is not agreeing with me.

"Shut your eyes, open the book," says the little exhorter, that unseen individual.

Presto—change—O, what meets my eye? Will it be some dire prophecy or—? Here it is under my forefinger: "A Shadow." It reads:

I said to myself if I were dead,
What would befall these children?
What would be
Their fate, who are now looking up to me
For help and furtherance? Their lives,
I said,
Would it be a volume wherein I have read
But the first chapters, and no longer see
To read the rest of their dear history
So full of beauty and so full of dread.
Be comforted; the world is very old,
And generations pass, as they have passed,
A troop of shadows moving with the sun;
Thousands of times has the old tale been told;
The world belongs to those who come the last,
They will find hope and strength as we have done.

Was ever answer sent to a mortal man more clearly?

I think I'm sent for; there's something besides old Father Time after me, surely. Here is the very answer to my dismals as to those boys and their doings. But here comes Dorothy, singing, apparently in a very cheerful mood.

"This is perfectly lovely, George Augustus.

"Johnnie's trousers are all right for tomorrow, and I have been looking over my precious tin box, and I find such lovely bits of literature and all sorts; suppose we look them over tonight."

Perhaps Dorothy noticed an unusual expression on my manly countenance, for she paused and said: "What are you thinking about? What has this old year been saying to you? Are you having a retrospective sort of revival meeting all by yourself?"

"Only a few ideas have struck me, Dorothy. I rather like this den of mine, especially tonight, and one or two articles in these books here seem to have been written especially for me, and an uncomfortable little voice has been questioning me. A thought strikes me that we, you and I, have drifted apart rather more than I ever dreamed we could. There has been a sort of 'We fellows at the club' air and manner about me, that I really think now, as I sit here, has been a foolishness on my part that I shall endeavor to discontinue; a sort of desire to be 'in with the boys' and 'off with my wife.' I hope, Dorothy, that you do not think my past is really a dreadful one to look back upon."

"O, no," Dorothy replied, with something of a twinkle in her eyes; "but, then, you know, you might be more of a saint, if you tried, dear."

"And perhaps, most noble and adorable (my temper rising) and twentieth century wife, if I should give up my Sunday evenings at the club, possibly you may be willing to sacrifice a few of those insufferable 'teas' and bring an appetite uncontaminated with such diet as sipping frappes, Russian teas and chocolate to a respectable, cozy dinner with your George Augustus; and," (pausing for breath) "don't be angry; couldn't you leave out that tiresome, quarrelsome card party and await my return with unruffled nerves, for instance, meet me at the door just as you used to do, little wife?" (growing a little more tender).

DOROTHY IS REALLY ELOQUENT.

"Why, whatever can be the matter with you, George Augustus? It is only a case of too many clubs in the family, that is all; easily remedied, you know. If this is to be a Home club tonight, let us invoke the spirit of the New Year here, right under this roof; let us stand here, and with the right hand uplifted vow that naught shall come between thee and me, George Augustus and Dorothy; we will reach that land of trust and confidence that requires no weapon, not even a club, to create or quell a disturbance." Dorothy is really eloquent.

"Bring down the tin box, Dorothy; we are 'the Ollapodrida club' (the tin box, Dorothy and I) in memory of those boys who are trying another sort of trapeze swinging high or low with the wings of ambition, up to greater heights."

By the way, Dorothy sketches and paints. I will give her a subject, earth, sky and water, the soft green turf, the blue ethereal, the hazy mountain top, while the lazy lapping waves touch the eager feet of the climbers yet in the valley as they stand on the shore twixt earth and sea, girded and armed for the steep ascent to the shrine on the distant heights.

Send them wings, O guardian angels, and give me sight,
I cannot read the all of their dear history,
Vanish old year;
Forward, the new!

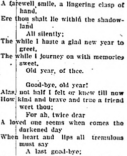
The New Year Spirit.

The return of New Year's day invites many people to the most somber reflections. Undoubtedly most of us can find abundant occasion for these, but there is such a thing as pushing self-examination and self-condemnation to the point of discouragement. The best temper with which we can enter upon the new year is that of faith, faith in God and faith in ourselves through His help. It is about as certain as anything can be that the new year will bring us new experiences. Our courage, our capacity for endurance, our steadiness of character and power of resistance is to be tested. At the end of the year we are going to be nobler men and women than we are today; or we shall have deteriorated morally, and forever afterward there will be narrowing opportunities. While we think of the latter alternative it is well to strengthen our hearts by the former. Let us believe that we are not going to fail and we have taken a long step towards success. When another New Year's day comes around we are going to be able to reckon solid gains in character won through the trials and temptations and emergencies of the year's experience.—Boston Watchman.



Good-bye, old year!
We've journeyed on together many days,
And now behold the parting of our ways
Is very near;
With thoughts of mingled gladness and of dread,
I see the winding way that I must tread
To Future Lands;
For thee awaits the realm of shadows deep—
The Silent Land of years that lie asleep
With folded hands.

Good-bye, old year!
A few more steps ere we forever part—
A few more words that wake the throbbing heart
To hope and fear;
A farewell smile, a lingering clasp of hand,
Ere thou shalt lie within the shadow-land
All silently;
The while I haste a glad new year to greet,
The while I journey on with memories sweet,
Old year, of thee.

Good-bye, old year!
Alas, not half I felt or knew till now
How kind and brave and true a friend wert thou;
For ah, twice dear
A loved one seems when comes the darkened day
When heart and lips all tremulous must say
A last good-bye;
Yet, though thy friendly face no more I see,
The memories sweet my heart has kept of thee.
—Alice Jean Cleator.

Tragic.

"I shall not see you till another year
Has dawned," he said.
Oh, fickle maid! she turned not pale with fear—
She laughed instead.
This seems a tragic lay, till we remember
It occurred the thirty-first day of December.
—N. Y. Truth.

None to Turn Over.

"I thought you were going to turn over a new leaf, John," she said.

"I was," he replied, "but I find I can't."

"Why not?"

"There won't be any new leaves until spring."—Chicago Post.

A Charmed Life.

The scenery along the Kentucky river above and below Harrodsburg has been justly compared to the highlands of the Hudson. Towering cliffs hundreds of feet in height impress the beholder. In "Historical Sketches of Kentucky" an incident is told of one of the highest of these.

Jotham Strout was hoeing corn in the bottom just opposite the ferry, when his attention was attracted by a rattling noise above his head. Looking up, he was staggered at seeing a man tumbling down the fearful precipice, now touching and grasping at a twig, now at a root, without being able to check himself. Finally, with a crashing of limbs, he landed in the top of a buckeye tree about 50 feet above the general level of the bottom.

Mr. Strout ran to the place with all haste, dreading to find a dead man and not doubting he would be terribly injured if alive, for the distance the man had fallen was 170 feet, and from the last point where he had touched the rock to the top of the tree where he lodged was 45 feet.

Fancy Mr. Strout's surprise, then, to find the man standing erect at the foot of the tree, feeling of his arms and body.

"Are you hurt?" cried Mr. Strout.

"That's what I'm trying to find out, my friend," was the answer. "It's my impression that I am alive, but rather sore."

Not a bone was broken, and despite a few bruises the man seemed to be as sound as before the terrible fall.

"That fellow bore a charmed life," was Mr. Strout's remark whenever he told the story.

Leighton and the Poor Student.

Of Leighton's hearty, eager helpfulness many instances might be given. Here is one. After a certain prize day at the academy a student was passing through the first room on his way to the entrance. He looked the picture of dejection and disappointed wretchedness—poorly and shabbily dressed and slinking away as if he wished to pass out of the place unnoticed. Millais and Leighton, walking arm in arm, came along, pictures of prosperity.

Leighton caught sight of the poor, downcast student. Leaving Millais, he darted across the vestibule to him and, taking the student's arm, drew him back into the first room and made him sit down on the ottoman beside him. Putting his arm on the top of the ottoman and resting his head on his hand, Leighton began to talk as he alone could talk, pouring forth volumes of earnest, rapid utterances, as if everything in the world depended on his words conveying what he wanted them to convey. He went on and on. The shabby figure gradually seemed to pull itself together, and at last when they both rose he seemed to have become another creature. Leighton shook hands with him, and the youth went on his way rejoicing.

It is certain that if other help than advice were needed it was given. But it was the extraordinary zest and vitality which Leighton put into his help which made it unlike any other. He fought every one's cause as others fight their own.—London Telegraph.

Oxford's Witty Bishop.

Two stories are attributed in The Railway Magazine to the witty bishop of Oxford. He was once talking to some boys in a school and said to them: "Now, my boys, I dare say you think it's a very fine thing to be a bishop. But I assure you I'm a very busy man. I have to go about all over my diocese, and I haven't time to study like you have. In fact, nearly all my study has to be confined to only one book. It begins with a 'B.' Do you know what it is?" "The Bible, sir; the Bible," shouted the boys all together. "No," replied the bishop, with a merry twinkle in his eye. "It's called 'Bradshaw!'"

The other story is still better. On one occasion when he alighted from the train at Wheatley, the station for Cuddesden palace, an officious porter rushed up to him and asked, "Any articles in the van, my lord?" "Articles," said the bishop grimly. "Yes, 39 articles." Off hurried the porter and worried the guard almost out of his senses by the way he searched the van and detained the train. Presently he came back to the bishop with a crestfallen expression of countenance. "There are only seven, my lord." "Only seven? Ah, you're a Dissenter then, I should think."

Unique In Their Alignment.

The highest of the Tennessee mountains is the Unaka range, and its highest peak is Rattlesnake, the giant that stands above the Cherokee Indian reservation over 7,000 feet. Twenty-two peaks measure about 6,000 feet. A remarkable fact is that some of these peaks, standing directly opposite each other, measure exactly the same height, while others come within a few feet of a common height.—Chicago Record.

Clothes and the Man.

If a Filipino enters the house of a European living in an unassuming way, he will not believe that the European is either wealthy or wise, and, although his manner may be correct, it will not be humble. On the other hand, if he visits an ignorant man who indulges in great splendor, he will at once become exceedingly respectful.

Mr. Phelps Whitmarsh, who in The Outlook gives his experiences in the islands, tells the story of a wealthy provincial visiting Manila for the first time, who asked to be presented to the governor general.

When he reached the palace, he found the governor taking coffee on his piazza, dressed comfortably in a white cotton suit. The Filipino requested that some favor be extended to his district, and his request was granted. He then withdrew. The official who had procured the presentation asked him what he thought of the general.

"Why," replied the visitor in a tone of disappointment, "he is no different from any other white man."

It so happened that the general was told of the incident, and he gave orders that at his next reception the Filipino should be present.

Upon entering the throneroom and seeing the general in full uniform, surrounded by his brilliant staff, with the accessories of splendid tapestries, laced ushers and all the pomp and splendor of these Spanish functions, the provincial grew pale and, kneeling in deep humility, exclaimed:

"This is indeed my general!"

So impressed was he that the following morning he sent a pair of handsome horses to the general with a note which read:

"My general, yesterday I liked you so much in your uniform of gold that I send you this pair of horses, but do not use them when you dress in a white suit."

Mirror Mad.

"What!" exclaims the astonished reader, "is it possible that there are any civilized persons on the face of the earth who are not in the habit of beholding their visages reflected from time to time in a mirror of some kind? Surely this cannot be so." Wrong, quite wrong, gentle reader, for at the present time, strange as it may appear, there are hundreds of men and women in the United Kingdom who have not gazed into a mirror for years.

The convicts confined in British prisons form members of this community. From the moment of a convict's entrance to a jail to the moment of his exit he is not permitted to have the use of a mirror of any kind, the smallest piece of glass being rigidly denied him. To the women convicts this absence of a mirror forms one of the chief hardships of confinement, and many a female warder can tell piteous tales of women who have actually fallen upon their knees and sobbed out entreaties for the loan of a morsel of mirror—"just for a second." All these entreaties have perforce to be disregarded, and it therefore comes about that many a female convict passes three or four years without being permitted to gaze upon her own features.—London Tit-Bits.

He Got a Pass.

"Halt!" cried an alert patrolman in Manila as a beautifully caparisoned carriage drove up containing a portly gentleman. The driver reined his steeds, and the sentry, standing firmly in the center of the street, shouted, "Who is there?"

Not knowing what else to say, the occupant of the carriage answered, "Judge Taft, president of the civil commission."

"Advance, Judge Taft, to be recognized," bawled the sentry. The judge advanced, and the following dialogue took place:

Sentry—Have you a pass?

Taft—No, sir; do I require one?

Sentry—You do, sir, and it's my duty to run you in.

Taft—But I am the civil governor of the Philippine Islands.

Sentry—That doesn't cut any figure. You're a civilian and out after hours. I'll let you go by this time, but the next time I catch you you'll have to see the captain."

"Thank you," murmured Judge Taft as he drove away. And there and then he formed a resolution to put in an application for a pass. According to the Manila Freedom, he got it.

A Couple of Bulls.

An advertisement recently published in a newspaper in Ireland set forth that "Michael Ryan begs to inform the public that he has a large stock of cars, wagonettes, brakes, hearses and other pleasure vehicles for sale or hire."

This is the same paper which, in a glowing description of a funeral, announced that "Mrs. B. of G—— sent a magnificent wreath of artificial flowers in the form of a cross."

His Pointed Remark.

"I frequently hear you say that money talks," she remarked.

"Yes: it is an old saying and a true one," he replied; "but, unfortunately, while money talks, all that talks is not money."

"Why do you say 'unfortunately?'" she asked.

"Because if that were so," he answered, "I would be married to a fabulous fortune."—London Fun.

The Equinoxes.

The equinoctial storms are no longer believed in by scientific persons. The equinoxes are the dates of the year when the sun crosses the equator at one of the equinoctial points. They occur about March 21 and Sept. 21, and, though storms have been known to occur about those times, they are no longer considered as due to the perfectly natural occurrence of the crossing.

Fat the Foe of Consumption.

Consumption is most prevalent among those who are stinted or who stint themselves in the use of fat foods. Everybody has learned and employed the knowledge, usually when it is too late, that cod liver oil is good for consumption. Few seem to have learned that food of the same character suitable for the table is preventive of consumption. In the whole course of my professional observation, covering a period of nearly 60 years, I have known but rarely a family or an individual that was brought up on a liberal supply of butter and bacon who became tuberculous. Moreover, such food fortifies the system against other diseases as well as consumption. It establishes stamina.—Dr. Bell in the Sanitarium.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and information. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from the date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until Dec. 24th. Application can be made to him for any future information needed.

A verdant dropped into the Jewelry store, and after gazing at some fraternity pins in the show case, said to the proprietor: "Them's mighty nice breastpins you got thar, mister." "What kind of a pin would you like to look at?" "How much is this one with a pair 'o compasses and a square?" pointing to a Masonic pin, "$1.50," "One and fifty, eh?" You haven't got one with any handsaw on it, have you? Am a carpenter and jiner, I thought I'd like to have somethin' to wear so folks would know what I was doin'. Well, I'll take it, though I'd like one with a handsaw, but I guess mabbe that's plain enough. The compass is to mark out yer work, and the square is to measure it when marked out, and any darn fool knows that G stands for gimlet.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

The Credit System.

As we notice the annual scramble among the merchants in the fall to make collections we are more convinced than ever that both patrons and merchants would be greatly benefited by an abandonment of the credit business. No man can afford to sell goods on time as cheaply as for cash, and especially when he figures as every good financier does, that he will loose a certain per cent of what he sells on time. The customer on the other hand buys goods he might better get along without and when pay day comes he is at his wits end to know where to get the money to pay for them. We admit that there are exceptions to the case but generally we are satisfied that the country would be benefitted by it.—Swea City Herald.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

Take A Big Brace and Begin the Century as You Ought.

Time is short. We have heard that often. But just now it is shorter than it has ever been before. We are closing up a century. A man in New Jersey celebrated his 101st birthday last week. If he lives a little longer he will see three centuries. But we shall not. Two is our limit. We have seen one good one and hope to see another better one. The old Nineteenth has been great and glorious. Everybody will sing its prais when it dies. And what we shall be proud to think at its last midnight hour is that we have helped to make it good. When all the editors, magazine writers, preachers and talkers are looking back over the century and telling of the good things which belong to it we shall want to glance along our path and see that we have not walked in crooked places. There are times when we confess that we are "miserable sinners" but December 31 next is not naturally one of those times. We shall want to be proud of ourselves as part of the best century the world has ever seen.

Therefore it is that we say that the time is specially, particularly and pressingly short. Usually we have much to do to end up a year right, to get ready for the new leaf on New Year day; we shall have more to do to end up a century right. None of us are as good as might be. We have always intended to do better—sometime. Now is the time. The century is making up its accounts and we must get on the right side of the ledger.

Then, ho everybody; be good and be good right away. Don't dewdle, defer or dream. Times auctioneer is crying, "Going, going, going, the third and last call."

If you have not paid your debts pay them. Don't dead-beat your way into another century. If you have cheated in business stop right away. Don't be listed among the frauds by the great bookkeeper of the age.

If you have not been very amiable to your wife and have always been going to be better, set about it as soon as you have laid down this paper. There is not a moment to lose. If you have not been an angel of a wife, if you have always had the last work, set your wings to sprouting immediately and go into the Twentieth century as beautiful a jewel as the dew drop on its first morning.

You have suspected that you had a bad temper. Your friends know it; but you don't want to spoil a brand new century with a bad temper. Get hold of the throttle, bring yourself up with a stand. You gossip too much: The good angels who stand at the gates may not greet you cordially. Reform quick and have yourself introduced as the one who never speak ill of anybody. And there are all those odd jobs of goodness which you have put off from time to time, good little deeds which you meant to do, good words which you meant to speak, little encouragments which you meant to give, it is now or never. Weave all your garlands, everybody prepare golden memories for the brow of time, bring blossoms beautiful and fragrant to the bier of the dear, dead century. The new woman is already new but let everybody else put on new garments, new praise and goodness and go marching across the border with a shout of gladness.—Advance.

Patronize home industry by buying your wall paper at the New Drug store.

"There isn't a durn thing in the paper." That's a nice way to talk after the editor, with the assistance of his wife, the hired girl, who has a clothes-line telegraphic communication with all the rest of the hired girls in town, the printer's devil and the other fellow the neighbors, the station agent and the hired man who makes it a point to visit the hired girl before the paper is printed, toils all the week to gather up the news about the farmer who brings in the largest load of wheat or the heaviest hog, the young man who takes his best girl to the entertainment and finds out after he gets there that he hasen't a cent, the merchant who has received a new invoice of goods, the gay deceived who marries the other girl, the tramp, who after eating dinner with the city marshal, goes off with that official's overcoat; the young wife who has given birth to twins, and a thousand other things. The editor hustles all these things together, writes them down, sets them up in type, puts the paper on the press and pulls a lever which no other man in town can pull, covers the devil with ink, writes the address on each paper, carries them to the postoffice and pays the postage and at noon when the press boy returns from dinner he tells the editor that he heard some one say "there wasn't a durned thing in it."—Ex.,

That Forfeited Tax Sale.

State Auditor Dunn has just issued a circular to the county auditors of the state calling attention to the recent decision of the supreme court on the law of 1899 for the collection of taxes that became delinquent prior to 1895. It also calls attention to the opinion of the attorney general hold that owners wishing to redeem their property must pay into the county treasurer the full amount of taxes, penalties, interest and costs charged against the property.

Redemption, according to the attorney general's opinion, will be permitted on the same terms upon all tracts bid in for the state at the forfeited sale. When property was sold to an actual purchaser for less than the full amount of taxes he is only entitled to receive the actual amount paid by him with interest. Where the property sold at a premium above the full amount of taxes, interest, penalties and costs the purchaser is not entitled to any interest on the premium.

—The John Grove Land and Loan Company of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved and will pay spot cash for same.

Destroy Hail Storms.

The Scientific American of Dec. 15th has an article on how hail storms are prevented in some parts of Europe. For years experiments have been made in dispelling approaching hail storms by discharging cannon until it has passed from the experimental to the practical stage. While the whole article is too long to reproduce just now we clip from it the following which shows the results attained:

"Nowhere, however, has cloud shooting found such general usage as in the vicinity of Venic, Lombardy and Piedmont, districts that formally suffered fearfully from the distructiveness of hail storms. During the summer of last year there were at least 2,000 stations built on the plan of those constructed in Styria. At a congress held a short time ago in Casale Monferrato it was found that in numerous localities where shooting stations had not been introduced, hail storms were still of frequent occurance, causing immense damage to crops and property, whereas the districts protected by artificial means were entirely free from loss from such causes."

This European idea is well worthy of consideration by the people of this and neighboring states where hail storms are so frequent and destructive during the season of growing crops. The guns used are inexpensive and the total expense probably much lighter than would be the cost of hail insurance. The fact is that sufficient reliable hail insurance can not be had at any price but if it could be had at the price charged by the St. Paul Fire & Marine, 50 cents an acre on an $8.00 basis, the sum expended would be enormous. Take it for instance in the county of Pembina where there are in round numbers 600,000 acres under cultivation the cost of insurance would be $300,000. Just how numerous the stations would have to be to dispel the hail storms and protect all of the land we are not informed, but say one to a congressional township, thirty-six in all. The expense of each station would not exceed $1,000, probably not half that and volunteer service could be depended on to man them. At the cost above mentioned the first year's expenses would be 7 cents per acre and after that comparatively trifling. This is a subject that our experimental station at Fargo could deal with profitable and to them the European experiment would probably give all the information and assistance possible. It has been known for years that cannon discharged into an approaching circular storm (tornado or water spout) would destroy its motion and render it harmless. Its effect on the hail storm, which is a circular storm, comparatively narrow, is said to be the same. If we can shoot the hail storm out of existance by all means let us shoot. The hail storm is perhaps, of all drawbacks to the Dakota farmer, the greatest.—Bathgate (N. D.) Pink Paper.

How Meridian Time is Taken.

Just before 12 o'clock each day all business must be taken off the wires controlled by the Western Union Company, and that means the absolute cessation of telegraphy along the main arteries of electric communication in the principal cities of America. Three minutes before noon wire chiefs in each of the principle cities and the towns and cities leading to and from their larger sisters cease sending or receiving messages, no matter how important they may be and devote themselves to switching on wires in such a way as to make an unbroken chain of communication from Washington around the uttermost boundaries of the United States. This is called an "unbroken national circuit." Thus a smooth track is made, along which the electric message may flash encompassing the Union and announcing the time of day. Ten seconds before the time bell strikes comes silence, and then a mighty throb a Titanic heart-beat from the foremost factor modern in commerce, and an electric current pulsates from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Gotham to the Golden Gate, announcing the fact that the sun has passed over the seventy-fifth meridian and it is noon at Washington.

Prize Fight Craze.

Every man who has been in the ring within the last ten years seems to have suddenly discoverad himself a champion. Talk about prize fighting as dead —well, it doesn't look the part.

There is at least one good feature of the craze—it emphasizes the fact that the man in the most perfect health wins. This is just as true in business as in fighting, though not quite so apparent.

If you would have perfect health, drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It will tone you up and give you new vitality, for it has the strength of pure barley malt and hops. Keep a case in your cellar and take it as you would medicine, regularly. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Preacher Who Speaks From the Sinner's Standpoint and Is Grossly Misunderstood.

One of the most notable figures at the recent church congress in England was Canon Lloyd, a man noted for his piety and exemplary life. As a preacher he is very graphic. Frequently in mission work, in order to bring out forcibly character depiction, he places himself in the subjects' position and speaks from the sinner's standpoint. In one sermon he said, in the course of his address:

"I have been bad. I have been a drunkard and a wife-beater. I have been in prison for my evil deed; but it is all over now. I am resolved to do better for the future."

It would be thought that these remarks could not possibly have been misunderstood. But a clerical friend, in calling upon one of his parishioners who had heard the bishop, asked her how she liked the sermon.

"Oh, I liked the sarmon, hinney," she replied, "but what an awful man the canon must have been in his younger day! To think that he was a drunkard and beat his wife. Well, there is hope for my man yet."

FOUR DOCTORS FAILED.

A Michigan Lady's Battle with Disease and How It Was Won.

Flushing, Mich., Dec. 22.—(Special.)—One of the most active workers in the cause of Temperance and Social Reform in Michigan is Mrs. P. A. Passmore of this place. She is a prominent and very enthusiastic W. C. T. U. woman, and one who never loses an opportunity to strike a blow against the demon of Intemperance. Mrs. Passmore has suffered much bodily pain during the last three years through Kidney and Bladder Trouble. At times the pain was almost unbearable, and the good lady was very much distressed. She tried physician after physician, and each in turn failed to relieve her, let alone effect a cure. Home remedies suggested by anxious friends were applied, but all to no purpose. At last some one spoke of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a great remedy for all Kidney and Bladder Diseases, and Mrs. Passmore decided to try them. She did, and is now a well woman. She has given the following statement for publication:

At different times in the past three years, I have suffered severely with Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and after trying four of the best physicians I could hear of, two of them living in the state of New York, I found myself no better. I took any amount of home remedies suggested by kind friends, with little or no relief from anything. I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Less than one box has done me more good than all the other treatments combined. I am still using them, and can say from experience that they are an excellent remedy for Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I would heartily recommend them to all those suffering from these ills in like manner.

MRS. P. A. PASSMORE,
Flushing, Mich.

When physicians and all other methods of treatment have failed try Dodd's Kidney Pills. What they did for Mrs. Passmore, they will do for any one similarly afflicted.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA.

Furnished by a Hotelkeeper to Weary Shoppers Every Afternoon.

Berlin Letter in London Telegraph: One of the large hotels in Berlin, writes a correspondent, has just started serving afternoon tea between 4 and 6 o'clock in the afternoons. This will, undoubtedly, be much appreciated by those who have been shopping all day and who are a long way from home. It is extraordinary that such an idea has never before struck the enterprising hotel keepers and cafe proprietors in this new capital. In every street there are countless cages and hotels and so-called conditoreis, or pastry cook shops, but the one thing English people delight in—namely a cup of good tea with bread and butter—it is almost impossible to obtain. Tea is served, but instead of being in cups it is brought to the thirsty customer in a glass a la russe, generally with a slice of lemon and hot milk. Bread and butter is an almost unknown quantity, the solid refreshment affected by Germans consisting generally of diverse kinds and shapes of pastry, round little cakelike shells filled with cream and biscuits covered with chocolate. Cocoa and chocolate are also very popular among German ladies, and they order for afternon tea a glass of Munich or pilsener beer. English "afternoon tea," however, is hardly ever procurable, except, of course, in private houses. In them English customs are imitated to a very large extent—in fact, to be fashionable the household shoud be arranged, as far as furniture, meals and dress are concerned, entirely a la mode Anglaise. One of the most curious non-English customs prevailing here is the use of the word "Mahlzeit," literally translated "Mealtime." This expression is always used after dinner. Every one on rising says "mahlzeit," and shakes hands with every one else. The original meaning of the word was, "I wish you a blessed meal." That was finally shortened to "blessed meal," and finally the one word alone was uttered as a sign of politeness. It is curious to note the way in which the expression is used by the uneducated classes. With them one hears it all the day through, especially, however, before and after lunch.

THE CAROLINES.

Queer Theories About the Formation of These Islands.

Germany's purchase of the Caroline Islands from Spain had already drawn public attention to this little-known Pacific group, says Harper's Weekly, when a suggestion was made to America which is certainly entertaining though hardly to be entertained. The king and headman of Kusaie, one of the easternmost of the Carolines, sent a petition to congress representing that as they had been in intercourse with the American people for forty-seven years—that is, with American missionaries, traders and whalers—and had, both in this manner and otherwise, acquired a knowledge of our institutions, they wished to be annexed to the United States. It is assumed that the people who expressed this amiable preference did not know that they were about to be acquired by Germany. The Caroline group includes, besides coral islands, five mountainous islands of basaltic formation, beautiful and fertile with rivers and springs. To the north are the Ladrone Islands, and to the west are the Philippines. Among the many queer legends of these children of the Pacific there is none more highly improbable than their theory as to the origin of these islands and the inhabitants. They think they themselves were very strong in the water—in fact, they lived in it. The story goes that a woman and her children were floating around on the reef, when a man appeared from the west with a basket of soil on his shoulders. He had started out to make an island with a mountain on it. One of the children cried out to him, "Give us a little soil to make a place for our mother to rest, for she is very weak and cannot swim." He took out a handful of the earth and threw it down, making an island. As the man was going on his way over the water, the son slyly made a hole in the basket; so, as he proceeded on his way, he left a trail of land behind. Suddenly he became conscious that the basket seemed light, and looking around, he saw the land. In his anger he turned about and trod upon it, and thus the islands were formed.

Washing in Sweden.

The Grand Rapids man who shipped a train load of washboards to London and cleared a fortune by their sale at 25 cents each, would find a fair field in the provinces of Sweden. The washing is done there by rubbing between the fists and beating with a paddle. This, however, is not so uncivilized as it at first appears. There are hundreds of thousands of women in the backwoods of the United States of America wo do their own washing and never thought of using a corrugated board. They wash beside a "branch," boiling the clothes in a three-legged pot, rinsing them in the stream, wringing them by hand, rubbing them between the knuckles and beating them on a puncheon with flat oaken paddles resembling a cricket bat. Oh, the buttons, the buttons!—New York Press.

Coffee-Growing in Africa.

The coffee-growing industry in tropical Africa is developing tremendously. The seed was introduced into the country about five years ago by some English missionaries with the object of ascertaining whether the resources of the country were favorable to the culture of the article. The ground appears peculiarly adapted to the industry, since last year 100 tons of coffee were exported from Uganda alone, and the result of this year's production will be even greater.

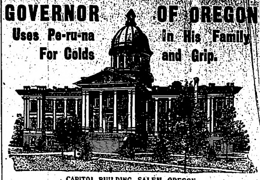
GOVERNOR OF OREGON

Uses Pe-ru-na In His Family For Colds and Grip.



CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter from the Executive Office of Oregon.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Pe-ru-na. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

State or Oregon,
Executive Department,
Salem, May 9, 1898.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sirs:—I have had occasion to use your Pe-ru-na medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Yours very truly, W. M. Lord.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Pe-ru-na is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Pe-ru-na not only cures catarrh, but prevents. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Pe-ru-na for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Pe-ru-na to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

Went to Sleep Too Soon.

A little boy fell out of the bed at his home in Idlewild, some nights ago, and when his mother and some of the other members of the family teased him about it he felt very much as if he had done something disgraceful, and cried as if his little heart would break. His mother saw that she was on the wrong tack, so she ceased to tease him and made the others quit doing so, and made a show of sympathy by asking:

"My child, how on earth did you come to fall out of bed?"

"I don't know, mother," he replied, unless I went to sleep right where I got in."—Memphis Scimitar.

Balloon Clothesline.

The Parisian laundries have discovered a novel use for the balloon, and one to be recommended. Instead of hanging clothes out to dry in the open, on the ordinary clothesline, and thus offending the eyesight of the fastidious, bamboo frames are attached to a captive balloon and the linen to be dried is attached to them. The balloon is then allowed to ascend to a height of 100 feet, and the clothes are very soon thoroughly dried and aired.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

Youths Must Be Soldiers.

To the old "inevitables," death and taxes, the German adds a third, military service. From the time he is old enough to go to school he looks forward and plans for it. It is said that the first great event in the life of a German boy is his confirmation and the second his first week as a soldier. A huge, red placard appears one day on the bill-posting tour so familiar to the German towns. It contains a list of the names of all the young men in the district who have reached military age, and his among them. He has been expecting it, and he knows that the authorities never forget. Already he and his parents have decided one important question regarding his service, and that it whether he shall enter as a freiwillige, or volunteer, to serve one year only, or whether he must take the full service of two years.—McClure's Magazine.

Practical Curiosity.

Near the town of Baku, in the Russian Caucasus, are several tracts of land whereon no cattle would feed, although they were covered with the usual rich herbage. The superstitious peasantry declared that an evil spirit had bewitched the meadows in question. By and by there happened along a practical, matter-of-fact Englishman, who started to investigate the phenomena. He quickly discovered that, although the grass was undoubtedly rich and succulent, it tasted strongly of paraffin, a substance the flavor of which is strongly repugnant to nearly all animals, but especially so to cattle. Such was the origin of the discovery of the Baku petroleum deposits—deposits that have already yielded millions of pounds' worth of oil, and which show no signs of becoming exhausted.

Diseases of the Kidneys

will stand no trifling because no disease is so deceptive and none more fatal. Statistics show that more people die from Kidney Diseases than any other disease.

U. S. SENATOR DAVIS DIES FROM KIDNEY DISEASE.

Senator Davis made a prolonged and gallant fight with disease.

The trouble, of which the kidney affection was the fatal outcome, first appeared about Sept. 20.

. . . .

Trouble Stealthily Encroached.

The trouble had, however, stealthily encroached upon a vital organ, and on Nov. 11 examination of the urine proved the presence of inflammation of the kidneys.

Both acute nephritis and diabetes made their appearance, and Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, was summoned. He agreed with Doctors Stone and Lankester as to the presence of these serious ailments in acute form, and, while not making any public statement, he made known privately to some of Senator Davis' business associates his opinion that the case was hopeless.

. . . .

To those, however, who were familiar with the symptoms of acute kidney troubles the bulletins held ominous information, the rapid respiration, fluctuating pulse, delirium and approaching coma telling the story of death's nearness.

—St. Paul Dispatch.

Is This What Ails You?

Does your back ache?
Do you have scanty flow of urine?
Do you have frequent severe headaches?
Do you urinate too frequently either day or night.
Have you sand, gravel, brick dust or white mucous in your urine?
Have you dark or bloody looking urine which scalds when voiding?
Have you dark circles around the eyes, puffiness under the eyes, or bloated appearance of the face in the morning?

Your Kidneys are Sick

AND HERE IS WHERE YOUR DANGER LIES:

Kidney Disease does not make itself felt until it has secured a firm hold on your system.

Morrow's Kid-ne-oids

are made for Kidney Diseases and that they cure Kidney Diseases can be attested by a "cloud of living witnesses," three of which give voluntary testimony below:

Morrow's KID-NE-OIDS

Morrow's KID-NE-OIDS

Cure Sick Kidneys.

Mr. J. C. Schoch, of DuBois, Pa., convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that Morrow's Kid-ne-oids cure kidney troubles promptly and to stay cured.

"For about a year I had a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back, which would be attended by a sharp, stining pain when lifting or stooping over. On account of the pain in my back I could not sleep and get proper rest, and would feel dull and tired when arising in the morning instead of fresh and vigorous. When Morrow's Kid-ne-oids were first advertised I did not have much faith in their curative qualities, but after seeing them recommended to relieve symptoms like my own, I procured some at Vosburg's drug store, and took them according to directions. In a few days the pain in my back stopped. The Kid-ne-oids have done away with that dull, tired feeling and I am enjoying better health than I have for years." Mr. Schoch, lives at 117 Olive Ave., DuBois, Pa. and is always glad to say a good word for that peerless kidney remedy—Kid-ne-oids.

Mr. J. C. Schoch.

Mrs. Gold Campman 45 River St., Sharon, Pa., graphically describes her condition before and after she used Morrow's Kid-ne-oids, hoping by so doing she will help some other woman to get rid of the debilitating backaches so common to the female sex.

Sharon, Pa., Nov. 8, 1900. John Morrow & Co. Dear Sirs:—"I take pleasure in recommending your medicine to the public in the hope that it may benefit others as it has me. Three years ago in March I was attacked with a severe fever which left me in a miserable, weak condition. About one year ago, after my kidneys became affected, the pain in my back was so bad I could not sit up or lie down. I saw Morrow's Kid-ne-oids highly recommended and procured a box and took them according to directions, which resulted in a cure. I have taken in all three boxes and consider the medicine so good for kidney troubles that I will take no other." Yours truly, Mrs. Gold Campman.

Mrs. Gold Campman.

Graphic interview given our reporter by Mrs. D. S. Sterner, of Altoona, Pa., who suffered for years with kidney troubles.

"I suffered several years with kidney trouble and did considerable doctoring, even going to the hospital for a time, but it seemed that my disease was incurable. My suffering was terrible, especially with my back. I saw Morrow's Kid-ne-oids advertised and recommended so highly by other persons whose symptoms were similar to my own that I decided to try them. I began to improve in two or three days after I commenced to take them, and continued to improve until the pain in my back has all disappeared. I have felt like a new person since taking Kid-ne-oids and am only too glad to be able to recommend such a valuable medicine." Mrs. Sterner resides at 1615 7th Ave., Altoona, Pa.

DISASTERS AT SEA

WORST STORM IN YEARS ON THE BRITISH COAST.

Many Lives Are Known to Have Been Lost—Several Vessels Are Wrecked in the Storm—Fate of Some of the Cross-Channel Steamers Is in Doubt — Several Days May Elapse Before the Full Extent of the Damage Becomes Known—Impossible to Estimate Minor Casualties.

London, Dec. 29. — The great gale which is prevailing along the English and Irish coasts has caused an unprecedented interruption of telegraphic service. The wires are broken in all directions and few particulars of disasters to shipping have been received, but it is known that many lives have been lost. The British steamer Pegasus, Capt. Bailey, from San Francisco, Aug. 27, went ashore at Lavernock Point. Four of the crew were drowned.

The Primrose Hill went on the Penrhos rocks, three miles off Southstack, near Holyhead. She broke in two and went to pieces in a few minutes. Only one man out of the crew of thirty-five men were saved by a life boat.

The Gale Is So Furious

in the channel that the continental service has been suspended. The Hurricane is increasing at Queenstown, where the observers say it is the fiercest storm in years. The mails are delayed.

Incessant reports of innumerable shipping casualties show that the gale was one of the worst known in many years. Probably several days will elapse before the full extent of the damage becomes known.

In addition some vessels, not yet identified, which have been wrecked or placed in great danger, the fate of some of the cross-channel mail and passenger steamers is in doubt. For instance, the Great Western Railway company's steamer plying between Milford and Waterford, is twelve hours overdue and no tidings of her have yet been received. It would be impossible to enumerate all the minor casualties.

A terrible accident took place near Taunton. The breakwater at Watchet harbor yielded to the force of the gale and became a wreck, permitting a tremendous sea to have full play against the shipping in the harbor. Several vessels broke adrift; two foundered and five others were driven into a hopeless tangle in a corner between a pier and a wharf, where they lay grinding each other. Their masts and bulwarks speedily went and their hulls were greatly battered. The damage will reach many thousands of pounds.

ALGER SCORES GEN. MILES.

Writing a Book in Which He Touches Up the Embalmed Beef Charges.

New York, Dec. 29.—Russell A. Alger, President McKinley's first secretary of war, has been writing a book which will soon be published under the title "The Spanish-American War." The twenty-second chapter of the book, in which the food of the army during the war is discussed, will be printed in the January number of the North American Review. This chapter is regarded by those who know something about Gen. Alger's work, as one of the most interesting of the book. It is certainly the most spicy. It deals principally with Gen. Miles' "embalmed beef." If Gen. Alger couldn't say what he thought of Gen. Miles while he was secretary of war, he certainly didn't hesitate to express his mind when, as a private citizen, he sat down to make a book. He scores Gen. Miles very severely and defends the administration of Commissary General Egan.

SIX WERE KILLED.

Result of a Dynamite Explosion in West Virginia.

Keyser, W. Va., Dec. 29.—One of the most disastrous accidents in the history of railroad building in this section happened at Baker camp, near Durbin, Pocahontas county, on the line of the Coal & Iron railroad now building out of Elkins. As the result of a dynamite explosion six men are dead and several others are not expected to live. The accident happened at noon yesterday while the men were at dinner. Some dynamite had been placed about the stove to thaw out and shortly after a terrific explosion wrecked the camp, killed three men outright and injured eight others, three of whom have since died. The dead men were blown to atoms, legs, arms and hands, and even parts of their bodies being found in different directions from the little building in which they lived among the wild mountains. Physicians hurried from Green Bank and worked all night with the wounded, some of whom begged the doctors to shoot them instead of helping them to live to be blinded or maimed for life. On account of the indirect connections with the camp it is impossible to secure the complete details.

PETTIGREW'S SON ASSAULTED.

Slugged by a Theater Usher in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Dec. 29.—Frank Walden Pettigrew, son of United States Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota, was assaulted and seriously injured by an usher in a theater here last night. Young Pettigrew, who has just returned from South Africa, where he served in the Boer army, is in the employ of the United States government survey, and was on his way to join a surveying corps in Arizona. He was passing the night in this city and went to the theater. He lighted a cigarette in the lobby and thereby became involved in a controversy with an usher as to the rule forbidding smoking. He was struck a blow which broke the right cheek bone and also dislocated his jaw. He was treated at police headquarters and then taken to a hospital. There he is to be operated on as his injuries are serious.

MONEY FOR A WIDOW.

British Government Remembers the Services of an American.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Mrs. George F. La Bram of Aurora, Ill., some time ago wrote the state department asking it to present a claim to the British government for the payment of a reasonable amount of money on account of the death of her husband, who was among the besieged in Kimberley, South Africa. A dispatch was received yesterday from Ambassador Choate informing the department that the British government allowed Mrs. La Bram $4,000. In transmitting this information to the ambassador the British foreign office says:

"Her majesty's government gladly takes this opportunity of placing on record their sense of the valuable services rendered by her late husband during the siege of Kimberley, and of expressing their regret at the loss she has sustained in his death.

MILLIONAIRE'S MURDER.

A Woman Is Suspected of Being the Criminal.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 29.—Two sensations resulted yesterday from the evidence adduced at the inquest over the murder of Frank O. Richardson, the millionaire merchant who was shot down in his home at Savannah Christmas eve. The first was the establishment of the probable innocence of a business partner of the murdered man, whose guilt appeared certain; and the second was probably the fixing of the responsibility for the murder on a woman and her adviser, a traveling man, who are alleged to have blackmailed the deceased out of various sums of money, covering a period of almost a year.

GEN. CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT.

Story of the Battle as Gleaned From Indians Who Participated.

Omaha, Special, Dec. 29.—The war department is preparing a volume on the Custer massacre in accordance with the resolutions which passed congress two years ago, and, as singular as it may appear, interesting facts concerning that terrible chapter in the Indian wars of the plains are now developing, a quarter of a century after the battle and when most of the principles in the sanguinary contest have passed beyond.

It is no secret that for many years after the wiping out of Gen. Custer and his three companies not an Indian could be found who would admit having taken part in the battle. As no white man survived that terrible onslaught it was with the greatest difficulty that the facts leading up to the battle were learned. Of course, from the position of the bodies strewn over the plains the average plainsman would read sufficient to show the desperate resistance of the troopers and show that the soldiers were outnumbered probably five hundred to one, yet the truth could not be known except from the tongue of the Indians who participated in the fight. The vastness of the victory they had won actually frightened the Indians and prevented them for years from boasting of their part in the awful butchery.

Now, it begins to look as if the minute details were about to be given to the world through Frank Gourard, the veteran scout, Indian fighter and pioneer plainsman. Gourard receives his information absolutely from Indian sources. In fact, it is fitting that the public should learn the real story of the battle through old Frank Gourard, because, as the grizzled old plainsman admits, by rights his bones ought to lie among the little white headstones that glisten to-day in the sunlight on

The Custer Battlefield.

Frank Gourard was scouting for Custer at that time and but for an accident would have been with Custer's forces instead of Reno's at the time of the fight, and of course Gourard would have been killed, as were all of Custer's men.

Secretary of War Meiklejohn had a long talk with Gourard on the subject of incorporating his story in the government story of the Custer affair, soon to be issued. The conversation occurred this week and Meiklejohn met the veteran scout and Indian fighter in Omaha. Gourard had just returned from Pine Ridge agency, where he had with many of the other survivors. The Indians have known Gourard so long that they trust him, even though they know the unerring aim of the swarthy scout is responsible for many of their braves being sent to the happy hunting grounds. It was a happy accident that resulted in two persons who participated in the campaign which resulted in the tragic affair of the Little Big Horn meeting Secretary Meiklejohn. The other was Capt. Arrasmith, now on his way to join the Twenty-second in Manila. Gourard and Arrasmith were with Crook through that memorable campaign, and their meeting in Omaha was the first that had occurred since they met in converging columns near the Custer battlefield a quarter of a century ago. Gourard contributed materially to the story he had to tell to the representative of the war department by narrating an experience he had a few weeks ago on the reservation at Pine Ridge.

The Fight in Picture.

He met an Indian who had fifty water colors of the famous fighting Indian characters that could not be duplicated. The Indian who exhibited them to Gourard said they had long been in possession of the Pine Ridge Indians, and no white man had ever seen them before. It was a perfect picture story of the famous battle, showing Custer through all his desperate charging, concluding with the final struggle of a handful of troopers and the dramatic finale, with the brave general blowing out his own brains rather than submit to capture and torture at the hands of his savage enemies.

Secretary Meiklejohn has written the war department suggesting that Dr. McGillicuddy, the ex-Pine Ridge Indian agent and the most likely person to approach the Indians on such a delicate subject, be commissioned to make an effort to induce the Indians to permit the department to copy this remarkable picture of the fight that it may be incorporated in the government history.

Story of the Fight.

Discussing the subject, Frank Gourard said:

"As to the story, I can give it to you in brief and tell you many things you never heard before. You know, of course, of the concerted effort made by the half-dozen converging columns to hem the Indians in and cow them out of their belligerent attitude. You know of how Custer struck the trail one summer morning in '76 and how he, according to his usual tactics, divided his forces with Maj. Reno at the crossing of the Rosebud creek, which, by the way, we old fellows call Reno creek. His idea was to hem the Indians in. Custer never considered the numbers of his foe. He would have gone out with a single company in just the same way to combat the whole howling Indian nation, dividing his forces and fighting them from both sides at once.

"You know the story of Reno's march down the creek, his crossing of the river and his sudden appearance before the tepees of the Indians, as much a surprise to him as to the Indians, of his weak sort of an attack, his repulse and retreat in disorder through the timber, the crossing of the river and his taking up a safe position in the bluffs opposite the scene of the engagement, with but a handful of Indians to watch him a few hours until night.

"Now, the Indians knew nothing of the division of the forces. When Reno took up his position in the hills they intended to wait until night and then assault and finish him before daylight. Right here is where I am coming to the meat of the story as told by the Indians, and overlooked in the chronicles of the battle.

Custer's Appearance.

"Custer's route behind the bluffs and down to the river through the bed of a creek was longer than Reno's. Therefore it was some little time after Reno had been penned in the top of the bluffs that Custer's command suddenly appeared before the Sioux like an apparition, coming through the dry creek bed to the bank of the river. The Indians were dumbfounded, for was not this the body of men whom they had left under guard of their young men penned in the bluffs?

"As for Custer, it is undoubtedly true that he knew nothing of the defeat or even of the engagement of Reno, the bluffs having cut off all sound of the brief conflict.

"Still relying upon his subordinate, he had no fear of the Indians, although he could see that their tepees extended down the valley for three miles. Neither did he know that the Sioux, in order to deceive as to their fighting strength, had crowded each tepee as full of young bucks as they would hold. This is how it is that, although the story writers place the number of the Indians at about 3,000, the Sioux say they numbered

More Than 8,000.

"It was two hours past noon and Custer's horses and pack mules, maddened by thirst, became unmanageable at sight of the water. One of the mules carrying nearly all of the ammunition stampeded into the river, and, sinking almost instantly in the quicksand, was lost, with all its precious burden, an accident which caused the fight to end much more abruptly than it otherwise would have done.

"After allowing his horses to drink, Custer halted his command in the protected hollow made by the intersection of the creek bed with the banks of the river, and reviewed the situation.

"Strangely enough, he could see no hostile demonstrations on the part of the Indians. The women and children having been hurried back from the scene at the first attack, there were none but warriors in the tepees. They had not intended to attack the intrenched Americans before dark, and no more would they move against this body before nightfall, especially since the Sioux appreciated the fact that Custer had halted in a position under whose protection he might have held their entire force off for a number of days.

Indian Strategy.

"Conjecturing that however he had escaped his position in the bluffs that their young men were still clinging stealthily to his rear, the Sioux, with no intention of making an immediate attack, but with the aim to get into the most favorable position, sent hundreds of their warriors down the river under cover to cross unperceived three miles below and fill the ridges and high places of the line of bluffs full of watchful, cruel and revengeful fighting force. Also unperceived a number of braves made their way across the river a short way down and secreted themselves under the precipitous bank on Custer's side.

"The Indians, under cover and watching the little column like a thousand hawks, could see the white leader showing signs of impatience and disquiet. He scanned the country beyond the clump of timber through his glasses again and again. They could not know that he was watching and hoping for some sign of the approach of Reno, so no indication would show that he had taken up his position on the other side. This delay gave the Indians plenty of time for their forces to deploy and scatter over the most advantageous positions in the high ground round about.

Custer's Mistake.

"Finally, well along in the afternoon, the white leader did a thing for which the Indians could hardly credit the evidence of their eyes. Either tired of waiting for Reno, or being sure that he must already have taken his position unobserved on the flanks of the Indians, Custer moved out of the protected hollow and naturally fortified ravine into the open of the exposed hillside and marched down the river, the slope of the bluffs resting on his right, on his left at a distance of but a few hundred yards the precipitous bank of the river, with a writhing pack of reds beneath, and just beyond the water the camp of more than 8,000 Indians in their war paint. Custer's fate was sealed with that command to advance, and there was not an Indian but knew it and exulted in his treacherous red breast at the thought of the grand killing in store for him and his comrades. There was no immediate attack. Custer was marching and the Indians lay low and let him come on, but from the time the little force moved out of the hollow until the time when the last man fell riddled with bullets there was not a moment when the troopers were not covered by the sights of a thousand rifles, while a thousand itching fingers played with the set triggers.

"Apparently puzzled by the actions of the Indians, and for the purpose of drawing them out, Custer halted after marching a considerable distance down the river and fired a volley across into the straggling lines of tepees. Instantly the volley was answered by a deadly fire from the under side of the river bank, taking the soldiers so by surprise that they fell back toward the peak of the ridge, the Indians continuing their fire. Still without any intimation of the danger behind them, the troopers mounted on their horses and left a number of dead on the field. With the Indians still under a perfect cover, the soldiers had no chance to reply with effect. They reached the crest of the hills and were headed toward the protection of the ridges and gullies at a gallop, when the concealed Indians opened a murderous fire upon them, directly in front. Nearly a whole company was mowed down at the first fire and the column fell back, as the Indians had planned, once more into the jaws of the trap.

Ended His Own Life.

"Now right here is where one of the most startling parts of this Indian version comes in. You recollect the big bay thoroughbred the Indians called Gourard and which raced all through the Northwest for years after the massacre? Well, one of Custer's young lieutenants was mounted on that horse that day. When the column fell back under the fire the big bay took the bit between his teeth and thundering down right into the midst of the redskins thrust savagely through their lines, his head down, squealing with rage, a diabolical incarnation of equine fury.

"A number of Indians immediately detached themselves from the rest and gave chase. They were hopelessly distanced from the first. Nothing an Indian ever rode could beat that horse. Finally, as he streaked it out across the plateau nearly a mile in the lead the Indians gave it up and sitting back on their ponies watched the flying horse in a fury of disappointment. Then they witnessed an amazing thing, something which they, with no conception of the code of honor which actuates officers in the United States army, could not understand. They saw the young lieutenant look back, and, finding himself hopelessly out of the fight, deliberately draw his revolver and Shoot Himself Through the Head.

The horse stopped at once, and the Indians, continuing the chase, captured him, leaving the body of the officer lying alone on the sands. The first report of the fight reported him missing, but a stone was erected to his memory on the field.

"In the meantime Custer's men met in front and on the river side by the same deadly fire, were compelled again to retreat, this time down the second side of the fatal triangle, as you can see. So they were driven again to lower ground, fighting desperately all the while. The troopers, having dismounted from their horses, were now proceeding at a walk, using their mounts as much as possible for cover.

Custer's Death.

"At the spot where Custer met his death there was a rally and a last stand, for the Indians, bursting out of cover from the front, swept down on the little band like a lot of yelling fiends. The combat, waxing into an incredible fury, was waged almost hand to hand. The rifle ammunition was exhausted, revolvers were emptied, and the troopers, drawing their sabers died fighting to the last breath.

"Standing untouched through all the melee, Custer must have begun to guess that the Indians were making an effort to capture him alive. Expecting nothing but the cruelest and most inhuman tortures from their hands, he fought until they had closed in about him on every side, until all the men immediately about him were down, and then turned his revolver against himself.

"After that the end was not long in coming. The scattered survivors were driven back along the third side of the triangle, so that when the last men fell he died within a hundred yards of the place where the first was killed."

An Interesting Character.

To one familiar with the sanguinary history of the plains from 1872 until the uprising at Pine Ridge, culminating in the death of Sitting Bull in 1891, Gourard stands as one of the most unique and interesting characters surviving. Capt. Arrasmith, who has known him for years, declares that as a scout he had no equal, not even in the famous Kit Carson himself.

To-day fifty years of age, Gourard is in appearance a type of the full-blooded Sioux. Not a drop of Indian blood flows in his veins, however. A Sandwich islander by parentage, a Californian by birth, he was endowed by nature with the physical hardihood of a young mountain lion, and the instincts of the most wily of forest creatures. Captured by the Sioux when but a child, he was reared as one of them. From his captors he learned all that nature and circumstances had taught the crafty savage. He learned the languages of the plains and became a master in the sign code. His roaming with the restless tribes gave him knowledge of the topography of the country, which served him well in after years.

Sanity Tested.

Rev. John F. Hill, in Presbyterian Banner, takes the following incident from a New York paper and adds a suggestive comment:

"A gentleman was once being taken over an idiot asylum. He asked an attendant how they knew when an idiot was considered to be sufficiently restored to sanity to be discharged.

"'Oh,' said the attendant, 'it is easily managed. We take them into a yard where there are several troughs. We turn on the taps and give the idiots buckets to bail out the water and empty the troughs. Many of them keep bailing away while the taps keep running, but they that wasn't idiots stops the tap.'"

This little story, though by no means a new one, may have proven amusing to the readers, and all will agree that the asylum should not discharge an inmate who failed upon this funny test.

But are all the people in asylums for the insane or imbecile who "keep bailing away," hoping to empty the trough without stopping the inflow? Is not this precisely what we do when, through our state and municipal governments, we make desperate struggles for the abatement of the floods of crime and pauperism, and yet neglect to close the saloon, which is the acknowledged source of the greater part of those awful streams?

A city missionary, addressing the Presbyterian Social Union of Philadelphia, on the 'Slum Problem' in large cities, when asked what connection the saloon had with the slums, replied: "Remove the saloon from the slums and you will have no slums."

How She Won.

"I thought you said you never again would elect her president of your club," he suggested, after she had told him all about the result of the club election. "Well, we didn't intend to," she replied, "but when she broke down and cried we just couldn't help it."—Smart Set.

A Conundrum.

"When does a man become a seamstress?" "When he hems and haws." "No." "When he threads his way." "No." "When he rips and tears." "No." "Give it up." "Never, if he can help it."—Boston Christian Register.

Consolation.

'Life is full of uncertainties," said the mournful person. "Cheer up, old man," rejoined the jovial friend. "You don't have to read the weather reports and the horse race news if you don't want to."—Washington Star.

An Omitted Rhetorical Stroke.

"Let me see!" said the great man. "Did I say anything about the crux of the proposition?" "I don't see anything," said the secretary, glancing over his notes. "H'm!" murmured the great man. "I meant to work that phrase off somehow."—Puck.

OH, WHAT AN EXAGGERATION.

Yet His Friend Says That Dreaming of Spending a Dollar Gave Him Nightmare.

There's a good story told of a young fellow here noted for his closeness. He went to spend a night with a friend. During the night he betrayed much restlessness, which kept his host wide awake, and finally the slumberer betrayed signs of violent emotion. "He's going to have a nightmare," said the friend, "but he always grumbles so when you wake him up that I hate to disturb him." He waited a little longer, sitting up in bed staring at the miserable sleeper, and, finally, becoming alarmed, he roused him. He sprang up in bed, glared wildly around, and said: "Where am I? I don't see the storm."

"Why, here in my room," said the host, soothingly; "you remember, you stayed all night with me? I beg your pardon for waking you up, but you carried on so I had to."

"Begged my pardon?" gasped the guest. "I shall never be grateful enough to you. I dreamed I was out with Miss Bud, and a terrible storm came up, and my shoes were new, and I was just ordering a coupe for two when you roused me. Old boy, you saved me a dollar!"

And the host says he was actually afraid to go to sleep again that night for fear the coupe would come.—Louisville Times.

Very Much Alive and Out With a Letter Telling How He Was Saved.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29.—(Special.)—Few who know how ill Mr. A. E. Ayers of this city has been with Bright's Disease and Diabetes ever expected he could live. Four doctors gave him but three or four days to live. He recovered through the prompt and continued use of a well known remedy, and has given the following letter for publication. It is dated at Bath, N. Y., where Mr. Ayers now resides.

Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sirs—I wish to tell you what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me. As far as I am concerned, they are the best in the world, for they not only saved my life, but they have given me new life and hope. I lived in Minneapolis for forty-nine years, and am well known there by many people. I suffered severely with Bright's Disease and Diabetes. Four well-known physicians gave me up to die. In fact, they gave me only three or four days, at the longest, to live. I had spent nearly everything I had in the effort to save my life, but seeing an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I scraped what was nearly my last half-dollar, sent to the drug store and bought a box. I had very little hope of anything ever doing me any good, as from what the four doctors had told me it was now a matter of hours with me. I commenced to take the Pills, and from the very first they helped me. I took in all about forty boxes; I doubtless, did not need so many, but I wanted to make sure, and, after all, $20 is a small amount of money to remove the sentence of death and save one's life.

I have since recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to hundreds of people, and I have yet to hear of the first one that did not find them all that you claim for them. I can remember of two people to whom I had recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills, and who afterwards said to me that they received no benefit. I asked to see their Pill boxes, and behold, instead of Dodd's Kidney Pills, it was ———'s Kidney Pills, an imitation of the genuine Dodd's, and not the real thing at all that they had been using. I gave each of them an empty pill box that Dodd's Kidney Pills had been put up in, so that they could make no more mistakes, and they afterwards came to me and told me that they had bought and used the genuine Dodd's Pills, and were cured.

I still continue to use the Pills off and on, and would not be without them if they were $50 a box. I think that every old gentleman in the world would be healthier and better if he would take one after each meal.

I wish I could think of words strong enough to express to you my gratitude for what your Medicine has done for me. It is not often, I suppose, that a man who is staring death right in the face, is permitted to live and tell of the means which saved him, and as that is my position, my heart is overwhelmed with thankfulness to God for His mercy to me in permitting me to see the advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, when it seemed that I was beyond all earthy power to save, that I cannot express my real feelings.

If any one doubts the statement I have made, they may write to me, and I will try to prove to them that all I have said in this letter is true, and more than true. There are hundreds of people in Minneapolis who know all about my case and the way Dodd's Kidney Pills pulled me through, when I had been given up by the four doctors of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and had practically lost all hope. You are at liberty to publish this testimonial which I give you from the bottom of my heart, and I sincerely wish that I could find the right words to express my feelings of gratitude to you and to Dodd's Kidney Pills, for my restoration to life and health.

There Is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over one-fourth as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cents and 25 cents per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

The Story of a Hoodoo Hat.

Mr. John Cooper, one of Dooly county's most prominent citizens, is in the city on his way to Augusta to attend the old veterans' reunion. When he got off the train, he looked up Captain Warren Moseley, one of the bravest of the boys who went out in the sixties, and they immediately began swapping reminiscences about their army life in Virginia. Finally Mr. Cooper asked Captain Moseley if he remembered the Yankee hat. A reporter who was standing there heard the following story, which both men vouch for as being absolutely true:

On the first day of the battle of Winchester a Yankee was killed so near the line of battle that a soldier of the name of McLendon, Company I, Fourth Georgia, picked up the hat and put it on and wore it. He had not had it on his head for more than two hours when he was shot through the head, the bullet piercing the hat in almost the same hole that the bullet had entered that killed the Yankee.

Another soldier of the name of Wooten of Company H, Fourth Georgia, picked up the hat and put it on, and in less than an hour he, too, was killed, the bullet striking him in the head near the place where the other two bullets had entered.

The next day another soldier of the name of Kilpatrick of Company H, Fourth Georgia, was wearing the hat when he, too, was struck in the head and killed.

Although the hat was a fine one, it was left lying on the field, as there was no one who would wear it, as four men who had worn it were then cold and stiff, and each one had been shot through the hat in almost the same place.—Macon News.

Cyclone Pranks.

A traveler in the west, the Rev. C. T. Brady, says that of all the manifestations of power he ever witnessed, from an earthquake down, a cyclone is the most appalling. The midnight blackness of the funnel, the lightning darting from it in inconceivable fierceness, the strange crackling sound from its bosom, the suddenness of its irresistible attack, its incredibly swift motion, its wild leaping and bounding, like a gigantic beast of prey, the awful roar which follows, all this but feebly characterizes that strange ravager of the plains. He continues:

The cyclone plays odd pranks. I have seen two horses lifted in air and carefully deposited, unharmed, in a field about an eighth of a mile away. I have seen chickens and geese picked clean of feathers and yet feebly alive.

One house, I remember, had a hole ten feet in diameter cut out of its roof, as if by a circular saw. I have seen the black, whirling cloud lift a building and shake it to pieces, as one shakes a pepper box. One of the worst cyclones I ever knew threw a heavy iron safe about as a child might toss a wooden alphabet block in play.

It is an irresponsible as well as an almost omnipotent monster, and it seems to love the hideous jokes of its own concocting.

Remembered Too Late.

Speaking of the queer doings of absentminded people, the following anecdote is related by the London Globe: "A very irritable man left his house one morning to attend a race meeting some distance off. In order that he might have enough money to pay his hotel bill he tied a sovereign in the corner of his handkerchief. In the train he drew his handkerchief from his pocket, and noticed the knot in the corner. 'Now,' he said to himself, 'what was it I wished to remember?' Much thought failed to enlighten him upon the point, and at last, in a fit of passion he hurled the handkerchief out of the window. Then he remembered."

Applying the Rule.

After Sunday school little Ned and his younger cousin, Horton, were permitted to play in the yard on condition that they would be very good and quiet. They had not been out long when Ned's mother heard loud screams. Upon investigating the cause she found her small son sitting on his cousin, pounding him vigorously in spite of Horton's pitiful wails.

"Well, mamma," Ned exclaimed "I wanted to teach him the golden rule and he said he wouldn't learn."—Detroit Free Press.

Poor Richard's Bread Box.

Benjamin Franklin was a hearty eater in the good old days before the vending of lightning rods became a profession. When history caught one of her first glimpses of him, he was eating a roll in the street. After he laid the cornerstone of the Pennsylvania hospital in the happy reign of George II, he was a frequent visitor in the halls of that institution. His labors there being arduous, it chanced that he frequently fell hungry at work.

He appeared at the hospital gate one day with a big tin box under his arm. Disregarding the gaze of the curious, he marched through the corridors to the dispensary, brushed aside a few cobwebbed beakers from a shelf and in their place planted the tin box.

"What might this be?" queried his friend Dr. Rush.

"This," said Ben Franklin, "is Poor Richard's bread box. Help yourself."

The box was filled with penny cakes. When the supply ran out, Ben Franklin bought more cakes. That was 150 years ago.

Since Franklin's time, new hospital buildings have crowded the old out of existence and the hospital has grown to be one of the most noted in the world. Yet an old tin box, much battered and dented, stands on a shelf in the drug room, and it contains cakes and ginger snaps. Whenever the resident physicians or nurses visit the room they go to the box, take out a cake and eat. When the cakes are gone, the hospital steward charges the box afresh.—Philadelphia Press.

Easy if You Have To.

Many stories of President Lincoln might be classified as fiction, although a few of them are. So it is not unnatural that this little anecdote, which is better than most, should appear in Mr. Irving Bacheller's novel, "Eben Holden."

"My son," he said, taking my hand in his, "why didn't you run?"

"Didn't dare," I answered. "I knew it was more dangerous to run away than to go forward."

"Reminds me of a story," said he, smiling. "Years ago there was a bully in Sangamon county, Ills., that had the reputation of running faster and fighting harder than any other man there. Everybody thought he was a terrible fighter. He'd always get a man on the run; then he'd catch up and give him a licking. One day he tackled a lame man. The lame man licked him in a minute.

"'Why didn't ye run?' somebody asked the victor.

"'Didn't darst,' said he. 'Run once when he tackled me, an I've been lame ever since.'

"'How did ye manage to lick him?' asked the other.

"'Waal,' said he, 'I hed to, an I done it easy.'

"That's the way it goes," said the immortal president. "Ye do it easy if ye have to."

An Accomplished Cook.

The family had advertised for a cook. The family lived in a west end mansion. Throughout the house there were rich articles of furniture and bric-a-brac which had been picked up from time to time in the family's wanderings through Europe and other sections of the globe. Now, it so happens a very wise person applied for a place as queen of the culinary department in this elegant household.

"What is your name?" asked the family.

"Evangeline, thank you," came in reply from the dusky applicant.

"Evangeline, then, tell me, are you a good cook?"

"It's just like this: You see, I can do $10 cooking, $15 cooking, $20 cooking, but"—

There was undue emphasis on the "but," and Evangeline glanced admiringly about the house. Evangeline knew her little book well.

—"It seems to me," she went on finally, "you folks wouldn't be satisfied with any other than my $25 kind."

The family was quite taken aback, but managed to recover itself in time to say it might strive to get along as a starter with about $17.35 cooking for a few months, at any rate.—Washington Star.

A Witty Irishman.

Some friends of Archbishop Whately, after dining with him, asked him to show them a specimen of Irish wit. Taking a stroll in the street, he inquired of a crossing sweeper which of the two the devil would take if he was obliged to secure one of them.

"Pl'ase, yer riverence, ask Father Malony yonder."

"No; I want your opinion."

"Och, yer riverence, I'm sorry to say he'd take me!"

"And why so, Terence?"

"Och, because he's sure of yer riverence at any time!"

Why He Preferred to Stay.

Landlord—You will oblige me by paying your rent, now three months overdue. Unless you can pay you must move. Or is the rent higher than you can afford? In that case we might perhaps—

Tenant—No, I think I'd rather stay right along at the present rate than be obliged to face the alternative of pay or move.—Exchange.

Rapid Transit Returns.

The Thompson Courier puts it this way: If you ask a man for an ad or a few locals he will tell you he doesn't believe in advertising—a paper is never read. But let him be caught hugging the hired girl or chasing a loose piece of calico up the street after dark or struggling with a jug of "tamarin" water, if the printing office is in the garret of a twenty-story building, he will climb to the top to ask the editor not to publish it in the paper where everybody will read it.

Groceries today average fully ten per cent higher and lost of things called the cessities of life have taken an upward turn. To be sure wages are better in many cases, but the man who receives the same salary he did one or two years ago is getting the worst end of the deal just now, and the first thing you know you will hear some loud squealing which will not redound to the benefit of the party now in power and it may work disastrously when the people get another chance at the polls. This is thrown out merely as a reminder of breakers ahead.—"Gossip" in Anoka Union.

HARD LUCK.

The Thief River Light Plant Drowns Its Big Wheel

The electric light in Thief River Falls was to be turned on to-day, but on awaking yesterday morning the turbine water wheel was found to have played the McGinty act and gone to the bottom of the river. The council is being critisized for having purchased a McGinty wheel. 'Tis not alone the whereabouts of Pat Crowe that concerns the good people of the thriving up-river burg, but the whereabouts of the new water wheel. Some say it is in the bottom of the river near where it disappeared and others claim it floated down stream and that Harry Ives snubbed it before it went over the St. Hilaire dam. The fact is the foundation was faulty and the wheel went down. This with the bonds which are defective along with the execrations of the citizens makes an alderman's life not worth living.

The estimated cost of the plant was three thousand dollars. It has now cost $7,000. The banks have refused to buy the bonds, claiming a defect in issuing them and the city fathers are up in the air. Verily Thief River has its troubles as well as other municipalities.—Crookston Times Dec. 29.

Smallpox is What He Had.

Dr. Beckman of St. Paul went to Bemidji last week to examine the case of the man who was mentioned in the Times as having been placed under quarantine by the authorities of that village. The doctor is a member of the state board of health, a specialist in the detection of smallpox and he unhesitatingly pronounced it a genuine case. He commended the promptness of the authorities in taking measures to prevent contagion, and directed even more stringent action to safeguard the community from a spread of the pestilence.

The man drifted in from one of the lumber camps east of Bemidji and it is possible that before he was placed under quarantine he may have spread the infection. Sufficient time has not yet elapsed to determine whether or not this is the case.—Crookston Times.

A glimpse of the luxury with which rich Americans surround themselves is given in the January issue of The Ladies' Home Journal, under the title "Housekeeping in a Millionaire's family." If this issue of the Journal is a fair sample of what the popular magazine intends to give its readers in the new century its already wide field of usefulness will be greatly enhanced. One of the striking features of the January Journal, "The Baltimore Belle who made the most brilliant match of any girl in America," recalls the fact that a Yankee "Queen" once sat on a Vice-Regal throne in Ireland. There is a little play for amateurs, "The little women' play," adapted from Miss Alcott's story. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps brings more humor into the domestic complications of "The Successors of Mary the First," Charles Major tells a thrilling "Blue River Bear Story," and Clifford Howard contributes another chapter of "The Story of a Young Man." "A Winter Service at Church," by W. L. Taylor, and A. B. Frost's "Town Meeting" are page pictorial features that will be received with great favor. Edward Bok has an article on "The Two Centuries and This Magazine," giving a short review of the history of the Journal. There are also many other features that will prove useful and helpful to home-makers. By The Curtis Publishing Company Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

100 Years Ago.

In 1800 the rates of letter postage were as follows: Under 40 miles, 8 cents, over 40 miles and under 90 miles 10 cents; over 90 miles and under 150 miles, 12½ cents: over 150 miles and under 300 miles, 17 cents; over 150 miles and under 400 miles, 18¾ cents and over 400 miles, 25 cents. There was no general reduction from these rates until 1845.

The second census taken in 1800 showed 5,308,483 population, including 896,849 slaves. The population of New York City was 60,489; Philadelphia 40,000; Boston 24,937, Washington city had about 1,000 population, with one tavern and a few good houses. A portion of the government buildings were completed. President Adams occupied the unfinished White house.

In the chief towns there were stepping stones across the streets for pedestrians to keep them out of the mud. There were no railways or parks, or public statues or monuments to commemorate men or events. The watchman went his rounds at night with a rattle and lantern, calling out the hours and the state of the weather and stopped and demanded the name of every person found walking on the streets after 9 o'clock. Houses were not numbered, and streets were not named.

It is hard to make it seem true that Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and the fathers of the republic never saw a railroad or a telegraph line, or a sewing machine, or a photograph, or a typewriter, or a rubber band, or a shoe, or a piano, or a stem-winding watch, or a cyclopedia, or a dictionary, or a chroma or a steel engraving, or a friction match or a heating stove or furnace, or a gass or electric light plant, or a fire engine, or a thousand and one other things common to every one to-day.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Corresndent

Delegate Wilcox, of Hawaii, will draw more mileage than any other member of Congress has ever drawn, for the same period of time. He has already drawn $1,000 for mileage in coming to attend the present session, and he will get the same amount for his return to Hawaii, and $2,000 for each session of the next Congress, making $6,000 in all. The amount of mileage allowed Congressmen is 20 cents a mile by the most direct and practicable route from his home to Washington and return. Hawaii is 5,000 miles from Washington. If Mr. Wilcox paid his fare and had the best accommodation to be had it did not cost him over $200 to come from Hawaii to Washington, but the chances are that he traveled on a pass.

If Senator Hanna was bluffing when he issued his edict that if the Ship subsidy bill was not passed there would be an extra session of Congress, the bluff has been promptly called. Senator Pettigrew said on the subject: "If it is necessary to put through a job like the Shipping bill to enable Senator Hanna to pay his campaign debts, I think it would be well to have it done at an extra session of Congress, and thus invite attention more directly to it. It will not be passed if I can help it. Those of us who are most strongly opposed to it propose to fight it in every way we can." As to how the bill would be fought Mr. Pettigrew said: "As long as they continue to force the shipping bill to the front I and those who agree with me will fight every bill that is brought up. If the appropriation bills are forced over into an extra session it will be because of the efforts to pass the shipping bill." That is about as plain as it could be made. The two Senators who have agreed to help Senator Pettigrew are Butler, of N. C., and Allen, of Nebraska. It is also probable that they will be joined by democratic Senators, all of whom are strongly opposed to the principle involved in the Ship Subsidy bill. Now, it is up to Mr. Hanna to say whether there shall be an extra session. He can easily avoid one by abandoning the Ship subsidy bill.

The official admission that "no less than 30,000" cases of leprosy are on record in the Philippine Islands will be a starting piece of information to the people of the United States. It is doubtless the most pitiable and loathsome affliction that is visited upon the human race, and still worse is the fact that to date medical science has discovered no remedy either to alleviate materially its accompanying distress or to actually prevent its spread. The situation, therefore, is much graver than that which the Americans were forced to face in Cuba when yellow fever made its appearance in the ranks of the army. Dread as is this scourge, it is still subject to cure and ultimate control. But the curse of leprosy remains an unrestrained agency of death, by slow but sure stages. The admission that "at least" 30,000 cases are on record is accompanied by the statement that many of the victims have isolated themselves, so that it is impossible to secure an absolutely accurate census of the cases in the archipelago. The care of these people will call for nurses who practically surrender their lives when they devote themselves to this work. A corps of physicians will be necessary also, and altogether such a settlement would mean actually the establishment of some special mode of government for the infected islands. The question is one which will tax the ingenuity of the medical bureau of the government, and no one can now attempt to predict the result. Many cases of the disease will doubtless be brought to this country by returning soldiers, who have benevolently but unconsciously assimilated it, and who will undoubtedly communicate it to others.

At 37 he was a United States senator, with a splendid education and with the reputation of being one of the most brilliant men in the senate. But how he worked for it!

During his early life he worked night and day trying to make himself a better man, and he was able to stand the strain and to succeed because he was careful of his health. THE CHANGE OF LIFE

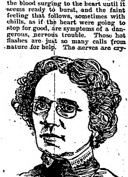
Is the most important period in a woman's existence. Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are symptoms of a dangerous, nervous trouble. Those hot flashes are just so many calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.



MRS. JENNIE NOBLE.

It builds up the weakened nervous system, and enables a woman to pass that grand change triumphantly.

"I was a very sick woman, caused by Change of Life. I suffered with hot flushes, and fainting spells. I was afraid to go on the street, my head and back troubled me so. I was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. JENNIE NOBLE, 4010 Keyser St., Germantown, Pa.

HER FATAL LOQUACITY.

She was quite a worthy woman, but her best friends would allow
She had a tongue,
And her meek and gentle husband ever to her will would bow,
Because she clung
Fast unto her owned prerogative, which was, as he averred,
In each one of their discussions to pronounce the final word,
Which would mean a final score or two, all certain to be heard,
With vigor flung.

So for years she masticated textile fabric day by day
Morn, noon and night,
And her meek and gentle husband's hair grew prematurely gray,
As well it might;
But she went abroad a-touring in the mountains round about,
Where she met a stubborn echo, and the echo tired her out,
And her broken spirit, after a last, long, despairing shout,
Did wing its flight.

Morrill's Discovery.

BY AD. H. GIBSON.

(Copyrighted, 1900, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

There was a look of profound disgust upon the handsome face of Tom Morrill, editor of the Nutshell Magazine, as he tossed aside the manuscript of the story he had been reading and lighted a cigar.

"This is the third month we have printed the notice that the Nutshell desires a number of fresh and original stories—tales out of the beaten track, that have something in them besides stale dialogue and worn-out plots," he muttered. "But what has been the result? An inundation of trash—driftwood, that only an idiot would publish and nobody read!"

At that moment the office door opened and a girl came timidly into the room. She glanced shyly at Morrill, then stammered:

"I—I have a story here. If you will let me leave it—if you will read it—"

"Certainly. I'll be glad to examine it," answered the editor, noting with a thrill of admiration the tall, graceful figure, the profusion of sunny hair, and the wine-dark eyes of his shy caller.

"Oh, thank you!" she responded with a look of gratitude in her lovely face. Morrill's heart felt a strange flutter.

"When may I call to see if—if you can use it?" she asked, placing a small package on the desk.

"Tomorrow," said Morrill, feeling that he would not care how soon she came back.

"Then I shall call tomorrow evening."

A moment later she quitted the editorial room.

Morrill took up the manuscript, written in delicate characters, beautiful as a copy plate.

"A school girl's composition," he said half-pityingly, as he glanced it over hastily. "It's too bad, but a solemn fact, generally, that beauty and genius never go together."

The he began to read:

"The Children of the Valley of the Red Cactus. By Angie Thorn."

"Angie! The name suits her—something like angel. But what a queer title! Who knows—?" he mused.

And so Morrill read on, too deeply interested in the strange, tragic narrative of pure, unselfish sacrifice, to note the little crudities here and there in style and construction.

To Morrill the story was a revelation. Its very crudeness seemed to draw him, and in the rugged simplicity that clothed the sad but beautiful little tale, he recognized that artless grace which glorifies what genius touches.

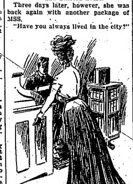
"My discovery!" he cried enthusiastically. "Through the Nutshell I shall have the honor of introducing this new genius to the world."

When Angie Thorn called next evening Morrill handed her a liberal check for her story and asked her to submit other manuscripts.

It was evident she had not expected such ready acceptance, and with tears in her pretty eyes she stammered out her thanks and hurried home.

Three days later, however, she was back again with another package of MSS.

"Have you always lived in the city?"



"Certainly, I'll be glad to examine it."

Morrill ventured to ask her.

"Oh, no, sir! We have just moved here," she answered in a musical voice. "We came from Southern Texas."

"Ah! That is where you learned so much about Mexico."

"Yes."

Not wishing to appear impertinent Morrill did not question her further. But after she was gone he mused a good deal on the "we."

"Herself and an invalid mother, no doubt," was the solution he at last accepted as most probable.

The busy editor of The Nutshell was fast becoming deeply interested in his fair contributor. This was especially remarkable from the fact that Tom Morrill had never taken much notice of women. His intimate friends said he was too much in love with literature to marry.

One day he took a long ride on the electric cars. Then after a little walk he found himself in a quiet street. He was not long in locating "No. 714," a plain little cream-colored house, with flowers in the yard. Just opposite was an inviting park. Morrill crossed the street, and walking leisurely up and down the shaded paths, he kept his eyes on No. 714.

Presently Angie came out and hovered over a bed of lilies. She was soon joined by a tall, thin man with a very sickly complexion. He limped painfully. Morrill felt a [illegible] shot through him, as the girl turned and placed her arms lovingly around the cripple.

"Who are they?" he asked a boy who was playing marbles in the park.

"Their name's Thorn," returned the freckled urchin.

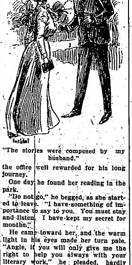
"He's Thorn, too—a brother to the girl, my granny says," replied the boy, as he chased a recreant marble.

This information gave Morrill instant relief. Noble Angie! It was a crippled brother whom she was trying to support with her pen.

Morrill went home fully resolved to help the girl to the entire extent of his power in her literary efforts. He declined nothing that she wrote for his magazine, but patiently went over her work, eliminating crudities and changing a word here and there, thus adding vigor to the story. Then he wrote her kind letters of advice and sent her books to read. Under his friendly criticism her style soon improved, and her fame through the pages of The Nutshell grew each month. Then the editor began to be deluged with letters, asking all kinds of questions about this new writer, and several of his editor friends wrote him, congratulating him upon his discovery of this new star in the production of short stories.

Morrill then wrote Angie, begging permission to use her portrait and a short sketch of herself in his magazine. But she firmly refused his requests, and Morrill's most eloquent entreaties were futile to change her decision not to give her picture to the public. Although slightly vexed at her obstinate caprice, as he called it, he liked her more for not showing a "common vanity."

The park opposite No. 714 became his favorite resort for taking his "constitutional." If he caught but a glimpse of a graceful, willowy figure among the flowers, he went back to the office well rewarded for his long journey.



"The stories were composed by my husband."

One day he found her reading in the park.

"Do not go," he begged, as she started to leave. "I have something of importance to say to you. You must stay and listen. I have kept my secret for months."

He came toward her, and the warm light in his eyes made her turn pale. "Angie, if you will only give me the right to help you always with your literary work," he pleaded, hardly knowing how to tell his story—his heart's sweet tale—now that he had begun. "You can help me so much, too; we will——"

"Stop!" she cried, a sharp, cruel ring in her voice. "I have deceived you. I am not the writer of those stories."

"You are jesting with me," he said.

"No; I have been the copyist; another is the author," her hands working nervously with her book.

"But you signed your own name to the manuscripts," he said.

"Yes, because he wished me to do so."

"He? Oh! I understand. The stories were dictated to you by your brother."

"I have no brother," with flushing cheeks. "The stories were composed by my husband."

"Husband!" Morrill gasped the word, and started back as if she had struck him.

"Yes," she went on in tones that seemed to freeze him. "My husband met with an accident that made him a cripple for life. We came here to please a friend, who insisted that we should live in this house, rent free. We are poor and must work. My husband decided to try writing for papers and magazines. We both believed that a woman, as a beginner in that field, would get more kindly treatment from editors, than a man. So my name was used and I played author."

She gave a little laugh at her own cleverness. Morrill looked into her eyes with reproach too deep for speech. Then he walked away.

He resigned the editorship of The Nutshell, and went to Japan as correspondent. Angie Tohrn is sending MSS. now to other periodicals.

Victoria and Her Royal Cats.

When Queen Victoria arrived at Windsor the other day she was accompanied by a vanload of cats. The Queen is a great lover of cats, and so are some of the other members of the royal family, so when the Court moves it is accompanied by a cat caravan. The cats go to Balmoral, to Osborne, to Windsor and to Buckingham Palace as regularly as the Queen does. There are Persian cats, Manx cats, Angora cats, Maltese cats, tabby cats and tom cats, and they all travel in state. They are placed in wooden boxes with an open wire front and have plenty of clean straw to lie on. One Persian cat, of which the Queen is especially fond, wears around its neck an elaborate collar on which appears in silver letters, "I belong to the Queen." Princess Beatrice's especial favorite is a white cat of the ordinary back-fence breed.

A Remarkable Alternative.

A little boy and girl, whose mother was ill and inaccessible, were overheard by their aunt holding the following pathetic consultation on the subject of their nurse's unkindness to them:

"What shall we do?" said the girl, hopelessly.

"I'm going to ask father to send nurse away," replied her brother, sturdily.

"What shall you do if he won't?"

"Then I'll ask God to help us."

"But perhaps God won't send her away."

"Well, then," said the little chap, in desperate earnestness, "I'll see what the devil can do for us."

After proper investigation, it is pleasant to know that the nurse was dismissed.—Chicago Tribune.

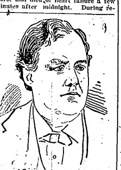
DONNELLY IS DEAD

DEATH'S SUMMONS COMES VERY SUDDENLY.

Heart Failure Takes Off One of Minnesota's Best Known Literary and Public Men—Was Visiting His Wife's Parents in Minneapolis—Was Apparently in the Best of Health a Few Hours Before Death—Taken Ill Shortly After Eating Dinner and Dies a Few Hours Later.

Minneapolis, Jan. 3.—Ignatius Donnelly, one of the best known literary and public men in Minnesota, formerly lieutenant governor and thrice elected to congress, died shortly after midnight last night at the home of his father-in-law, Martin Hanson, 3022 Twenty-eighth avenue north, Minneapolis. At 6 o'clock last evening Mr. Donnelly seemed to be in his usual good health. But soon after eating dinner he complained of feeling ill. He grew rapidly worse and died of heart failure a few minutes after midnight. During recent years Mr. Donnelly has spent much of his time in Minneapolis, where he edited the Representative. Although his home is at Nininger, he divided his time between his country place and the city. He went to Minneapolis yesterday morning with his wife and was visiting his wife's parents.



IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Apparently in Good Health.

During the afternoon, Mr. Donnelly was at his office in the Boston block engaged in writing for his publication. He left the office at 4:30 and was apparently in the best of health. He ate dinner with his wife and her parents at 6 o'clock and then complained of feeling sick. He retired and soon afterward was apparently much worse. Dr. Murphy was summoned at 9 o'clock. He found his patient unconscious. Advancing age had weakened the sick man's constitution and it was apparent that his recovery was hopeless; that medical science was of no avail. Without recovering consciousness he died three hours later.

Mr. Donnelly was born in Philadelphia in 1831. He graduated from the high school in that city and at the completion of a three-year course in law was admitted to the bar. Two years later he married. He in 1856 and divided his time between farming and literary pursuits. Mr. Donnelly had the honor of being the first lieutenant governor elected in the state by the Republican party. He was chosen to that position in 1859, and at the expiration of his term was re-elected. The following year, in 1861, he was elected to congress, and twice succeeded himself. When he ran for the office a fourth time a combination was made against him and he was defeated.

Mr. Donnelly continued from that time to be an important and unique figure in politics. After his defeat for congress in 1865 he twice refused a nomination, but in 1870 he ran independently and lost by a narrow margin. He stumped the state, together with Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, in the interests of Greeley in 1872, and the following year was from Dakota county.

Later he was nominated for congress by the Anti-Monopolists and Democrats, but was defeated by Washburn. In 1884 he again ran for congress and was this time defeated by Maj. Strait.

As a man Mr. Donnelly was very social in his nature, bubbling over with good humor and anecdote and an excellent conversationalist. As a speaker he was regarded as one of the best on account of his humor and conclusiveness, and in his writings he had an original way of arraying his facts and hewing his way to conclusiveness.

It was in the literary field, however, that he achieved a national reputation. His published works are: "Alantis," "Ragnarok, the Age of Fire and Gravel," "Caesar's Column" and "The Great Cryptogram," which latter attempts to prove that Bacon was the author of Shakespeare's plays. Mr. Donnelly married for the second time on Feb. 22, 1897, his bride being Miss Hanson.

TO SUCCEED HIMSELF.

Senator McMillan of Michigan Receives the Caucus Nomination.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 3. — Senator James McMillan was nominated by the joint Republican caucus of the forty-first legislature, which will convene today, to succeed himself. His election to a third term in the senate is assured as the legislature is overwhelmingly Republican.

CUIGNET CONVICTED.

Court-Martial Sentences Him to Sixty Days' Imprisonment.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The court martial in the case of Maj. Cuignet, who was accused of betraying army documents in connection with the Dreyfus case, has found him guilty and imposed a sentence of sixty days' confinement in a fortress. Gen. Andre, the minister of war, had imposed a similar punishment on this officer for other violations of army regulations and he is now confined at Fort Valerian.

TRIBUTE OF CLOSE FRIENDS.

Simplicity Marks the Funeral of Ignatius Donnelly.

St. Paul, Jan. 7. — Rich in its simplicity was the funeral of Ignatius Donnelly, which took place at 10 o'clock Saturday morning from the residence of his son, Stanislaus J. Donnelly, 817 Portland avenue. Upon the coffin lay a bouquet of yellow roses and palm leaves tied with a lavender ribbon. Other flowers were displayed sparingly about the room. Candles glowed from a candelabrum near the head of the casket. Of the dead man's innumerable friends only the most intimate felt justified in coming to a funeral almost private. But those who came filled the house. Requiem mass was said by Rev. Ambrose McNulty of St. Luke's church, who added no words of superfluous eulogy. The pall bearers were Gov. John Lind, Gen. Moses E. Clapp, Capt. M. J. O'Connor, Dr. J. C. Markoe, Thomas D. O'Brien, J. M. Hawthorne, Patrick Rahilly of Wabasha and J. B. Lambert of Hastings. Relatives in the house included the widow, a daughter, Mrs. Mary F. Giltinan, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Donnelly and several grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

EXPLICIT DENIAL.

Crow's Nest Pass Coal Fields Have Not Been Bought by J. J. Hill.

Toronto, Can., Jan. 7. — There is no truth in the story wired from St. Paul and Winnipeg during the last day or two that the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company are selling out to J. J. Hill of the Great Northern railway. Maj. Pellatt and other directors of the coal company returned to Toronto Saturday from their conference with Mr. Hill at St. Paul. When seen the major spoke of the story of the sale as absolutely ridiculous. He intimated that the coal fields were valuable enough to be worth holding on to by himself and his associates. He confirmed Jaffray's statement that the conference with Hill was in connection with the proposition to supply the Great Northern with forty carloads of coal daily. It is understood that before long the Great Northern will build a line of its own into the coal fields. Meantime the coal will be taken out over the Canadian Pacific.

COAL MINERS KILLED.

Walked Onto a Charge They Had Set Off.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 7.—W. A. Jenkins and Thomas Bennett, employed as professional blasters in Mine No. 4 at Cleveland, west of this city, were instantly killed. They were putting off a number of shots and in come manner became confused and walked onto a charge that exploded just in time to kill them. Both were married and they had been working for the Whitebreast Coal company in this and other mines for years.

Many Horses Burned.

Manistee, Mich., Jan. 7.—The livery barn of Henry Radamacher was destroyed with its contents, including twenty-nine horses. The fire also burned a block of buildings adjoining. While the fire was in progress an unknown man was seen to rush into a burning dwelling to assist in saving goods. Just as he entered it collapsed and his remains were found in the ruins. Total loss, $25,000; partly insured.

Arrested at His Sweetheart's Home.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Fred Nelson of Lehigh was arrested at the home of his sweetheart at Mondamin, Iowa, on the charge of horse stealing. Nelson is said to have stolen his father's horse, brought it to Fort Dodge and sold it for $30. His father reclaimed the horse and the matter was placed in the hands of the sheriff, who located Nelson at Mondamin after a long search.

Scarlet Fever Closes Normal School.

Madison, S. D., Jan. 7.—State normal school closed suddenly owing to development of a case of scarlet fever in the ladies' dormitory. Miss O. C. Niel of Federa was visited by her sister ten days ago. The latter is now down with fever at home. The former is the case in school here. There is a case quarantined. The faculty closed the school and 250 students departed for home.

Blind Deaf Mute Burned to Death.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Albert Munson, a blind deaf mute nearly forty years of age, was burned to death at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Pilot, in Crawford county. The unfortunate man occupied a small house by himself adjoining the Pilot residence. Mrs. Pilot was fearfully burned while trying to rescue her brother.

Fatally Burned.

West Superior, Wis., Jan. 7.—J. D. Smith, a well known laundryman, was fatally burned by a lamp which exploded while he was undressing for bed. His face was burned beyond recognition and his body was also terribly scorched. Smith's wife and child were visiting a neighbor at the time of the accident. He cannot survive.

Only One Contest.

Grinnell, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Sac county will have one contest for office over the Titus amendment act. All the county officers with one exception will step out without protest. County Clerk W. C. Waddell, however, will ascertain his rights and will refuse to step out until deposed by the court.

Strike at Prairie du Chien.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Jan. 7.—A strike occurred here at the woolen company's plant as the result of a 5 per cent cut in wages. Fifty hands refused to work.

Former Minnesotan Killed.

Grinnell, Iowa, Jan. 7. — F. W. Rockey, yard operator for the Burlington road at Iowa Falls, was killed while checking cars. He was struck by a string of cars which was switched in on the side track. Rockey formerly lived at Pipestone, Minn.

CALLING FOR HELP

CAPE COLONY WANTS REINFORCEMENTS FROM ENGLAND.

Vagueness of the Situation Concerning the Movements of the Invaders Has Sent a Fresh Cold Fit Over the Colonists—Greater Part of Kitchener's Force Employed in Protecting the Lines of Communication and the Rand Mines—Slightest Success in Arms of Invaders May Cause a Dutch Rising.

London, Jan. 7.—This morning's news from Cape Town is again unsatisfactory. Martial law has been proclaimed at Malmesbury and would have been proclaimed in other districts, but that the cabinet meeting called Saturday was unable to agree as to its advisability. The vagueness of the situation concerning the movements and position of the invaders has sent a fresh cold fit over the colonists and Cape Town calls loudly for strong reinforcements from England on the ground that the greater part of Lord Kitchener's available force is employed in protecting the lines of communication and the Rand mines, the latter extending for a distance of fifty miles.

It is asserted by one Cape Town correspondent that unless the forces in Cape Colony are increased a most undesirable state of affairs may exist, as the success in arms of the invaders, however slight, might be the signal for a Dutch rising. As it is many British residents have had to leave the Dutch villages near Cape Town, their Lives Being Unbearable.

According to a native report, white men, whether Boers or local farmers, have just passed through the Clan Williams district in the direction of Malmesbury.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily News, who calls for 40,000 fresh troops, says: "Prominent Afrikander loyalists declare that the rebellious colonists will construe the colonial call to arms as a challenge and that the ominous silence of the pro-rebels combined with the fact that members of the pro-Boer junta in Cape Town have been touring in the disaffected districts emphasizes the necessity for martial law. The necessity was never more acute for dispatching reinforcements. Already there is proof that colonials are leading one commando."

The military movements reported are quite unimportant, though Portugal is sending reinforcements to Lourenzo Marques. Dr. Leyds, according to The Hague correspondent of the Daily Mail, is recruiting in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany and his recruits will be sent out to Namaqualand, ostensibly as emigrants, each man receiving £50 down on starting.

USELESS STRUGGLE.

Botha Tells the Boers That Kruger's Mission Has Failed.

Pretoria, Jan. 7.—Gen. Louis Botha, the commander-in-chief of the Boers, has traversed the country with one of his commandoes, from Eremelo to The Springs. Reports differ as to whether he has been advising the burghers to sue for peace or to continue the struggle. All reports, however, agree that he has told the Boers frankly that Mr. Kruger's mission to Europe has been a failure and that it is useless to hope for foreign intervention.

ANOTHER CUDAHY LETTER.

This One Offers to Deliver Information Regarding the Abductors.

Omaha, Jan. 7. — A letter has been turned over to Chief Donahue of the Omaha police department in which an offer is made to deliver certain information to him regarding the abductors of Edward Cudahy, Jr., upon his compliance with certain conditions. The chief and Mr. Cudahy evidently considered the letter authentic and of enough importance to justify a reply, because the following advertisement appeared in the columns of a local paper this morning:

"Your request, asked for in letter mailed at Lincoln on Jan. 4, to be answered before Jan. 7, will be granted.

—"E. A. Cudahy,

—"J. A. Donahue."

Both Mr. Cudahy and Chief Donahue declined to say what the contents of the Lincoln letter were or to refer to the conditions prescribed therein. It is stated that the letter is from a man who knows every member of the gang which kidnapped Eddie Cudahy on Dec. 18. Further, it is stated positively that the revelations to be made by the writer of the letter involve a well known man in this city who has been suspected, but against whom no positive proof could be obtained. The acceptance of the offer of the unknown writer leads to the belief that he has placed a price on his knowledge of the crime, and has taken this means to protect himself from discovery, as he gave no address in his letter, advising an advertisement to be inserted if his propositions were considered favorably.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

It Is Now About Seven Miles Southeast of Columbus, Ind.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The census bureau has issued the following: "The center of population is in the following position: Latitude 39 degrees, 9 minutes, 36 seconds; longitude 85 degrees, 48 minutes, 54 seconds. In ten years the center of population has moved westward 36 minutes, 1 second, about 14 miles, and southward 2 minutes, 20 seconds, or about 3 miles. It now rests in Southern Indiana at a point about seven miles southeast of the city of Columbus."

Insanity Runs in the Family.

Pana, Ill., Jan. 7.— Mercen Iouga, aged fifty-eight, a farmer of Mount Auburn township, has been adjudged insane. His father and uncle are insane. At present a son and daughter of the unfortunate man are in the insane asylum. Iouga was violent. His wife was his first cousin.

Mother and Two Children Drowned.

Jamestown, Cal., Jan. 7. — Mrs. A. Bennett and two children were drowned near here while trying to ford Sullivan creed in a buggy.

CONGRESS.

Senate Adopts Committee Amendments to Army Bill.

Washington, Jan. 7.—While the senate was in session for more than three hours Saturday little in the way of important legislation was accomplished. The committee amendments to the army reorganization bill to which no objection had been raised was agreed to, but none of the contested amendments was considered.

In the House.

The feature of the debate upon the reapportionment bill in the house was a two-hour speech by Mr. Littlefield of Maine in favor of the Burleigh bill to increase the membership of the house to 386. During the day Mr. Hopkins expressed a willingness to accept an amendment to his bill which gives an additional representative each to Florida, Colorado and North Dakota, the three states with majority fractions unrepresented in his bill.

GOLD RECORD BROKEN.

United States Treasury Now Holds Nearly [illegible] of a Billion Dollars.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The gross gold in the treasury to-day, said Ellis H. Roberts, United States treasurer, is $480,719,005, breaking all records. At the end of March, 1889, the treasury held $328,293,001, which was the largest sum accumulated during any administration in recent years until within the last two or three years. Our immense gold holdings are due, of course, to the great prosperity of the country, to the increased production of gold in all directions and in large part to the fact that the United States is now the creditor nation of the world." Mr. Roberts thought that for the present, at least, there would continue to be an increased treasury holding of gold, but it might be reduced somewhat should the reduction of the war revenue taxes be so heavy as to run the expenditures close to the receipts.

FATAL WRECK IN INDIANA.

Passenger Train Runs Into Open Switch.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 7. — A Big Four passenger train going from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Indianapolis, ran into an open switch and collided with a switch engine at the Kelly ax works, near Alexandria. The passenger train left the track and rolled over an embankment. John [illegible], engineer on the passenger, was killed. John Bates, the passenger fireman, is fatally injured. Not one of the passengers in the train was seriously hurt.

EIGHT LIVES LOST

TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE OCCURS IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Early Morning Fire Is Attended With Loss of Life—Roomers in a Lodging House Are Awakened, Only to Be Suffocated to Death—Several of the Victims Die After Being Rescued — Anxious Hands Work to Resuscitate the Victims, but the Deadly Smoke Was the Victor.

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.—A loss of life equaling in number that following the never to be forgotten Tribune fire, which occurred Nov. 30, 1889, is the result of the blaze which gutted the four-story brick building occupied as a store and lodging house at 115 Washington avenue south early yesterday morning.

Eight men perished in the suffocating smoke. Had they hastened to a place of safety at once they would not have lost their lives. Failing to realize the seriousness of the situation they first attempted to dress themselves. Before they had time to get on their clothes the top floors were filled with a smoke in which no human being could live.

As soon as the bodies were recovered anxious hands set to work to resuscitate them. An hour and more willing firemen, under the direction of physicians present, worked the arms, pulled out the tongues and in every manner known to modern science attempted to restore respiration. The deadly smoke was the victor, however, and had done its work completely.

That the unfortunates might have saved themselves had they been more prompt in seeking exit is shown by the fact that several of those who are still alive occupied adjoining rooms.

The fire started under the stairway leading to a half-story in the store of the Standard Furniture company, which occupied the ground floor. Its origin is unknown, but spontaneous combustion is thought to have been responsible. The fire made rapid headway, finding several mattresses and upholstered furniture excellent food. It soon burst into a bed room on the second floor and immediately the entire structure was filled with smoke.

Almost directly above the place where the fire started a large can of kerosene stood on the second floor. The heat soon melted the solder and the fluid ran out. At once the flames made amazing headway and in an instant the second floor at the rear was a mass of flames. This is what caused the dense smoke, and this also accounts for the terrible rapidity with which the flames spread.

The monetary loss is estimated at less than $4,000.

CLARK IN CONTROL.

He Will Be Elected and Also Dictate the Short Term Honors.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 7.—The caucus of fusionists held in Helena on the speakership indicates that W. A. Clark has absolute control of the legislature, and that he will not only be elected to the senate, but will be able to name the man for the short term. F. A. Heinze, the Republican who was an ally of Clark in the campaign, has far less strength than he had been credited with. The result, it is predicted, will be that the legislature will not pass the dangerous legislation which Heinze had promised to drive the Amalgamated Copper and Standard Oil companies from the state. An eight-hour workday will, however, probably be passed.

He then moved to Faribault and for years published the Faribault Republican. Later he moved to Mankato and published the Record up to a few years ago, when he retired from active work. He was for eleven years postmaster at Mankato, and was throughout an ardent Republican.

DIES IN DEFENSE OF HER HONOR.

Handsome Young Woman the Victim of a Most Brutal Crime.

Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 6.—One of the most brutal of crimes was committed last evening at Hackney, Morgan county, by which Miss Nellie Morris, aged nineteen, handsome and accomplished, lost her life. As Miss Morris was returning home from the postoffice by way of a path through the fields, she was accosted by Walter A. Weinstock, a young man aged eighteen, who lived near her home. He made indecent proposals to her and she immediately started to run. He grabbed her and threw her to the ground. She screamed and fought hard, finally getting to her feet. Weinstock drew a razor from his pocket and cut her across the neck, severing the neck muscles and laying bare the jugular vein. Miss Morris grabbed the razor with her hands and they were cut to pieces in her attempt to rescue herself from the man. Her fingers were cut off and her wrists were cut, as well as her entire right arm and left arm badly disfigured. Her dress was torn from her in shreds and when people arrived she was almost naked. She died from the effects of her wounds shortly after the assault. She was the daughter of Benjamin Morris, a business man of this city. Weinstock was grabbed by a crowd of men who bound him with ropes, hand and foot, and removed him to a building where more than 1,500 men watched over him. A telephone message was sent to McConnellsville for officers to come and take him. The people of Hackney are greatly excited and a mob is being organized to hang Weinstock. Weinstock recently returned from the reformatory, where he served a term for attempting to kill his father, a rich farmer of Morgan county.

Wagner, Pennsylvania; B. T. Clayton, New York and W. I. Smith of Iowa, went to Bristol, Pa., the home of the Booz family, and heard the testimony of four members of that family. In the afternoon four physicians who attended Oscar Booz were heard and in the evening in Philadelphia two more physicians and two other witnesses were given an opportunity to tell what they knew of the case. Most of the evidence adduced has already been brought out by the military board of inquiry.

Consul Ford is a native of Maine.

The girl was slightly ill and was to have met her father at noon at the Sixth avenue elevated railroad. She did not keep the appointment. He waited for three hours and then went home. There he was told that Mary left the house in time to keep the appointment, and that nothing more was known of her.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the U. S. Treasury Recommends Peruna.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, Medical Examiner of U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systematic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does. Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is not a guess nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

A free book written by Dr. Hartman, on the subject of catarrh in its different phases and stages, will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

NOMINAL FEES TO FAVORITES.

A Parisian Barber Who Charges According to Nationalities — Hates German and English.

Leo Lespes is one of the most prominent of Parisian barbers, and, being the fashion, has quite a large clientele. A Dutchman recently visited his establishment, and, approaching the counter where Leo was enthroned, he asked how much there was to pay. The barber looked at him with scrutinizing eyes, then called his first "garcon," a Spaniard, like himself, and asked a few questions. "Five francs, mein herr," at last said Leo Lespes.

"Five francs! What a high price, Mr. Lespes. I was only shaved, you know, that's all."

"Tiens, tiens!" murmured the coiffeur. "By your accent I should not quite take you for a German. What did you say, Maurll—that monsieur was a German? Nonsense! It is two francs, sir. Beg your pardon."

The gentleman who, like a true Dutchman, is not talkative, paid his money and left the shop. But in the evening he asked the friend who had sent him to Lespes what this singular conduct could signify.

"Oh!" answered the Parisian, "of course, I ought to have told you. Leo Lespes has various prices, according to the nationality of his clients and his own fancy. For instance, he charges 5 francs to a German or an Englishman, for he hates them; 3 francs to Russians and 2 francs to a Parisian and people in general whom he cannot guess where they come from. He shaves an Italian for 1 franc, and a Spaniard, though he be a grandee of the first class, for 50 centimes, and lately he said to me: "Monsieur, if I have ever the honor of seeing a Boer in my establishment, I should not only shave him for nothing, but also present him with a cravat and a toothbrush."

THWARTED PRINCE OF WALES.

"Bob Sutton," Snubbed at Court, but Secures Horse Coveted by Albert Edward.

Some years ago the British court was scandalized by the announcement that Robert Standish Sievere, well known throughout Australia as "Bob Sutton, the bookmaker," had managed to get presented at court. When Mr. Siever's identity with Bob Sutton was discovered, the presentation was cancelled. Though the mills of the gods grind slowly, they grind surely, and "Bob" has had his revenge on the Court of St. James, or he thinks he has. At the sale of the late Duke of Westminster's stud the Australian "bookie" was bidding for a filly by the Prince of Wales' Derby winner, Persimmon, from Ornament. When the bidding had reached 6,000 guineas Sutton was confidentially told that the prince wished to secure the filly.

"So do I," was Mr. Sutton's answer, with some quaint Australian expressions added.

The bidding was continued, and the filly was eventually knocked down to the bookmaker at the unprecedented price of 10,000 guineas.—Chicago Chronicle.

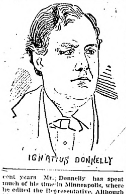
DONNELLY IS DEAD

DEATH'S SUMMONS COMES VERY SUDDENLY.

Heart Failure Takes Off One of Minnesota's Best Known Literary and Public Men—Was Visiting His Wife's Parents in Minneapolis—Was Apparently in the Best of Health a Few Hours Before Death—Taken Ill Shortly After Eating Dinner and Dies a Few Hours Later.

Minneapolis, Jan. 3.—Ignatius Donnelly, one of the best known literary and public men in Minnesota, formerly lieutenant governor and thrice elected to congress, died shortly after midnight last night at the home of his father-in-law, Martin Hanson, 2022 Twenty-eighth avenue north, Minneapolis. At 6 o'clock last evening Mr. Donnelly seemed to be in his usual good health. But soon after eating dinner he complained of feeling ill. He grew rapidly worse and died of heart failure a few minutes after midnight. During recent years Mr. Donnelly has spent much of his time in Minneapolis, where he edited the Representative. Although his home is at Nininger, he divided his time between his country place and the city. He went to Minneapolis yesterday morning with his wife and was visiting his wife's parents.



IGNATIUS DONNELLY

Apparently in Good Health.

During the afternoon, Mr. Donnelly was at his office in the Boston block engaged in writing for his publication. He left the office at 4:30 and was apparently in the best of health. He ate dinner with his wife and her parents at 6 o'clock and then complained of feeling sick. He retired and soon afterward was apparently much worse. Dr. Murphy was summoned at 9 o'clock. He found his patient unconscious. Advancing age had weakened the sick man's constitution and it was apparent that his recovery was hopeless; that medical science was of no avail. Without recovering consciousness he died three hours later.

Mr. Donnelly was born in Philadelphia in 1831. He graduated from the high school in that city and at the completion of a three-year course in law was admitted to the bar. Two years later he married. He in 1856 and divided his time between farming and literary pursuits. Mr. Donnelly had the honor of being the first lieutenant governor elected in the state by the Republican party. He was chosen to that position in 1859, and at the expiration of his term was re-elected. The following year, in 1861, he was elected to congress, and twice succeeded himself. When he ran for the office a fourth time a combination was made against him and he was defeated.

Mr. Donnelly continued from that time to be an important and unique figure in politics. After his defeat for congress in 1865 he twice refused a nomination, but in 1870 he ran independently and lost by a narrow margin. He stumped the state, together with Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, in the interests of Greeley in 1872, and the following year was from Dakota county.

Later he was nominated for congress by the Anti-Monopolists and Democrats, but was defeated by Washburn. In 1884 he again ran for congress and was this time defeated by Maj. Strait.

As a man Mr. Donnelly was very social in his nature, bubbling over with good humor and anecdote and an excellent conversationalist. As a speaker he was regarded as one of the best on account of his humor and conclusiveness, and in his writings he had an original way of arraying his facts and hewing his way to conclusiveness.

It was in the literary field, however, that he achieved a national reputation. His published works are: "Atlantis," "Ragnarok, the Age of Fire and Gravel," "Caesar's Column" and "The Great Cryptogram," which latter attempts to prove that Bacon was the author of Shakespeare's plays. Mr. Donnelly married for the second time on Feb. 22, 1897, his bride being Miss Hanson.

TO SUCCEED HIMSELF.

Senator McMillan of Michigan Receives the Caucus Nomination.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 3. — Senator James McMillan was nominated by the joint Republican caucus of the forty-first legislature, which will convene today, to succeed himself. His election to a third term in the senate is assured as the legislature is overwhelmingly Republican.

CUIGNET CONVICTED.

Court-Martial Sentences Him to Sixty Days' Imprisonment.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The court martial in the case of Maj. Cuignet, who was accused of betraying army documents in connection with the Dreyfus case, has found him guilty and imposed a sentence of sixty days' confinement in a fortress. Gen. Andre, the minister of war, had imposed a similar punishment on this officer for other violations of army regulations and he is now confined at Fort Valerian.

TRIBUTE OF CLOSE FRIENDS.

Simplicity Marks the Funeral of Ignatius Donnelly.

St. Paul, Jan. 7.—Rich in its simplicity was the funeral of Ignatius Donnelly, which took place at 10 o'clock Saturday morning from the residence of his son, Stanislaus J. Donnelly, 817 Portland avenue. Upon the coffin lay a bouquet of yellow roses and palm leaves tied with a lavender ribbon. Other flowers were displayed sparingly about the room. Candles glowed from a candelabrum near the head of the casket. Of the dead man's innumerable friends only the most intimate felt justified in coming to a funeral almost private. But those who came filled the house. Requiem mass was said by Rev. Ambrose McNulty of St. Luke's church, who added no words of superfluous eulogy. The pall bearers were Gov. John Lind, Gen. Moses E. Clapp, Capt. M. J. O'Connor, Dr. J. C. Markoe, Thomas D. O'Brien, J. M. Hawthorne, Patrick Rahilly of Wabasha and J. B. Lambert of Hastings. Relatives in the house included the widow, a daughter, Mrs. Mary F. Gilthan, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Donnelly and several grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

EXPLICIT DENIAL.

Crow's Nest Pass Coal Fields Have Not Been Bought by J. J. Hill.

Toronto, Can., Jan. 7. — There is no truth in the story wired from St. Paul and Winnipeg during the last day or two that the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company are selling out to J. J. Hill of the Great Northern railway. Maj. Pellatt and other directors of the coal company returned to Toronto Saturday from their conference with Mr. Hill at St. Paul. When seen the major spoke of the story of the sale as absolutely ridiculous. He intimated that the coal fields were valuable enough to be worth holding on to by himself and his associates. He confirmed Jaffray's statement that the conference with Hill was in connection with the proposition to supply the Great Northern with forty carloads of coal daily. It is understood that before long the Great Northern will build a line of its own into the coal fields. Meantime the coal will be taken out over the Canadian Pacific.

COAL MINERS KILLED.

Walked Onto a Charge They Had Set Off.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 7.—W. A. Jenkins and Thomas Bennett, employed as professional blasters in Mine No. 4 at Cleveland, west of this city, were instantly killed. Total loss, $25,000; partly insured.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Fred Nelson of Lehigh was arrested at the home of his sweetheart at Mondamin, Iowa, on the charge of horse stealing. His father reclaimed the horse and the matter was placed in the hands of the sheriff, who located Nelson at Mondamin after a long search.

Madison, S. D., Jan. 7.—State normal school closed suddenly owing to development of a case of scarlet fever in the ladies' dormitory. Miss O. C. Niel of Federa was visited by her sister ten days ago. The latter is now down with fever at home. The former is the case in school here. There is a case quarantined. The faculty closed the school and 250 students departed for home.

Blind Deaf Mute Burned to Death.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Albert Munson, a blind deaf mute nearly forty years of age, was burned to death at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Pilot, in Crawford county. The unfortunate man occupied a small house by himself adjoining the Pilot residence. Mrs. Pilot was fearfully burned while trying to rescue her brother.

Fatally Burned.

West Superior, Wis., Jan. 7.—J. D. Smith, a well known laundryman, was fatally burned by a lamp which exploded while he was undressing for bed. His face was burned beyond recognition and his body was also terribly scorched. Smith's wife and child were visiting a neighbor at the time of the accident. He cannot survive.

Grinnell, Iowa, Jan. 7. — Sac county will have one contest for office over the Titus amendment act. All the county officers with one exception will step out without protest. County Clerk W. C. Waddell, however, will ascertain his rights and will refuse to step out until deposed by the court.

CALLING FOR HELP

CAPE COLONY WANTS REINFORCEMENTS FROM ENGLAND.

Vagueness of the Situation Concerning the Movements of the Invaders Has Sent a Fresh Cold Fit Over the Colonists—Greater Part of Kitchener's Force Employed in Protecting the Lines of Communication and the Rand Mines—Slightest Success in Arms of Invaders May Cause a Dutch Rising.

London, Jan. 7.—This morning's news from Cape Town is again unsatisfactory. Martial law has been proclaimed at Malmesbury and would have been proclaimed in other districts, but that the cabinet meeting called Saturday was unable to agree as to its advisability. The vagueness of the situation concerning the movements and position of the invaders has sent a fresh cold fit over the colonists and Cape Town calls loudly for strong reinforcements from England on the ground that the greater part of Lord Kitchener's available force is employed in protecting the lines of communication and the Rand mines, the latter extending for a distance of fifty miles.

It is asserted by one Cape Town correspondent that unless the forces in Cape Colony are increased a most undesirable state of affairs may exist, as the success in arms of the invaders, however slight, might be the signal for a Dutch rising. As it is many British residents have had to leave the Dutch villages near Cape Town, their Lives Being Unbearable.

According to a native report, white men, whether Boers or local farmers, have just passed through the Clan Williams district in the direction of Malmesbury.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily News, who calls for 40,000 fresh troops, says: "Prominent Afrikander loyalists declare that the rebellious colonists will construe the colonial call to arms as a challenge and that the ominous silence of the pro-rebels combined with the fact that members of the pro-Boer junta in Cape Town have been touring in the disaffected districts emphasizes the necessity for martial law. The necessity was never more acute for dispatching reinforcements. Already there is proof that colonials are leading one commando."

The military movements reported are quite unimportant, though Portugal is sending reinforcements to Lourenzo Marques. Dr. Leyds, according to The Hague correspondent of the Daily Mail, is recruiting in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany and his recruits will be sent out to Namaqualand, ostensibly as emigrants, each man receiving £50 down on starting.

USELESS STRUGGLE.

Botha Tells the Boers That Kruger's Mission Has Failed.

Pretoria, Jan. 7.—Gen. Louis Botha, the commander-in-chief of the Boers, has traversed the country with one of his commandoes, from Eremelo to The Springs. Reports differ as to whether he has been advising the burghers to sue for peace or to continue the struggle. All reports, however, agree that he has told the Boers frankly that Mr. Kruger's mission to Europe has been a failure and that it is useless to hope for foreign intervention.

ANOTHER CUDAHY LETTER.

This One Offers to Deliver Information Regarding the Abductors.

Omaha, Jan. 7. — A letter has been turned over to Chief Donahue of the Omaha police department in which an offer is made to deliver certain information to him regarding the abductors of Edward Cudahy, Jr., upon his compliance with certain conditions. The chief and Mr. Cudahy evidently considered the letter authentic and of enough importance to justify a reply, because the following advertisement appeared in the columns of a local paper this morning:

"Your request, asked for in letter mailed at Lincoln on Jan. 4, to be answered before Jan. 7, will be granted.

—"E. A. Cudahy.

—"J. A. Donahue."

Both Mr. Cudahy and Chief Donahue declined to say what the contents of the Lincoln letter were or to refer to the conditions prescribed therein. It is stated that the letter is from a man who knows every member of the gang which kidnapped Eddie Cudahy on Dec. 18. Further, it is stated positively that the revelations to be made by the writer of the letter involve a well known man in this city who has been suspected, but against whom no positive proof could be obtained. The acceptance of the offer of the unknown writer leads to the belief that he has placed a price on his knowledge of the crime, and has taken this means to protect himself from discovery, as he gave no address in his letter, advising an advertisement to be inserted if his propositions were considered favorably.

It now rests in Southern Indiana at a point about seven miles southeast of the city of Columbus."

CONGRESS.

Senate Adopts Committee Amendments to Army Bill.

Washington, Jan. 7.—While the senate was in session for more than three hours Saturday little in the way of important legislation was accomplished. The committee amendments to the army reorganization bill to which no objection had been raised was agreed to, but none of the contested amendments was considered.

In the House.

The feature of the debate upon the reapportionment bill in the house was a two-hour speech by Mr. Littlefield of Maine in favor of the Burleigh bill to increase the membership of the house to 386. During the day Mr. Hopkins expressed a willingness to accept an amendment to his bill which gives an additional representative each to Florida, Colorado and North Dakota, the three states with majority fractions unrepresented in his bill.

GOLD RECORD BROKEN.

United States Treasury Now Holds Nearly Half a Billion Dollars.

Washington, Jan. 7.—"The gross gold in the treasury today," said Ellis H. Roberts, United States treasurer, is $480,719,005, breaking all records. At the end of March, 1889, the treasury held $328,236,001, which was the largest sum accumulated during any administration in recent years until within the last two or three years. Our immense gold holdings are due, of course, to the great prosperity of the country, to the increased production of gold in all directions and in large part to the fact that the United States is now the creditor nation of the world." Mr. Roberts thought that for the present, at least, there would continue to be an increased treasury holding of gold, but it might be reduced somewhat should the reduction of the war revenue taxes be so heavy as to run the expenditures close to the receipts.

FATAL WRECK IN INDIANA.

Passenger Train Runs Into Open Switch.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 7. — A Big Four passenger train going from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Indianapolis, ran into an open switch and collided with a switch engine at the Kelly ax works, near Alexandria. Not one of the passengers in the train was seriously hurt.

EIGHT LIVES LOST

TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE OCCURS IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Early Morning Fire Is Attended With Loss of Life—Roomers in a Lodging House Are Awakened, Only to Be Suffocated to Death—Several of the Victims Die After Being Rescued — Anxious Hands Work to Resuscitate the Victims, but the Deadly Smoke Was the Victor.

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.—A loss of life equaling in number that following the never to be forgotten Tribune fire, which occurred Nov. 30, 1889, is the result of the blaze which gutted the four-story brick building occupied as a store and lodging house at 115 Washington avenue south early yesterday morning.

Eight men perished in the suffocating smoke. Had they hastened to a place of safety at once they would not have lost their lives. Failing to realize the seriousness of the situation they first attempted to dress themselves. Before they had time to get on their clothes the top floors were filled with a smoke in which no human being could live.

As soon as the bodies were recovered anxious hands set to work to resuscitate them. An hour and more willing firemen, under the direction of physicians present, worked the arms, pulled out the tongues and in every manner known to modern science attempted to restore respiration. The deadly smoke was the victor, however, and had done its work completely.

That the unfortunates might have saved themselves had they been more prompt in seeking exit is shown by the fact that several of those who are still alive occupied adjoining rooms.

The fire started under the stairway leading to a half-story in the store of the Standard Furniture company, which occupied the ground floor. Its origin is unknown but spontaneous combustion is thought to have been responsible. The fire made rapid headway, finding several mattresses and upholstered furniture excellent food. It soon burst into a bed room on the second floor and immediately the entire structure was filled with smoke.

Almost directly above the place where the fire started a large can of kerosene stood on the second floor. The heat soon melted the solder and the fluid ran out. At once the flames made amazing headway and in an instant the second floor at the rear was a mass of flames. This is what caused the dense smoke, and this also accounts for the terrible rapidity with which the flames spread.

The monetary loss is estimated at less than $4,000.

CLARK IN CONTROL.

He Will Be Elected and Also Dictate the Short Term Honors.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 7.—The caucus of fusionists held in Helena on the speakership indicates that W. A. Clark has absolute control of the legislature, and that he will not only be elected to the senate, but will be able to name the man for the short term. F. A. Heinze, the Republican who was an ally of Clark in the campaign, has far less strength than he had been credited with. The result, it is predicted, will be that the legislature will not pass the dangerous legislation which Heinze had promised to drive the Amalgamated Copper and Standard Oil companies from the state. An eight-hour workday will, however, probably be passed.

DIES IN DEFENSE OF HER HONOR.

Handsome Young Woman the Victim of a Most Brutal Crime.

Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 6.—One of the most brutal of crimes was committed last evening at Hackney, Morgan county, by which Miss Nellie Morris, aged nineteen, handsome and accomplished, lost her life. As Miss Morris was returning home from the postoffice by way of a path through the fields, she was accosted by Walter A. Weinstock, a young man aged eighteen, who lived near her home. He made indecent proposals to her and she immediately started to run. He grabbed her and threw her to the ground. She screamed and fought hard, finally getting to her feet. Weinstock drew a razor from his pocket and cut her across the neck, severing the neck muscles and laying bare the jugular vein. Miss Morris grabbed the razor with her hands and they were cut to pieces in her attempt to rescue herself from the man. Her fingers were cut off and her wrists were cut, as well as her entire right arm and left arm badly disfigured. Her dress was torn from her in shreds and when people arrived she was almost naked. She died from the effects of her wounds shortly after the assault. She was the daughter of Benjamin Morris, a business man of this city. Weinstock was grabbed by a crowd of men who bound him with ropes, hand and foot, and removed him to a building where more than 1,500 men watched over him. A telephone message was sent to McConnellsville for officers to come and take him. The people of Hackney are greatly excited and a mob is being organized to hang Weinstock. Weinstock recently returned from the reformatory, where he served a term for attempting to kill his father, a rich farmer of Morgan county.

THE BOOZ INQUIRY.

Philadelphia, Jan. 6.—The Booz congressional committee which was recently appointed by Speaker Henderson for the purpose of making inquiry into the cause of death of Oscar Booz at West Point and to investigate hazing in a general way at the academy, began taking testimony yesterday. Wagner, Pennsylvania; B. T. Clayton, New York and W. I. Smith of Iowa, went to Bristol, Pa., the home of the Booz family, and heard the testimony of four members of that family. In the afternoon four physicians who attended Oscar Booz were heard and in the evening in Philadelphia two more physicians and two other witnesses were given an opportunity to tell what they knew of the case. Most of the evidence adduced has already been brought out by the military board of inquiry.

MEDICAL EXAMINER

Of the U. S. Treasury Recommends Peruna.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, Medical Examiner of U. S. Treasury Department, graduate of Columbia College, and who served three years at West Point, has the following to say of Peruna:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from your wonderful remedy. One short month has brought forth a vast change and I now consider myself a well man after months of suffering. Fellow sufferers, Peruna will cure you."

Catarrh is a systemic disease curable only by systematic treatment. A remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Peruna does. Peruna immediately invigorates the nerve-centers which give vitality to the mucous membranes. Then catarrh disappears. Then catarrh is permanently cured. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is not a guess nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

A free book written by Dr. Hartman, on the subject of catarrh in its different phases and stages, will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

NOMINAL FEES TO FAVORITES.

A Parisian Barber Who Charges According to Nationalities — Hates German and English.

Leo Lespes is one of the most prominent of Parisian barbers, and, being the fashion, has quite a large clientele. A Dutchman recently visited his establishment, and, approaching the counter where Leo was enthroned, he asked how much there was to pay. The barber looked at him with scrutinizing eyes, then called his first "garcon," a Spaniard, like himself, and asked a few questions. "Five francs, mein herr," at last said Leo Lespes.

"Five francs! What a high price, Mr. Lespes. I was only shaved, you know, that's all."

"Tiens, tiens!" murmured the coiffeur. "By your accent I should not quite take you for a German. What did you say, Mauril—that monsieur was a German? Nonsense! It is two francs, sir. Beg your pardon."

The gentleman who, like a true Dutchman, is not talkative, paid his money and left the shop. But in the evening he asked the friend who had sent him to Lespes what this singular conduct could signify.

"Oh!" answered the Parisian, "of course, I ought to have told you. Leo Lespes has various prices, according to the nationality of his clients and his own fancy. For instance, he charges 5 francs to a German or an Englishman, for he hates them; 3 francs to Russians and 2 francs to a Parisian and people in general whom he cannot guess where they come from. He shaves an Italian for 1 franc, and a Spaniard, though he be a grandee of the first class, for 50 centimes, and lately he said to me: "Monsieur, if I have ever the honor of seeing a Boer in my establishment, I should not only shave him for nothing, but also present him with a cravat and a toothbrush."

THWARTED PRINCE OF WALES.

"Bob Sutton," Snubbed at Court, but Secures Horse Coveted by Albert Edward.

Some years ago the British court was scandalized by the announcement that Robert Standish Sievere, well known throughout Australia as "Bob Sutton, the bookmaker," had managed to get presented at court. When Mr. Siever's identity with Bob Sutton was discovered, the presentation was cancelled. Though the mills of the gods grind slowly, they grind sure, and "Bob" has had his revenge on the Court of St. James or he thinks he has. At the sale of the late Duke of Westminster's stud the Australian "bookie" was bidding for a filly by the Prince of Wales' Derby winner, Persimmon, from Ornament. When the bidding had reached 6,000 guineas Sutton was confidentially told that the prince wished to secure the filly.

"So do I," was Mr. Sutton's answer, with some quaint Australian expressions added.

The bidding was continued, and the filly was eventually knocked down to the bookmaker at the unprecedented price of 10,000 guineas.—Chicago Chronicle.

What Prompted Him.

A capital story of Rolf Boldrewood, the distinguished Australian novelist, is told. After T. A. Browne had suddenly leaped into fame as Rolf Boldrewood, author of "Robbery Under Arms," he continued for some years as stipendiary magistrate of Albany. One morning there was brought before him a rough bushboy of 14, charged with having held up several other boys on a country road. It was proved that he had presented a pistol at them and compelled them to empty all their pockets for his benefit.

"Dear me," said the surprised magistrate to the juvenile culprit, "what could have prompted you to do such a thing?"

"Reading 'Robbery Under Arms,'" replied the unabashed boy bushranger. —Chicago News.

What They Said.

"Did the girls say anything when they heard of my engagement?" she asked with a little curiosity.

"Very little," was the reply of her dearest friend.

"But they said something?"

"Oh, yes; they said something."

"Well, what was it?"

"Well, most of them merely exclaimed, 'At last!'"

There was a pause, and then she asked:

"Well, what did some of the others say?"

"One of them said: 'Who'd have thought it?' Another, 'Will wonders never cease?' And a third"—

"Oh, never mind the rest," interrupted the fiancee; "I never did have much curiosity."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Not Bull Run.

On an excursion given by Secretary Langley to the members of the National Academy of Science down the Potomac, Bernard Green, of the library of congress, told the best story of the day. Mr. Green happened to be crossing the ocean some years ago on the Fourth of July, which national holiday was celebrated with great enthusiasm by the Americans on board.

"I say," asked one of the Englishmen, "what is this the anniversary of, anyhow? Isn't it to celebrate the battle of Bull Run or something of that kind?"

"No," promptly spoke up an American. "Not Bull Run—John Bull Run." —New York Tribune.

Why, Indeed?

Waitress — Roastbeefmuttonroastporkmashedorbrownpotatoesbeetspuddingorpie?

Customer—H'm. Are not these things still in separate dishes?

"Yessir."

"Then why do you announce them as if they had already been made into hash?"—Indianapolis Press.

Boston's "Little Italy."

The Boston Transcript says that Boston's "Little Italy" is established in the very quarter where Paul Revere lived and whence he bore the message of the belfry. The Old North square ripples with the color and music of foreign faces and tongues. The Old North church itself cannot have far to go to neighbor with Franciscan chapels and Roman Catholic cathedrals, the whole medley of a foreign world usurping that place where once Puritanism reigned supreme.

They say that the Boston Italians are very thrifty, that from being good rent payers they are becoming notable property buyers. They are a music loving and art loving people. "Go to the Museum of Fine Arts on the free days and see these same Italians, in their rags and hobnail shoes, men, women and children, standing before the finest things in the gallery and appreciating them."

And that sight reminds a writer in The Transcript of a shabby cabman in Florence who always carried his Gerusalemma Liberata in his coat pocket and whose passion was for the preservation of the Italian tongue in its purity, "as only the Siennese now preserve it, signorina."

A Water of Special Value.

While Sir William Harcourt was traveling in the highlands with Lord John Russell and other friends they were one day crossing a Scotch loch, and in course of some conversation with a boatman, from whom they were trying to elicit information as to his views on the beauty of the surrounding landscape, the man assured them that the water of the loch had a special value. When asked to explain what it was, he remarked that it had the reputation of making the finest toddy in Scotland.—Chambers' Journal.

The Umbrella.

Jack—I made two calls this afternoon, and I must have left my umbrella at the last place I called.

Tom—How do you know but that you left it at the first place?

Jack—Because there's where I got it. —Chicago News.

DRINK COLD WATER.

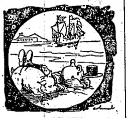
QUIT BOOZING AND KEEP SOBER AND YOU WILL BECOME FAMOUS.

Q. Hope Jones, the Famous Temperance Lecturer, Cites a Few Historic Examples to Prove the Truth of This Proposition.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

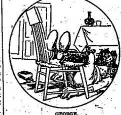
My Dear Fellow Citizens—It is my custom before proceeding to the business of the evening to take up a collection among the audience for the benefit of some charity. On this occasion the subject is the individual who stands before you. I have managed to get along for the last three days on 87 cents, but I can go no further. While there is no doubt that I am worthy of all you can do for me, yet no one need feel under obligations to give. I will now pass around the hat, and as I move among you I am glad to observe that the audience assembled here tonight is one of the most cultivated I have seen for months. I will not be base enough to think that free admission had anything to do with it. You came to hear one of the great questions of the day discussed by one of the great orators of the century, and had the price of tickets been 10 cents each I believe that one and all would have cheerfully coughed up. I do not use that expression in a slang sense, but as a Latin phrase. I find that the collection amounts to 70 cents, and, thanking you from the bottom of my heart and trusting that you may go out of here better men and women, I will now begin:

My friends, I have in my pocket the figures showing just how many distilleries and breweries there are in the United States and just how much whisky and beer are made every 24 hours during the year. But why give them? Why tell you that 1,000,000 of our population go to bed drunk every night in the year and that the money spent for drink every day would provide all the widows with sealskin sacks and French heeled shoes? We all know those things. Let us begin with Christopher Columbus, who had rather more to do with America than any man who has come after him. I give you his picture on the canvas. You look puzzled and surprised. You can't make it out. You behold Christopher lying drunk on the highway, with a jug on one side and a hog on the other. It is a fanciful picture. I want you to look at it closely and keep it in your minds, and every day for years to come I want you to ask yourself what would have happened if Columbus had been that sort of man. When Ferdinand and Isabella had fitted him out for his voyage, suppose he had gone and got a three days' jag on and had rolled around in the mud and had had three or four scraps with other old bums. Can you for an instant believe that he would have been left in command of the expedition or that this country would have been discovered for the next 50 years? But there was no boozing. He may have taken a farewell drink of root beer or lemonade, as was eminently proper, but it ended right there, and he became world famous as a result. A whole hemisphere and millions of people owe him a debt of gratitude and will remember his name forever because of his abstinence. The lesson taught by the picture is plain to all. Get drunk, and you will be sent to the island for 30 days; remain sober, and you will become famous.



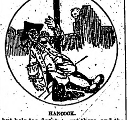
CHRISTOPHER.

My friends, let me give you the picture of George Washington as he was about to cross the Delaware and gain a great victory over the British. You observe that George is lying drunk with his feet on a chair while the patriot army waits for him to take the lead. You murmur and are aghast. You never heard that the Father of His Country got a jag on. No more did he. I give you this picture as an object lesson, and I ask you where this country would have been today had George gone off on a hoopla at a critical moment? In those old colonial days there was corn juice around by the barrel, and it was easier to get drunk than to roll out of bed, but Washington was a man to withstand temptation. On 12 different occasions, as I figure it, had he gone off on a tear, instead of attending to business, this country would not now be the United States. I never hail him as the great and noble without also blessing him for not filling up with corn juice. The analogy is plain to the dullest mind. Get drunk and fall over yourself and roll around in the catnip, and you'll die unknown and unwept. Let whisky and beer alone, except when ordered for cramps, and a nation will sorrow at your death and raise monuments to you for a thousand years after.



GEORGE.

The name of John Hancock must always be associated with the Declaration of Independence. His name was the first to go down. His was the first neck to be put into the halter. I give you his picture. He is limpsy drunk and hanging to a lamppost in the city of Boston. The convention waits for him to sign his name to a document which will change the map of the world and bring forth a new nation, but he's too drunk to get there, and the independence of the colonies is lost forever. This picture is also a creation of fancy, but let the moral lesson sink deep into your hearts. Now and then, when he had been out chopping wood in the rain, John Hancock may have taken a nip to keep the chills off, but never on any other occasion. He didn't need whisky to back up his patriotism. He had a cold water hatred of tyranny, and when the time came to upset King George's apple cart he picked up a goose quill and wrote his name in letters which stand out like red paint on a white door. Half a pint of colonial corn juice down behind his vest would have unfitted the great patriot and left America a dependency.



HANCOCK.

My friends, I am not here to rail at distillers, howl at brewers or shout at saloon keepers. I am not begging you with tears in my eyes to shun the flowing bowl and not pound your wives or wallop your children. I am not going to spoil your sleep tonight by holding up the horrors and miseries of intemperance. I simply say to you that for a steady all around drink cold water tops everything else, and when judiciously mingled with buttermilk and root beer it produces patriots, poets, philosophers and statesmen. Try it once, and you will take no other. M. QUAD.

It ought to be more generally known that sulphur thrown into the fire or stove, furnace or fire-place instantly extinguish the fire in a chimney or flue, says an exchange. We are pleased to note that out old friend Ed. H. Pierce is again in the harness. He has started in the new century right being publisher of the Walsh County (N. D.) Record, a paper he was instrumental in launching some eleven years ago. If Pat Crowe left ear-marks as plainly as Ed. in his clever writings, he would have been captured after the first issue—so to speak.

A boy can sit still on a sleigh six inches square, tied to a sled moving eight miles an hour; couldn't sit on a sofa five minutes for a dollar. A man can sit on an inch edge of a board and talk politics for three hours; put him in a church pew for forty minutes he will get nervous, turn and twist and twist and go to sleep. A man will fill his cheek with filthy tobacco juice until it runs down his chin, feels good but a hair in the butter kills him.—Ex.

A newspaper man looked the matter up and says;—It may interest women to know that in thirty-seven states a married mother has no right to her own children. It sixteen states a wife has no right to her earnings outside the home. In eight states a wife has no right to her property after marriage. In seven states there is no law compelling a man to support his wife and family. In all the states (except the four where women are voters) there is discrimination against women in the matter of employment and consideration. Still, with all these drawbacks the owner of the hand that rocks the cradle, continues to boss the ranch.

Housekeeping for a Millionaire.

In the mansion of a modern millionaire the most interesting feature is the invisibility of the housekeeping machinery. Everything runs with precision and one never sees "the wheels go round." By nine o'clock in the morning every department is immaculately clean and in perfect order, except the bedchambers, where those who dwell in the lap of luxury may still be slumbering, or perchance they may be breakfasting in lonely grandeur. Millionairdom lies abed late—the feminine part especially, to whom "beauty sleep" is an imperative necessity. In a great house, whatever the size of the family proper, two or ten, it matters not, a certain number of servants is always requisite to insure the proper conduct of the affairs of the household. If the people live elegantly and entertain frequently the department of service must be composed of skilled hands who are inmates of the house. The chef and buttler only may sleep out.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

Eating at Bed Time.

Eating at bed time was formerly considered very injurious; but at the present time it is favored by some of our best physicians, especially for invalids who are troubled with sleeplessness. Food of a simple kind will induce sleep. The sinking sensation felt by those who cannot sleep is often simply a call for food, while wakefulness is often a symptom of hunger. Gratify this desire, and you will soon fall asleep. The feeble will be stronger at dawn if they partake of light food before going to bed. Some twelve or fourteen hours lie between supper and breakfast, and by that time the fuel of the body has become expended. When prolonged wakefulness attacks us and our thought go hither and yon, and we have no more control over them than over the wind, the wisest thing to do is to eat a cracker or two, or a cold biscuit, or some bread and milk: give the stomach something to do, and this will draw the surplus blood from the brain, and you will fall asleep.

The Osakis Review says that, in the recently revised addition of his "History of Scandinavians in the United States," O. N. Nelson, of Minneapolis, gives some interesting facts concerning the development of the Scandinavian population in this country. For instance, it will be rather startling to most persons who know that there are in this country one-half as many Norwegians as there are in Norway. Norwegians lead all the rest of the inhabitants of the Scandinavian peninsula in this tendency to come to America, although the rest are crowding close upon the Norwegians themselves in the matter of numbers. For instance there are one-third as many Swedes in the United States as there are in Sweden, and one-fifth as many Danes as there are in Denmark. Two-fifths, of the total population of Minnesota are Scandinavians, and in some localities of the northwest Scandinavians are the dominant race.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent

Not even a resolution of the Senate can get at that interesting document generally spoken of as the Lawshe report, being a detailed statement of the crookedness found in the handling of Cuban moneys by an expert accountant. Instead of answering the Senate resolution calling for this report, Secretary Root went to Mr. McKinley for assistance in burying the report so deep that the Senate cannot dig it up for its contents to create a sensation. In order to render this assistance Mr. McKinley will take advantage of his authority to decline to make public any document which in his discretion would be best kept secret. There is no way that the Senate could force the President to make public this document, even were a majority disposed to try. But the fact that so much trouble has been taken to suppress this report and that Mr. A. L. Lawshe, the man who made it, has been given a big place in the Philippines, apparently to get him out of the way, shows that the revelations made by the report must be many times worse than the publication of the Nealy stealing in Cuba.

One of the means used by the Republicans to carry the state of South Dakota, has been made public property by the arrival in this city of John Eastman, a full blooded Indian, who acted as Mr. Hanna's agent in inducing the Dakota Indians, to become American citizens and vote solidly for McKinley. The consideration was a promise of the renewal of the annual subsidies, suspended in 1863, to the tribes and the approval by Congress certain claims held by them. Eastman having fulfilled his part of the contract, is now here insisting that Mr. Hanna deliver his goods. The Indians claims are now before the Senate committee on Indian affairs. They amount to the sum of $1,900,000, and despite the efforts of Mr. Hanna to force the committee to make a favorable report, a majority refuse to be bullied and are against the scheme. Mr. Pettigrew, as a member of the Committee, has exposed the true inwardness of the scheme, and has mustered eight votes against the bill to six favoring it.

SMALL POX!

A Canadian Paper Publishes Several Alleged Remedies for Its Cure.

Certain Cure:—"Small-pox being so fatal and so much feared, an unfailing remedy like the following, so simple and so safe, once discovered, ought to be brought to the knowledge of the masses without hesitation or delay. I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man if the worst case of small-pox cannot be cured in three days simply by cream of tartar. This is the sure and never failing remedy. Cream of tartar, 1 oz., dissolved in boiling water, 1 pt.; to be drank when cold, at short intervals. It can be taken at any time and is a preventative as well as a currative. It is known to have cured thousands of cases without fail; I have myself restored hundreds by this means. It never leaves a mark, never causes blindness and always prevents tedious lingering."

A Cure for, or Relief In.—"A lady, the mother of six children, had often sought relief for a pain in the back by taking saltpeter and brandy. She was exposed to the small-pox and contracted the disease. The premonitory symptoms were violent fever, severe pain in the head and excruciating pain in the region of the kidneys. A physician was called during the night, but in doubt as to the nature of the disease, although suspecting it to be a case of small pox, he made no prescription, promising to return early next morning. The fever and pain increasing she begged her husband to prepare for her the old prescription of saltpeter and brandy. The brandy was not to be had but he crushed a piece of saltpeter as large as a common white bean. This she took in a tea-spoon full of cold water. Feeling better, the dose was once or twice repeated. Pain soon subsided and she slept well during the remainder of the night and awakened feeling perfectly well. She had sixty well defined postules on her face, but they were but slightly inflamed and not at all painful. The developments of small-pox on her entire person were in number and appearance in keeping with those on her face. In due time all her children and her husband were affected, as she had been—by fever and pain in the back. They received the same treatment with the same favorable results. Several families caught the disease, used the same remedy and in every case the result was favorable."

Lacking In Romance.

"Swigsby hasn't a particle of romance about him."

"I never thought he had. Any new proof of it?"

"Yes. He was calling on Daisy Swinnerton. You know Daisy. Little thing, but full of poetry. Swigsby said he wondered where they met the first time, and Daisy in her poetical way said she guessed it was in the gloaming. Swigsby looked puzzled, and then what do you suppose he said?"

"Give it up."

"Said he guessed she was mistaken, because he couldn't recall any apartment house by that name."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Misuse of U. S. Mails.

During the recent Pure Food and Drink Investigation in the Senate, Senator Wm. E. Mason made a speech on American Champagnes. He was very complimentary to certain brands, and they have used the speech as an advertisement. Copies of it have been sent all over the country, postage free, because they were stamped with the name of the Senator in the corner. This is an unprecedented use of the Senator's name to secure free postage for advertising or private matter, and, if not stopped, it would soon flood the mails with unpaid packages.

"Golden Grain Belt" beer needs no senator's speeches, no illegitimate advertising to prove its purity as a food product. A trial is all that is necessary. It will help you because it has the strength of pure barley malt and hops. Try a case and be benefited. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Insomnia Wrecks the Nerves.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA Makes Health.

INSOMNIA is a forerunner of nervous prostration; what organism is strong enough to stand up under the strain of sleepless nights? It is plain that nothing in the world can possibly take the place of restful sleep, yet many try to eke out an existence without this sustaining power. Their nerves are in such a state of tension that sleep is an impossibility, or at best is a series of hideous dreams. It is not strange that physical and mental weakness, amounting soon to complete prostration, follows inability to sleep. There is no let-up to the strain. Vital forces are drawn upon, confirmed invalidism results.

The recuperative power of natural sleep is wonderful. Complete physical and mental exhaustion gives place, after a few hours of quiet slumber, to a full renewal of energy. The fatigue of body and mind disappears entirely while all the muscles are strong and the nerves absolutely calm.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

Sleep is the indication given by Nature as a guide to human plans to restore health. It shows that there are inherent in the wonderful human organism powers of recuperation which must have opportunity to assert themselves. Based on this clear demonstration, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was constructed by Dr. Greene to help Nature combat the ills that attack men and women. What no amount of powerful drugs could possibly accomplish, can be successfully and promptly effected by healthy blood and nerves, the kind of blood which flows in strengthening flood to every portion of the body, the condition of nerves which permits awakened Nature to seize its opportunity to restore to perfect health.

Mrs. FLORENCE TAYLOR, of 4 Courtland Place, Bridgeport, Conn., writes:

"For four years I was troubled with nervous debility and hysteria in a most aggravated form. It caused sleeplessness and mental depression, and for months I was confined to my bed. My constitution wasted and I totally lost my appetite. I had many doctors, but they failed to give me any relief. I was advised to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I was in a terrible condition when I began its use, and almost immediately there was a wonderful change came over me. I regained my appetite, the dizziness in my head departed; it renewed my interest in life and made me feel, in fact, like another person. After taking six bottles I thankfully proclaimed myself strong and well. Those six bottles did for me what hundreds of dollars and numerous physicians failed to do."

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the Remedy that Cures.

Full explanation of these matters given by Dr. Greene on request, without charge. Dr. Greene's address is 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Consultation with him either by call or letter is absolutely free.

Queen Victoria's Neatness.

Although Queen Victoria, like many elderly ladies, prefers the dresses she has worn for some little time to new ones, and is most conservative as to their style, no one is more daintily particular than she that no mark or stain soil them. For this reason she will never allow her skirts to drag in the dust, and much objects to the practice in others. When about to engage in the quantity of writing she still gets through, it is her custom to wear a pair of outer sleeves over those of her dress, in case a spot of ink should spurt on them. The queen is also exceedingly particular about the material and fit of her shoes, wearing in the house those made of the thickest black silk. Victoria R. I. has always been celebrated for her pretty arms and hands, which, to this day, are soft, plump and unwrinkled. She takes no little pride in them, always using soft water and the purest soap, and having a carefully-prepared cream rubbed on them at night.

Piso's Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'BRIEN, 322 Third Ave., N., Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1900.

Pleasant Way to Spend Them in Wood-Carving

There are some who have long urged the extension of home or domestic industries to both town and village workers. By home industries is meant those handicrafts so many of which could be carried on in the workers' own homes—rich or poor—and which would do much to interest and to increase the income of those engaged in them. When we look at the industries carried on in the workers' homes abroad, especially in the rural districts, it does seem rather surprising that we should lag behind. In Switzerland watchmaking, except at Geneva, is mostly carried on as a domestic industry. In the Jura, parts of the watch are fabricated in nearly every house by some member or members of the family. Silk-weaving in Zurich, Aargau and other cantons is carried on by means of looms lent to the workers. In Germany the famous Black Forest clocks are almost entirely a domestic industry, while toys in any quantity come from the Thuringian workmen. In Austria home industries are common, spinning, weaving, wood-turning, wood-carving, embroidery work, basket-making, straw-plaiting, etc., being very extensively carried on in this way. There is every reason why thousands in our great towns, in our small towns and in our villages might apply themselves to some form or other of handicraft work as the winter season comes and when the evenings are so long. Work such as that contemplated—wood-carving, fret work, repousse work, bent-iron work, wood turning, embossed-leather work, modeling in leather, etc.—are not difficult to learn; the tools required are not expensive, and with a little industry and some organization, both pleasure and profit would accrue to those engaging in them. In the country districts the question of organization is more serious than in large towns, though it is a detail not impossible to overcome. It is a very remarkable thing that we should import so many hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of knickknacks and of little articles of utility principally because our own people do not themselves know the way to produce them. Take the case of wood-carving alone as an illustration of what is meant by the inexpensive character of beginning it. Here the learner requires at first three chief kinds of tools—namely, some gouges, two or three flat chisels and a veining tool or two. With these he may practice simple designs. A little later he may go in for some carving punches and a few other tools, all of which, from the very start, would cost him but very little. The art, too, is by no means difficult to learn by any one who takes an interest in it. What he has chiefly to remember is not to copy too slavishly the designs of others, but to show his originality in creating designs and work of his own. What applies to wood-carving applies in the main to all these domestic industries.

A PRINCESS SOLD.

A Mummified Daughter of Rameses II. Auctioned Off.

Unlike good wine, princesses of ancient Egyptian lineage do not appear to increase in value with time; at least, that was the experience of one of the daughters of Rameses II., when she was offered at auction by Mr. J. C. Stevens at his well-known rooms, King street, Covent Garden. Perhaps this was because she was unable to put the dots to the i's and the crosses to the t's of the auctioneer's eulogy of her various interesting points, a circumstance not to be wondered at, considering she has been dead and mummified since circa, 1333 B. C. But in spite of her antiquity, the eager crowd of bargain hunters at Mr. Stevens' wonderful sale probably knew more about her, in some respects, than she had ever known herself; for the X-rays of modern science had been brought to bear upon her cerements, with the result that photographs of the body, beneath had been obtained showing the position of the bones. In spite, however, of this, there seemed to be no particular demand for her remains, and if her spook happened to be pervading the fragrant neighborhood of Covent Garden at the time it must have had its feelings hurt at seeing the "lot" go for ten guineas. Rameses II. is reputed to have had a good many children, but that would scarcely account for the fact that a daughter of him, who stole men's hearts nearly thirty-three centuries ago, should have fetched only ten guineas. And she was remarkably well preserved, too, and inclosed in a neat casket.—London News.

Practical Curiosity.

Near the town of Baku, in the Russian Caucasus, are several tracks of land whereon no cattle would feed, although they were covered with unusually rich herbage. The superstitious peasantry declared that an evil spirit had bewitched the meadows in question. By-and-by there happened along a practical, matter-of-fact Englishman, who started to investigate the phenomenon. He quickly discovered that, although the grass was undoubtedly rich and succulent, it tasted strongly of paraffin, a substance the flavor of which is intensely repugnant to nearly all animals, but especially so to cattle. Such was the origin of the discovery of the Baku petroleum deposits—deposits which have already yielded millions of pounds' worth of oil, and which show no signs of becoming exhausted.

Black Friday.

The original Black Friday of history was December 6, 1745, the day on which the news arrived in London that the Pretender has reached Derby. On Friday, Sept. 24, 1869, there was a financial panic in New York, and gold was forced up to 162½. This is the day known as Black Friday among the stock brokers. On Friday, Sept. 19, 1873 (the day following Jay Cooke's suspension), there were many failures in New York, and some persons referred to this as Black Friday.—New York Weekly.

This would be a better world if church inspired the widespread awe which a society function inspires.

Now being built, is confidently expected to be the fastest sailing vessel ever built. Its construction is being kept a secret, but it is whispered that it will easily hold the cup. America is rapidly coming to the front. A good example of this is in that famous household remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has defended health for half a century past. It holds the record for the cure of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, nervousness, biliousness and la grippe.

Sage's Trust in Providence.

Russel Sage was asked the other day what he would do if he had to start in life with only 10 cents in his pocket. The man who has more money than any other financier in America, replied:

"So long as I have Providence with me and my health and strength, I should feel like a man already rich. If I had to take my choice of beginning again either with $1,000,000 or with Providence, I should choose the latter. The $1,000,000 would not last much longer than a 10-cent piece, but with Providence to look out for me and suggest ways and means, I should soon be able to look a roll of money squarely in the face."—New York World.

The Honorable Moses B. Crane of Tacoma, Wash., Tells How Old Soldiers May Help Themselves.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 5, 1901.—(Special.)—"I used to have Heart Disease; but, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills, I now have Heart's Ease.

"Five years ago I was a continual sufferer of Heart Disease. Exposure during the war, and a tendency to grow over-fleshy, had greatly aggravated this dread disease. I often had to sit up half the night. I had it so bad when I would lie down. Life looked pretty blue to me, as I thought there was no relief, until one day I read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought a box that same day, and it was the best day's work I ever did. Before I had used all the first box I could eat and sleep better than I had done for many years, and after three months' faithful treatment my health was completely restored. I am an old man now, but my step is as elastic and my brain as clear as when I was thirty years of age."

These are the words of the Hon. Moses B. Crane, secretary of Odin Lodge, No. 123, I. O. O. F., of this city. The Hon. Mr. Crane is also Senior Vice Commander of G. A. R. Post No. 5, Tacoma.

Those who know Mr. Crane have the fullest confidence in his honesty and truthfulness, and know that he would not give this unsolicited testimonial unless he had actually experienced the relief which he indicates in his letter. Dodd's Kidney Pills are having a wonderful sale among Mr. Crane's friends—and their name is legion—in this part of the country. There does not seem to be a single case of Heart Disease, Kidney or Bladder Weakness, or Rheumatism, that Dodd's Kidney Pills do not permanently cure.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

A HIGH MARK.

The New York Almanac for 1901, issued by Chas. H. Fletcher of New York City, has set a high mark for similar publications during the new century, and shows remarkable enterprise on the part of the publisher when we consider that it is intended solely for free distribution. The numerous publications of this character are usually gotten up with the single idea of cheapness, while the thought of expense has certainly been set aside in the case of the New York Almanac.

The artistic colorings of the cover, the accuracy of its calendars and its fund of information all go to make it well worthy of perusal and preservation. It has innumerable hints for mothers as to the care of children. A unique page is the "Baby's Record" page, which is in blank, to be filled in with baby's name, date of birth, cut first tooth, etc.

"I am so Glad you are well, Dear Sister."

This picture tells its own story of sisterly affection. The older girl, just budding into womanhood, has suffered greatly with those irregularities and menstrual difficulties which sap the life of so many young women.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system.

'Could anything prove more clearly the efficiency of Mrs. Pinkham's Medicine than the following strong statement of Grace Stansbury?

GRACE B. STANSBURY

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was a sufferer from female weakness for about a year and a half. I have tried doctors and patent medicines, but nothing helped me. I underwent the horrors of local treatment, but received no benefit. My ailment was pronounced ulceration of the womb. I suffered from intense pains in the womb and ovaries, and the backache was dreadful. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form. Finally, I grew so weak I had to keep my bed. The pains were so hard as to almost cause spasms. When I could endure the pains no longer, I was given morphine. My memory grew short and I gave up all hope of getting well. Thus I dragged along. To please my sister I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her answer came, but meantime I was taken worse and was under the doctor's care for a while.

"After reading Mrs. Pinkham's letter, I concluded to try her medicine. After taking two bottles I felt much better; but after using six bottles I was cured. All of my friends think my cure almost miraculous. I thank you very much for your timely advice and wish you prosperity in your noble work, for surely it is a blessing to broken-down women. I have full and complete faith in the Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound."—GRACE B. STANSBURY, Herington, Kansas.

AFFAIRS OF STATE

INCOMING AND OUTGOING GOVERNORS ADDRESS SOLONS.

Gov. Lind Reviews the Business of the State During His Term of Office and Makes Recommendations for the Consideration of the Legislature—Gov. Van Sant in His Inaugural Indicates Several Lines Along Which He Will Favor a Change in Affairs of State.

The following is a brief synopsis embracing the most important points covered by Gov. Lind in his message to the legislature:

Gov. Lind's biennial message treated of every department of state, and exhaustively supported with argument a variety of legislative recommendations, one of the most important being the substitution of an alternative direct tax upon all railroad property in lieu of the gross earnings tax system.

The assessments, he stated, should be made by the state board of equalization at the average rate of taxation through the state, with the alternative that railroads may pay a gross earnings tax, not higher than 5 per cent, the rate to be fixed by the legislature.

The action of the state in selecting the remaining portion of the Duluth & Iron Range land grant, amounting to 400,000 acres, was commented upon with the demand that the action be sustained as fair and just by the legislature. A reasonable appropriation to secure the final adjustment of the state's claims to lands within Indian reservations in Northern Minnesota was asked.

The retiring governor quoted extensively from his St. Paul Labor day address in suggesting legislation sanctioning the appointment of tribunals of arbitration composed of five members, two to represent employers' interests, two to represent labor and the fifth to be chosen by the district court of the county in which difficulties may arise. Without predicting that such provision would eliminate labor troubles, he expressed the opinion that the moral weight of a tribunal decision would do much to promote peace and order.

Liberality, carefully administered, was recommended with regard to the completion of the new capitol. This he thought necessary in order to preserve entire harmony throughout the new structure, since the funds in sight will be inadequate to complete the building in good taste. The faithful service and intelligent work of the present capitol commission were highly praised. The were carefully reviewed, with the suggestion that in his judgment a carefully devised system of state income taxation should be substituted for the present methods of personal property taxation and that the laws governing taxation of domestic corporations be changed to comply with the construction of the state supreme court. An additional recommendation was that the foreign corporations tax law be changed, making it the duty of the attorney general to decide the amount of tax to be paid by a company entering the state, paired with a recommendation that provision be made for the taxation of foreign corporations having no tangible property in the state. The railroad taxation recommendations of his inaugural address were renewed.

The retiring governor recommended the repeal of the sugar bounty law upon the ground that it is vicious in principle. He advised liberal appropriations for state educational work and the introduction of technical training in the state university. The management of the state reformatory and prison were praised and comment made upon the report of the commission recently sent East to investigate methods of penal training and improvement of criminals.

Satisfaction was expressed with the work of the railroad and warehouse commission and the recent iron ore rate cases, and the transfer of the St. Paul & Duluth railway to the Northern Pacific system was noted. The management of the grain inspection department, Gov. Lind stated, has been excellent.

The reduction of the tax levy and excellent

Condition of State Finances

was praised, and the retiring Republican state treasurer, August T. Koerner, given public recognition for untiring faithfulness and sound business judgment.

Gov. Lind stated that in three state elections certificates of election have been issued to minority candidates, and suggested the advisability of measures providing for review of the returns for state offices. In closing his message, Gov. Lind expressed appreciation of the support that he has received during his term from the various state departmental heads.

VAN SANT'S INAUGURAL.

Some Suggestions for the Consideration of the Legislature.

In his inaugural address, which was a careful and lengthy discussion of state affairs, Gov. Van Sant acknowledged with gratitude the honor conferred upon him in his election to the highest office of the state and pledged the exercise of his best judgment coupled with an honest purpose to faithfully serve the people of Minnesota, in the transaction of the affairs of his official term. He asked the hearty co-operation of the legislature, that entire harmony may promote the best interests of the state.

The new governor commented upon the excellent condition of state finances, speaking of the reduction of the state debt, the satisfactory condition of the permanent funds, and the ample revenues provided by the present rate of taxation.

The increase in population of the state insane hospitals was noted and the suggestion made that the action of the last legislature in providing new hospitals be followed and the new hospitals at Anoka and Hastings be completed. The recommendation of the state board of corrections and charities, that each county be required to pay a definite rate for the maintenance of patients sent to state hospitals coincided with his views, and he considers the proposed law providing the change a wise measure.

Gov. Van Sant urged the appointment of a commission to revise the tax laws, and called attention to the defects of the present system. He asserted that the wealthy evade their just taxes and that the burden of providing revenues is unequally borne. Uniformity in the laws was strongly recommended and the opinion given that such a result is only obtainable through a revision of tax laws.

He cited the excellent results of tax commission work in the State of New York, and the achievement of the Chicago tax commission in raising the assessments of the city two hundred millions of dollars.

Gov. Van Sant stated that he recognized the difficulty of providing just laws and an equitable distribution of the burden of taxation, but urged that immediate action be taken toward securing uniformity. The recommendations of State Auditor Dunn were suggested to the members of the joint session. The proposed establishment of a was strongly recommended. With the expenditure of a million dollars for current expenses this year, $1,100,000 for the current expenses of next year, and $750,000 for new buildings and repairs he stated his conviction that the best interests of the people could be served in establishing a non-partisan board, composed of experienced business men. These, he thought, should take charge of the expenditures of the state and supplant the various institution boards, in whose hands the administration of these affairs now falls. He stated the belief that a board of control would result in a large annual saving to the state.

The subject of gross earnings taxation upon railroads suggested to him the plank of the Republican state platform, favoring the maintenance of the tax at a rate sufficient to provide revenues equal to and uniform with those obtained from other property of the same value. "It is your duty," said he, "to investigate and determine whether the present rate of gross earnings tax makes the tax annually collected from railroad property equal and uniform with the taxes imposed on other property. If you discover that the present rate does not have this result, you should certainly increase it."

Gov. Van Sant recommended legislation sufficient to permit the early completion of the state capitol in a manner making its exterior harmonize and correspond with its beautiful exterior. He referred to the excellent work of the commission in charge of its construction, and stated his hope that when the building is completed it will contain a suitable place for memorials of the achievements of Minnesota's soldiers and sailors and of her great men. He spoke of the pressing need of better accommodations for the state offices, and of the fact that if properly aided the construction of the new building can be finished before another session of the legislature.

The bureau of labor, he said, has been the father to many wise laws. He spoke of the high rank occupied by the Minnesota department and suggested the enactment of an additional law making eight hours a legal day's work on all public construction.

Uniform grades and service of the most efficient character he named as the results he expected from the grain inspection department under the present administration. He expressed his desire to give Minnesota grain the high grade it always had under the last Republican administration. He recommended careful attention on the part of the railroad and warehouse commission to all abuses of transportation charges, their speedy regulation and the prevention of unfair and unreasonable discrimination.

Good Roads.

He suggested the early completion of plans for a system of good roads, and advised the legislature to give the question careful consideration. The extension of the benefits derived from state drainage ditches in the Red river valley was also suggested.

Steps toward preserving the Minnesota forests were urged, and the governor predicted that without wise legislation at an early date, the state would eventually be compelled to expend immense sums in reforesting waste areas. The efficient services of the state fire wardens and the state forestry board were mentioned.

Gov. Van Sant recommended, in speaking of the soldiers' home, that the legislature memorialize congress, asking the payment of $100 yearly for the maintenance of each soldier of the Civil War cared for by the state. He also advocated the purchase of cemetery lots in which to bury the soldier dead.

In view of the fact that Minnesota was a part of the Louisiana Purchase, Gov. Van Sant recommended that the legislature take action providing for the representation of the state at the St. Louis convention in 1903, to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the purchase. He advocated similar action with regard to the coming Pan-American exposition at Buffalo.

In speaking of the primary election law, he expressed the opinion that once it is generally extended to the state, it will never be withdrawn. He urged that its efficiency be increased, and advocated it as a

Step Toward Necessary Reforms.

The establishment of a state board of education of five members, representing the state university, the normal schools, the graded schools and the rural schools, with the superintendent of public instruction as its executive officer, was urged as a necessary step in perfecting the state's educational system. He also recommended the adoption of the best available plans to give school children thorough preparation, and to insure school teachers reasonable tenure in office. He suggested that the state recognize the service of its best teachers by some official act.

The new governor made forcible recommendations for the enforcement of game and fish laws and for their correction in every point where defects have been shown. He expressed the belief that proper regulations and vigilance, and honest work on the part of game wardens will insure the state a permanent food supply without detracting from its advantages as a paradise for sportsmen.

Gov. Van Sant paid fitting tribute to the life and achievements of the late Senator Davis, and in closing his address, expressing the admiration with which Minnesota regards the life work of her great statesman.

THE LEGISLATURE

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 9. — The state senate convened for its thirty-second session at noon yesterday, Lieut. Gov. Lyndon A. Smith presiding, and completed its organization before adjournment at 2:30 o'clock. Sixty-one out of the sixty-three members of the body were present. Lieut. Gov. Smith, in a brief address, expressed his pleasure at being again the senate's presiding officer. S. A. Laugum was nominated for secretary. In seconding the nomination Senator J. A. Johnson of St. Peter announced that the Democratic minority of nineteen members would accept the Republican caucus nominations. A unanimous ballot followed, after which in regular order A. D. Countryman was elected first assistant secretary, W. D. Smith second assistant secretary, George D. Montgomery enrolling clerk, A. G. Myron engrossing clerk, Thomas Downs sergeant-at-arms, Rev. W. W. Lewis chaplain, A. O. Qvam fireman.

The Republican caucus nominations for committee clerkships were unanimously passed.

Senator Snyder submitted a resolution, passed by unanimous vote, providing for the appointment of a committee on rules to report within three days. The president selected Senators J. D. Jones, Young, Snyder, Stockton, Fitzpatrick, Somerville, Schaller, Baldwin and Thompson.

During the progress of the session the clerk of the house appeared and announced that that branch had completed its organization and appointed a committee to act with a committee from the senate in waiting upon the governor and governor-elect and informing them that the legislature was ready to receive their messages. Senators Wilson, McCarthy and Fitzpatrick joined the committee from the house and reported just before adjournment that Gov. Lind and Gov.-elect Van Sant will appear before a joint session of the legislature at 10 o'clock this morning.

In the House.

The organization of the thirty-second session of the lower house of the Minnesota legislature was effected yesterday with little expedition but without any ceremony. The house was called to order at 11:45 o'clock by Secretary of State Peter E. Hanson. At 2:30 the organization had been effected and a recess taken until 3:30, when the members reassembled to secure their sittings for the winter. When Secretary of State Hanson called the house to order all the members were present with the exception of Messrs. Bareau, Potter and Wilcox. The two former arrived in time to be sworn in with the other members from their respective districts and Mr. Wilcox received the oath of office in the afternoon. Mr. Hanson, after a very brief speech, appointed Representative Albert Berg temporary chairman. The roll was called by districts, the members filing their credentials as called and receiving the oath of office, administered by Justice Collins of the supreme court. M. J. Dowling was elected speaker, the Democrats giving the honorary nomination to Henry Plowman. The balance of the officers as agreed upon in the Republican caucus were elected unanimously as follows:

Chief clerk, Julius Schmal, Redwood county; assistant, George H. Spear, Crow Wing county; second assistant, Jens Arneson, Grant county; enrolling clerk, Frank Holcomb, Ramsey county; engrossing clerk, W. W. Wall, Fillmore county; sergeant-at-arms, Edward Fanning, Olmsted county; assistant, W. F. Gray, Hennepin county; postmaster, R. W. Melendy, Hennepin county; assistant, Mrs. Franklyn W. Lee, Chisago county; chaplain, Rev. H. W. Knowles, St. Louis county.

The afternoon session was devoted almost entirely to the disposition of the seating, determined by lot. Mr. Dobbin, chairman of the committee on notification, stated Gov. Lind and Gov.-elect Van Sant had been notified of the organization of the house and senate and had each expressed a desire to deliver their addresses this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Under the rules the house adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

Gov. Van Sant Sworn In.

Gov. Van Sant took the oath of office before Moses E. Clapp, as notary, in his room at the Windsor yesterday morning, and it was filed with the secretary of state.

St. Paul, Jan. 10.—Facing Chief Justice Start, with his left hand resting on the shoulder of his nonogenarian father, the right held high in the air, surrounded by all the members of his family, and facing the legislature and a throng of spectators, Samuel R. Van Sant took his oath to support the constitution of the state and nation and perform the duties of the office of governor to the best of his ability at noon to-day. The scene was dramatic and impressive. The inauguration took place in the hall of the house. The senate was received by the members of the house standing. The chamber was crowded by spectators.

The governor and governor-elect entered the hall at 10:40, escorted by the joint committee on notification, and accompanied by Former Governors Ramsey, Pillsbury and Hubbard. Both governors were greeted with applause, long and loud in the case of the incoming executive. Both read their messages from manuscript, Gov. Lind taking precedence.

In the course of his farewell message to the legislature Gov. Lind suggested that statute provision be made for contesting the election of state officers. He said that he did not expect a law made to apply to any elections already held. He said that the defeated candidate for governor had been given the certificate of election in two of the last three elections.

Before concluding his inaugural address Gov. Van Sant took up the suggestion made by Mr. Lind and stated his position in the matter. Gov. Van Sant said:

"I wish to say something that is not incorporated in my message. First, I want most heartily to thank Gov. Lind for the courtesies shown me in connection with my induction into office. In reference to a law providing for the contesting of the election of state officers, I most heartily concur in the suggestion of Gov. Lind with this reservation, I want it not only to apply to future elections, but also to my case, and, gentlemen of the legislature, I want to say to you now, that if at any time during my term of office it is shown that I was not honestly and fairly elected, that minute I will step down and out."

At the conclusion of the reading of the messages the convention rose and the house adjourned.

The senate yesterday passed the legislative expense bill under suspension of the rules. The bill carries an appropriation of $150,000. Senator Underleak introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a tax commission. The provisions of the bill are for a complete revision of the tax laws by a board of three commissioners to be appointed by the governor. The recess appointments of Gov. Lind were approved.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 11.—The house spent the greater part of the session in a wrangle over the rules. Mr. Dunn of Ramsey submitted the report of the committee, which recommended the adoption of the rules of the last session with five amendments. All of the amendments had to do with the expenditure of money.

Mr. Jacobson objected to the amendment to rule 22. The amendment provided in effect, that bills carrying appropriations should be passed on by the committees to which they might properly be sent, copies being sent to the chairman of the committee on appropriations. Under the old rule all bills carrying appropriations went to the appropriations committee at some stage of their progress. Mr. Jacobson started in by saying that he would object to the amendment. He was given to understand, he said, that an attempt would be made to secure an appropriation of a million dollars for the new capitol, and this amendment looked like a scheme to help the project along. The amendment was rejected. The other amendments were all adopted after revision.

Mr. Laybourn offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a tax commission of five members, to be appointed by the supreme court. Senate File No. 1, appropriating $150,000 for legislative expenses, was passed under suspension of the rules.

The house adjourned until Monday evening.

In the Senate.

It is likely the senate will not indorse all the appointments made by Gov. Lind during the administration. When the subject came up Senator Parker of Isanti gave notice that he would object to the appointment of Gustav Wahland of Isanti to the game and fish commission. Senator Jones wanted the senate to go into executive session to consider the matter. The subject was finally dropped without action, to be taken up again next Tuesday.

Several bills were presented. Senator Stockwell offered the time-honored resolution favoring the amendment to the constitution to permit of election of United States senators by popular vote, which was referred to the judiciary committee.

Senator McGowan of Minneapolis presented a bill creating an eight-hour day for all laborers in the employ of the state or working on state contracts. It was referred to the labor committee.

Senator Coller presented a bill establishing standard central time as legal time for Minnesota.

After the mileage committee rendered its report the senate adjourned till 8 p. m. Monday.

BOERS DRIVEN BACK

THEY MAKE FUTILE ASSAULTS ON TWO GARRISONS.

One Hundred Britons, in One Instance, Repulse an Attack by a Force of One Thousand Boers and Kill Many of Them—Another Boer Force Attacked Zuurfontein but Were Driven Off—Kitchener Reports British Casualties at Kaalfontein Two Killed and Four Wounded.

Pretoria, Jan. 14. — A commando a thousand strong attacked Kaalfontein yesterday morning. The garrison, numbering 115 men, mostly Cheshire mounted infantry, made a plucky and scientific defense. The British maintained a six-hour bombardment from two guns and a Martini and a Maxim rapid-fire gun, and repulsed a determined onslaught by the Boer riflemen without sustaining a casualty. The Boers lost heavily. They crept in the long grass to within forty yards of the British trenches, but were driven back by the accurate and heavy rifle fire of the defenders. Numbers of Boers were seen to fall. After the attack had been repulsed Gen. Knox, with the Second cavalry, arrived in time from the southwest, in which direction they were retreating, and he drove them to the northeast toward Tygerpoort, where they may fall into the hands of a British mounted infantry force.

To Head the Boers Off

Early yesterday morning a force of 400 Boers attacked Zuurfontein, but they were driven off and joined those attacking Kaalfontein. Col. Rocheford arrived at Kaalfontein with an armored train from Pretoria in time to see the Boers in full retreat.

Later details of the Belfast fight show that 700 Boers rushed the position defended by sixty of the Royal Irish regiment. The latter fought with their bayonets until only twenty were left alive. Eventually the Boers were driven from their position by the British main garrison, the Gordon Highlanders and others.

KITCHENER REPORTS.

British Casualties at Kaalfontein Two Killed and Four Wounded.

London, Jan. 14. — Gen. Kitchener briefly reports to the war office the fact that a fight has occurred at Kaalfontein. He places the British casualties at two killed and four wounded. He adds that Boers attacked Zeerust and were repulsed, and reports skirmishes at Senekal and north of Krugersdorp. He further says that three agents of the peace committee were captured by fighting burghers and taken to Gen. Dewet's laager, near Lindley. One of the committeemen, a British subject, was flogged and shot, and the other two, who were Boers, were flogged by Gen. Dewet's order.

Unofficial Pretoria advices report that the Boers have cut the railway at Zuurfontein and destroyed the stations there and at Kaalfontein.

TERROR IN PANAMA.

Rebels Make a Desperate Attempt to Enter the City.

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 14.—The British steamer Texan, Capt. Lund, which has arrived here from Colon, Colombia, reports that when she left Colon terror reigned among the inhabitants around Panama, fearing another rebel descent upon the city. Heavy fighting began outside of Panama Jan. 10 and continued fiercely throughout Jan. 11, when the rebels were making a desperate attempt to get within the city. The government troops were strongly contesting the advance of the insurgents when the Texan left. Capt. Lund said the loss on both sides had been considerable, though without advantage either way. The rebel forces had been largely reinforced and were well stocked with supplies. Two British warships were in the harbor and an American cruiser was momentarily expected. According to the reports brought by the Texan business is at a standstill in Colombia, with a general enforcement of martial law, and the people are disgusted with the government on account of its failure to crush the rebellion. The fighting now is over a wide field and the rebels have become more stubborn than ever.

New York, Jan. 14. — The report of the appraiser appointed by the surrogate to establish the valuation of Ogden Goelet's personal property was made public and shows that it was worth nearly $7,000,000 instead of being a trifle over $400,000, the estimate furnished by the family. While the value of the real estate has never been determined, it is said to exceed $45,000,000.

Ohioan, Apparently Lifeless, Restored to Consciousness by Common Salt.

Hamilton, Ohio, Jan. 14.—The efficacy of sodium chloride (common salt) in stimulating heart action was demonstrated in a remarkable manner by Dr. W. Z. Kumler in this city. Dr. Kumler was called Saturday afternoon to attend Marcus Sauer, sixty-two years old, of 516 South Second street, who has been long a sufferer from dropsy. He found the patient apparently quite dead. All the symptoms immediately following dissolution, including perfectly cold extremities, absence of respiration, heart action and pulse, were manifest. Dr. Kumler resolved to try the salt solution as a final resort. At 1:37 p. m. he injected a quantity of warm water containing 25 per cent of salt in the left arm. In twenty seconds there were signs of a pulse, and it was plain that circulation was being revived. In twenty-five minutes a second hypodermic was administered, this time in a branch of the brachial artery, in the upper left arm. In twenty minutes from the second injection respiration was full and rythmal, color returned to the patient's face and he recovered consciousness and asked for food. Nourishment in the form of broth was administered, and soon after Mr. Sauer took a drink of water, one of the best symptoms of returning functional activity. Mr. Sauer was improving last night.

TWO WOMEN SUED BY PASTOR.

Wants $5,000 Damages for Alleged Libels.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 14. — Because women of his flock called him "ladies' man" and "high roller," Rev. J. B. Wadleigh, pastor of the Congregational church of Waukomis, wants $5,000 damages. Friday he filed suit in the court of Waukomis for that amount against Mrs. Charles Moore and Mrs. Stogsdill, active in the social affairs of that town. He says in his petition that they told other women members of his congregation and also about the town, that he was altogether "too fresh." He alleges that such reports are untrue, and damaged him in his wife's estimation to such an extent that she left him. He says he has been reprimanded by the church board on three charges and fears he will lose his position.

KING'S HAPPINESS IS SEALED.

Alexander of Servia Makes Novel Speech From Throne.

Nisch, Servia, Jan. 14. — The nordskupschtina (national assembly) was opened Saturday by King Alexander. In the speech from the throne his majesty declared his marriage had set the seal on his life's happiness. He emphasized the split with his father (former King Milan), saying Milan had left the country forever, therefore he hoped for better service from the present ministry than the last.

EULOGIES ON DAVIS

ELOQUENT TRIBUTES BY HIS LATE COLLEAGUES.

Seldom If Ever Has the Senate Witnessed More Impressive Memorial Services—Orations Picturing the Life Work of the Departed Senator as a Soldier, Citizen, Man of Letters and Statesman Are Uttered by Those Who Were Personal Friends as Well as Colleagues.

Washington, Jan. 14.—In the chamber where his eloquence has often stirred the hearts of men, upon the senate floor, and found responsive applause from the galleries above, the name of Cushman K. Davis, senator, statesman and scholar, was the theme Saturday for earnest eulogy and tender tribute from his late colleagues.

Seldom if ever has the senate witnessed more impressive memorial services. The speakers were all men who had enjoyed the personal friendship of Minnesota's greatest son.

Ordinarily the function of delivering panegyrics in congress are, to some extent, perfunctory. And the reason for it is because whenever a member of congress of however recent service, passes away, the custom must be carried out, and becomes possibly a duty rather than a privilege.

Not so Saturday. The services of Davis to his country, and the part he acted in the most eventful period of modern history, brought to the senate bar a score of eminent orators, all anxious that the sad ceremonies should not pass until they had laid upon the bier of the dead senator a wreath of remembrance—fresh flowers from the hearts of those who knew and rated Cushman K. Davis at his true value and real merit.

The rugged speech of Knute Nelson, forcible though full of sentiment; the exquisite diction of Lodge, the man of books and literature; the clear current of the venerable Morgan's tribute; the beautiful language of Senator Hoar, all emphasized the patent fact that these men knew and revered Davis in life and sincerely mourned him in death.

Not the least in the galaxy of great minds which laid their token "in the everlasting urn of history" was the finished oration, the eloquent eulogy and soul-stirring speech of Senator Charles A. Towne, whose voice was heard for the first time within the senate halls; in masterful presentation of many ideas concerning the life of Davis which other speakers had left untouched and unsaid. His tribute to Davis is a masterpiece of English diction; its delivery chained the attention of the audience, although it was the last address delivered.

The other speakers were Clark of Wyoming, Daniel of Virginia, Spooner of Wisconsin, McCumber of North Dakota, Foster of Washington and Pettigrew of South Dakota.

Mrs. Davis was in the reserved gallery and the entire Minnesota delegation in the house were on the floor of the senate during the afternoon.

BOY KIDNAPPED.

Wealthy Farmer Offers a Reward for His Son.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 14. — Frank G. Thompson, son of W. G. Thompson, a wealthy farmer residing in Alta township, Lee county, has been missing since last Thursday. His family believe he has been kidnapped and is being held for ransom, and has offered a reward of $500 for information as to his whereabouts and the capture of his abductors. Young Thompson, who is twelve years old, told his mother he was going to Sublette. He mounted a horse and rode away, the horse returned Friday morning covered with sweat and minus its bridle.

SAVED BY THE TEACHER.

Pretty Schoolma'am Prevents a Serious Conflagration.

Meriden, Conn., Jan. 14.—Miss Hattie Foster, the pretty school teacher in charge of the Old Colony Road school, saved the schoolhouse from being burned. Some tramps begged for food at the school house and were refused. In a few minutes the tall grass surrounding the building was discovered to be on fire. Miss Foster fought the flames all the afternoon, while the tramps stood around and laughed. Late in the day when the blaze was nearly extinguished some farmers went to her assistance. Miss Foster was severely burned.

Teddy Kills a Lion.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—A special to the Times-Herald from Meeker, Colo., says Gov. Roosevelt shot his first mountain lion Saturday after following the animal more than two miles. The lion, which had been treed, sprang from his perch toward the party and narrowly escaped striking Dr. Webb, one of Gov. Roosevelt's hosts. The governor fired at the animal, hitting him fairly while in the air and saving Dr. Webb from probably serious injury.

President Takes a Ride.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The president continues to improve. The weather being very bright and sunny yesterday he was able to take a short ride, Mrs. McKinley accompanying him. While the president's remarkable powers of recuperation are bringing about a rapid recovery, his physician enjoins as complete a rest as possible from official cares, and it is not expected that he will resume work in his office for a week at least.

Victory for the Arbuckles.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 14.—The Arbuckles won a victory in the circuit court when it was decided that they are stockholders in the Woolson Spice company, and as such are entitled to inspect certain books and papers of the defendant company so they may ascertain the cost and selling price of materials used by the Woolsons.

DO COWS CRY?

The Grief of an Animal Whose Calf Had Been Killed.

A correspondent writing to Dumb Animals says: Dumb animals are said to have a "sign" language of their own by which they make known the emotions of pleasure or pain and a limited catalogue of wants and sorrows. Recently I had occasion to dispose of a 5-months-old calf which was taken away about noon and butchered a short distance from my residence.

When the cow came home at night, she missed her calf, and although an orphan calf was permitted to suck she continued to call it by affectionate mooing and looking. The cow, however, only gave about one quart of milk instead of a gallon or more, as formerly. During the night she lowed frequently for her calf, and the next morning when it did not appear she exhibited unmistakable signs of grief. The orphan calf was no solace to her. She was driven to the woods with her mate, but came back and continued lowing until noon. She came inside the inclosure, but would not eat grass.

Just after dinner a great commotion was heard in the direction of where the calf was butchered, made by a number of cattle lowing, having scented the fresh blood. The grief stricken mother cow ran to the closed gate and looked beseechingly toward me, as much as to say, "Please open the gate," which being done she started on a run to where the other cattle were lowing.

In a short time she came slowly walking back to the house and was again permitted to come inside the inclosure, when she deliberately took up a position at the kitchen door, wistfully looking, in mute despair at each member of the family as they happened to pass her. The tears flowed copiously from her eyes, and there she stood the balance of the afternoon, weeping incessantly, with the same apparent grief that a mother would for her dead child. It really caused me to shed tears of sympathy for the poor animal.

TOLD BY THE GROCER.

His Conversation With a Deaf Woman Lost Him a Customer.

"I'll tell you how I lost a good customer the other day," said the groceryman. "I have one customer who is extremely deaf, and to make her hear I have to just yell at her. It takes about half an hour to get her order, and by that time my voice is pitched so high that I can't get it down to earth again.

"The other day it happened that after she left in came Mr. Oldboy, who is a perfect crank. Was in the army once and a great stickler for bowing and scraping and all that sort of thing. Wants a fellow he trades with to salute and present arms and do all kinds of things. He came in and said, 'Good morning.' I wish you had heard me yell at him. My voice made the windows rattle. He looked surprised, but went on talking to me, and I kept up answering him in a voice that could be heard a block away. He got madder and madder, but I never knew what was up until finally he got red in the face and said, 'Mr. Black, sir, I am not deaf, sir, and I resent your yelling at me as if I couldn't hear a cannon fired in my ear.' With that out he went.

"You see, I had been talking to the deaf lady and couldn't get my voice down again. You try it some time and see if you don't yell at every one you meet. Funny, too, but I always yell at blind people and foreigners, and I always whisper, when I go in where any one's sick."—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Tired of Being in Print.

"Mr. Smithers," said his wife, "if I remember rightly, you have often said that you disliked to see a woman constantly getting herself into print?"

"I do," said Smithers positively.

"You considered it unwomanly and indelicate, I believe?"

"Very."

"And you don't see how any man could allow his wife to do anything of the kind?"

"Yes; I think so now."

"Well, Mr. Smithers, in view of all the facts in the case I feel justified in asking you for a new silk dress."

"A new silk dress?"

"Yes; for the last eight years I have had nothing better than four penny calico, and I want something better. I'm tired of getting into print."—London Tit-Bits.

In the Interest of Accuracy.

At a meeting of the Mansfield House settlement Mr. Percy Alden, the warden, told a story of the mother of Robert Louis Stevenson. The widow of the novelist was telling how, in the island of Samoa, the old lady had taken walks with a native chieftain "who had killed thousands and eaten hundreds." "Oh, Fanny!" exclaimed the novelist's mother in horror, "you know it was only 11!"—London Chronicle.

King Richard In a Kitchen.

"Actors of the old school did not have the gorgeous stage settings of the present," said a veteran stage manager the other night as he gazed at the stage in Ford's Opera House, while in a reminiscent mood. "I remember once we were playing southern towns with Edwin Booth and wanted to put on 'Richard II.' No special scenery was carried for this, and I was told to look over the stock at the theater to see if there was any that could be used. The second scene called for the entrance of the king and all his courtiers into a royal hall. I picked out a set of scenery that I thought would do for the palace, but cautioned the stage hands not to get it on wrong side out. Well, the first scene was finished, and when the stage was disclosed for the second there was the typical old kitchen scene, the one with hams hanging from the rafters, a candlestick on the mantel and all that. I was horrified and asked Mr. Booth if we should change it by ringing down the curtain. He said no, he would go on, but he cautioned the other players to 'keep your eyes on me; don't under any consideration look behind you at the scenery.'

"Well, the scene went off, and afterward, when I asked some of those in the front of the house, they made no comment, and I was convinced that in the intensity of the acting they had not noticed that the king was in the kitchen instead of the palace."—Baltimore Sun.

Kept the Bonnet Company.

The story of an elderly couple who lived in a Massachusetts town nearly 50 years ago is told by some of the oldest inhabitants with much unction.

The lady had been bereft of one helpmeet, and her second husband had twice been left a widower before the pair were united in the bonds of matrimony. They were both of that temperament which causes its possessor to be characterized as "set."

On the wedding day the bride found in the back entry, on a conspicuous nail, a sunbonnet which had belonged to her immediate predecessor. She removed it to oblivion in a closet.

Her newly wedded husband made no comment, but replaced the sunbonnet on its accustomed nail.

During the next few days the calico headgear vibrated with more or less regularity between the closet and the nail. Then there came a day when the bride approached her husband with a man's hat in her hand as he was in the act of reinstalling the sunbonnet.

"If you have that sunbonnet there," she said firmly, "I shall hang up my first husband's hat on the next nail."

She looked at the bridegroom and met the counterpart of her own expression. She hung the hat on the designated nail, and, although the two people lived to be very old, neither the hat nor the sunbonnet ever moved again till the house came into the hands of a new owner.—Youth's Companion.

He Didn't Write the Story.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says that when the late R. E. A. Dorr was on the staff of the Baltimore American news came one day to the city editor that food in the Seven Foot Knoll lighthouse, out in Chesapeake bay, was exhausted and that the keeper and his family were starving. Dorr secured a custom house tug and loaded it with provisions. The weather was exceptionably cold, and the tug was stuck in the ice half a mile from the knoll. Dorr left the boat and started over the ice.

When he reached the lighthouse, he was warmly greeted. "Come in the dining room," said the keeper's wife after the rescuer had warmed himself. "Come in and have dinner with us."

Mr. Dorr thought that hunger had made her mad. "I heard that you needed food," stammered Mr. Dorr as soon as he could speak.

"Well, come to think of it," replied the housewife, "we do. We have plenty of meat and vegetables, flour and that sort, but the next time you are coming out this way we'd appreciate it if you'd bring over a few jars of quince jam," she added cheerfully.

Mr. Dorr took his provisions back to Baltimore, but no account of his trip was written.

Appearances.

They have called to solicit the firm's assistance for a local charity.

Greene—Suppose we ask this gentleman that is coming up the aisle.

Gray—No; he's dressed too well, and he has too much the air of enterprise and activity. He is undoubtedly an underling on a small salary. We will tackle that slouchy looking, woebegone little man at the desk. He is sure to be the head of the establishment.—Boston Transcript.

Necessity.

The sage has had his say against marrying in haste; here is the same thought with a prettier coloring.

A solemn and awe inspiring bishop was examining a class of girls and asked:

"What is the best preparation for the sacrament of matrimony?"

"A little coortin, me lord!" was the unexpected reply of one of the number, whose nationality may be guessed.—Exchange.

What Was the Use?

Mother—Goodness, how did you hurt your finger so?

Little Son—With a hammer.

"When?"

"A good while ago."

"I didn't hear you cry."

"No, mother. I thought you were out."—Stray Stories.

A kitten has been brought up on an exclusively vegetable diet by a family of vegetarians. The result is that it will not touch animal food, and it pays no attention to rats or mice.

We Want Correspondents.

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

The Wrong Text.

"Very few good speeches are really impromptu," said a New Orleans lawyer, who has a reputation as a clever offhand talker, "but it is generally easy to produce that effect by simply leading off with some strictly local allusion. Of course that's a trick, but it's a trick employed by a good many eminent orators. I was broken of it myself by rather a peculiar incident.

"One day some years ago I happened to be in a town where a large commercial college is located and was invited by the president to make a few remarks to the boys during the noon recess. I mentally framed a little talk on the subject of energy, and as I was going into the main hall I chanced to notice the word 'Push' in big letters on the outside of the door. 'By Jove,' I said to myself, 'that's the very thing I need for localizing my opening sentence!' So when I reached the platform I launched out something like this:

"'My young friends, as I approached the entrance to this room a moment ago I observed a word on the panel of the door that impressed me as being an appropriate emblem for an institution of this eminently practical character. It expressed the one thing most useful to the average man when he steps into the arena of everyday life. It was'—

"'Pull!' yelled a dozen of the boys on the back seats. There was a roar of laughter, and I was so horribly disconcerted that I was unable to take up the thread of my remarks. The confounded door had 'Push' on one side and 'Pull' on the other. I had taken my text from the wrong side."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Dreadful Blunder.

Mr. Jinks—You look all broke up.

Mrs. Jinks—I am. It just makes me sick to think what a fool I've been. You know that commonplace little dowdy next door that I've been snubbing so?"

"Yes."

"Well, I've just found out that her husband gets $5 more a month than you do."—New York Weekly.

To an Extreme.

"I believe in being kind to the birds and all that," said Miss Hankypank, "but I do think Clara Deager carries it too far."

"What has she been doing now?" asked the other girl.

"She refused Harry Singleshell because somebody told her that when he went out rowing he always feathered his oars."—Chicago Tribune.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

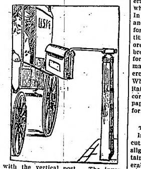
UNDERGROUND CHAMPAGNE.

Visitors to France may go out of their way to gaze upon the quaint architecture and crumbling houses of Epernay, or the Roman antiquities and grand old cathedral of Rheims, but the real towns of Champagne are to be looked for underground. These are the bustling, busy places where the business of Champagne is carried on. They are of vast extent. American and British workingmen would probably not trouble themselves to obtain employment in underground Champagne. Day after day the work-people leave the outer world for eleven and twelve hours at a time to discharge duties which, if not particularly arduous, must be wearisome by reason of their monotony. An intelligent Frenchman assured a writer in the Royal Magazine that he had worked below ground for nearly forty-five years. His duties consisted in shaking bottles to dislodge the sediment. He said that he had shaken fifty-five bottles a minute during each working day of twelve hours for these forty-five years, and then asked the writer to calculate how many bottles he had shaken. It is no great wonder that after a moment's consideration the visitor took to his heels. Underground Champagne has a reputation for producing good wines, but according to the writer the business tends to sour the dispositions of the workers. He found most of them taciturn not to say misanthropical. In one cellar at Epernay he came across an old man who assured him that the place was filled with ghosts and goblins.

It is hard to realize that underneath the primitive villages where the vineyards grow there are springing up subterranean cities of great importance, but this is the case. Men must search below, and not above, ground if they would understand the life of the people of Champagne.

IMPROVED POSTAL SERVICE.

The main improvement in the postal service of this and other countries for some time past has been along the line of increased rapidity, of collection and distribution of mail matter, and in all the larger cities wagons have been utilized in taking up the mail from the collection boxes. But heretofore no thought seems to have been given to an improved box which would allow the collector to make his tour without leaving the wagon, it having been considered a sufficient improvement of the service, to provide rapid transportation between boxes an Indiana inventor has now invented a box which makes it unnecessary for the driver to leave his seat during his entire round of collection. As will be seen by a glance at the above illustration, the box is mounted on a pivoted sliding bar, while the collector is provided with a hook, with which he engages the box, pulling it within easy reach and allowing him to extract the contents, after which the box is pushed back to its normal position in contact with the vertical post. The invention should prove especially advantageous in the establishment of the free rural delivery system, boxes of a smaller size being provided for this purpose. By driving close to the box with the wagon the contents may be extracted without exposure to rain or snow, and this also enables the driver to perform his duties without exposing himself to the storm.

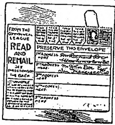


TREATMENT OF CORNS.

A corn is an overgrowth of the horny layer of some portion of the skin of the foot, induced by friction or undue pressure in one spot by the shoe. It is situated generally on a prominent portion of one of the toes, more commonly the little toe, but may be on the sole of the foot or even on the anklebone. It begins by an increase in size of the papillae in the deeper part of the skin, and this induces an increase in the production of the scarf-skin, or horny layer. The scarf-skin soon becomes inordinately thick, and, the pressure from the shoe continuing, is pushed back against the enlarged papillae, causing their final atrophy. This formation of a corn affords a curious illustration of the defeat of nature's well-meant efforts to prevent trouble; for the increased thickness of the horny layer is intended to afford protection to the enlarged and tender papillae, a purpose which would be well accomplished did the process stop there. But the friction by the shoe keeps up the irritation, and more and more of the horny covering is manufactured, until, instead of affording protection, it is actually the cause of all the pain. After a time the spot where the corn is seems to acquire a bad habit, and the formation of the corn will go on even after the offending shoe has been discarded. The first thing to do for a corn is to get new shoes that are so snug as not to rub the foot anywhere, and so loose as not to make pressure in one spot more than in another. The top of the corn may be pared with a sharp knife, extreme care being taken—especially in the case of the aged—not to cut the sound skin; or it may be filed down to the level of the surrounding skin; or the entire corn may sometimes be loosened with a dull knife-blade or by the fingernail and extracted from its bed. When this cannot be done, removal may be facilitated by moistening the corn every other day with glacial acetic acid, the softened part being subsequently scraped away with a dull knife or a small file. A salve containing salicycle acid, applied every night, will also frequently loosen the corn so that it can be pulled out. This is the basis of many of the popular corn plasters. A soft corn, which is merely a corn that is always moist on account of its location on the inner surface of one of the toes, should be treated by keeping a piece of absorbent cotton between the toes so as to prevent maceration, and by bathing it frequently with strong alum water.

IT FACILITATES REMAILING.

A New York City genius has designed an envelope which will be of value in the distribution of circulars and other printed matter, which the original sender is desirous of spreading over a wide field. When sending out the envelope for the first time the single address at the top may be written by the sender, relying upon the receiver to address it to one of his friends, or the entire space for names and addresses may be filled up by the original sender. In the former case each receiver is more than liable to send the envelope to a personal friend, especially if he considers the contents worth reading. To protect the stamps from cancellation a strip of perforated paper covers each stamp after it is fixed in place by the sender, each receiver detaching this strip from one stamp, which pays the postage to the next reader of the contents. Explicit directions are printed on each envelope for the guidance of the person receiving it, and with the use of the device it is possible to disseminate through a number of hands a single circular, with the added advantage that every remailing brings the contents to the notice of some friend of the last reader, whom the latter believes from a personal acquaintance would be interested in the matter.



JAPANESE PAPER PLANTS.

It is said that the introduction of European methods of manufacture threatens to destroy the distinctive qualities of Japanese paper. It is a wood or bark paper, made from several plants, having no English names, which are cultivated for the purpose. In Japan its varieties are numerous and its uses innumerable. It serves for window lights, and for light partitions between rooms. Brilliantly colored lanterns are made of it, and umbrellas are covered with it. It is used for printing bank-notes. Oiled, it makes waterproof garments, and covered with paste it forms tapestries. When varnished it can be made to imitate Cordovan leather. Handkerchiefs, cords and pressed articles resembling papier-mache are among the things formed from this most useful paper.

THE SALT LAKE OF LARNARCA.

In the island of Cyprus is a basin cut off from the sea, although sunk slightly below sea-level, which contains a salt lake from which a considerable harvest of salt is annually obtained in August, when the fierce summer heat dries up the water. Mr. C. V. Bellamy, who recently visited the lake called Larnarca, thinks sea-water percolates through the rocks into the basin, thus supplying the salt. A single heavy rain in midsummer has sometimes sufficed to ruin the salt crop, and the Cyprians, in order to protect the valuable lake as much as possible, have constructed channels to carry off the flood water of rains from the slopes of the basin into the sea.

TELEGRAPHING SIMULTANEOUSLY.

A successful experiment in the use of single lines for simultaneous telegraphing and telephoning is reported from Berlin. The system is employed by the fire brigade of that city. Each fire-cart is provided with a portable telephone apparatus which can be attached to the alarm pillars in various parts of the city, and operated with the same wires employed for telegraphing. Experience has shown that the switching in of the telephone in no way influences the telegraph service. During simultaneous telegraphing and telephoning a slight knocking is perceptible in the telephone, but the noise is not sufficient to destroy the audibility of the messages.

Axmen Oppose Timber Preserve.

The axmen are likely to fight hard against the plan to establish a national forest park and timber preserve at the headwaters of the Mississippi. It is feared that the consent which Secretary Hitchcock has given for the cutting of "dead-and-down" timber will mean the destruction of all the forests on the site of the proposed park, for it will be a hard task to prevent the firing of the woods.—Springfield Republican.

Robin on a Tear

Redbreast Acts Scandalously in the South.

Many of his northern friends will be shocked to learn that Robin Redbreast leads a double life. Well-dressed, jaunty, brimming over with good nature, devoted to his wife and babies, he is a model of respectability. It's true we do not like to share with him our very earliest peas and choicest cherries, but he is so great a favorite and his thieving is carried on with such calm assurance that we readily forgive. He has no enemies but the family cat. All this here at home. When Robin goes south for his winter vacation he is tempted and falls. It happens in this way: In December and January the robins find on the gulf coast a climate that suits them. They also find an ornamental tree bearing a hard, yellow berry about as large as a small pea—China berries—of which they are extremely fond. Now, the China berry, while innocent in appearance, is a very dangerous food for robins. It contains some narcotic principle that affects a robin just as alcohol affects a man. It makes Robin drunk, and when he is drunk he acts precisely like a drunken man. Exhilarated at first, he dances about and sings in a "We-won't-go-home-till-morning" sort of way. This happy condition is soon followed by a drunken stupor—the bright eyes grow dull, the head droops, and the bird loses all sense of danger. While in this stupid state the negro boys easily pick the birds from the low branches, where they are perched. After a little the birds recover, but only to hunt more China berries. As long as there are China berries Robin is consistently and persistently drunk. He apparently eats the berries for the single purpose of getting drunk and because he likes it. He isn't hungry, for he is gorged with the berries to such an extent that when, as sometimes happens, he misses his drunken hold and falls to the ground he bursts open so stuffed is he. Now it must not be thought that even a robin can undergo this sort of debauch for a month or six weeks without its having some effect on him. Robin soon loses his self-respect, grows ragged, neglects his bath, and appears generally disreputable. He is a very sad-looking bird, and northern visitors who don't know about China berries can't understand what has caused the change. He reforms when he must—that is, when the China berries are all gone, but until then he apparently never thinks of it. With the disappearance of the China berries the birds begin to think of their northern homes, their family duties, and a more prosaic but healthful diet of strawberries and angle worms. In February they gather in countless thousands in the cane brakes of Tennessee and Alabama, apparently waiting only for warmer weather before beginning their migration. At this season the visitor from the north, who would about as soon think of eating the pet canary, finds "robin pie" a common dish on southern tables. On inquiring he learns that the robins are slaughtered by the thousands. Men with torches and clubs visit the roosts by night and knock the dazed birds off their perches in great numbers. They are brought to market in grain sacks. The writer heard of one man bringing into market at one time 180 dozen, a single night's murderous work. The robins are sold on the streets for from 20 cents to 30 cents a dozen. There is no law against the wholesale slaughter, but many people in the south are interesting themselves in securing such legislation as will put a stop to it. One reason for the indifference with which our favorite is regarded is that he is only a winter visitor and doesn't compete as a song bird with the cardinal and the mocking bird, both of which are common and great favorites. Much of this pot hunting is done by negroes for sport. The robins are also shot, but the slaughter in this way is small compared with the wholesale destruction of the torch and the club.—Detroit Free Press.

Slavery in Zanzibar.

Girls Are Stolen Despite the Vigilance of British Cruisers.

And yet the anti-slavery societies cry wildly that slavery must be eradicated in Zanzibar, and the civilized world, between wars, re-echoes the cry, so the British consul and his officers work industriously to that end. It is not an easy task, either, with the number of cruisers supplied. The territory to be watched is so wide that the consul could make use of a small fleet, instead of which he usually has one ship. When I was there last summer, the Barossa had the station, but two days after she sailed north to Mombassa a courier rushed into the consulate to report that two dhows with twenty girls had slipped away to Arabia, under cover of a moonless night, and there was no ship to make pursuit. It is this sea-borne traffic that is most difficult to suppress. Just now (in December), when the monsoon sweeps the Indian ocean, it is active. The lean dhows from Muscat steal along the coast, and, concealed in many a creek and river mouth, wait for their agents inland to bring them a cargo. Then, seizing a moment when the warship is engaged elsewhere, they slip out and dart eastward. The favorite girls are those captured from the Masai and the Boran Gallas, whose charms appeal to Arabian Moslems somewhat as those of the Circassian women do to the Turks. The Borans are particularly renowned for their beauty, and a slave thief will risk his life to obtain one. This tribe, which occupies the northernmost district of the protectorate, is altogether swathed in romance. White men have never reached its capital, where the stockade of the royal palace is said to be of pure ivory. The Boran warriors are the only ones in Africa who fight on horseback, and such is their valor that they have time and again repulsed the fierce Somalis from the border. The Masai girls are considered the equals of their Boran sisters in attractiveness, but not in refinement; the latter, rumor has it, practice the rites of Abyssinian Christianity and the lost arts of centuries past. The Masai girls are easier to capture, and are, therefore, more common. The tribe was formerly celebrated for its vast flocks and herds, but a devastating famine some years ago left it almost destitute. The warriors thereupon began a system of raiding on all sides, and another fierce tribe, the Wakikuyu, took advantage of their absence to descend on the Masai, kill off the old men and steal the women and girls. These are now being disposed of at comparatively low rates to local Arab or Swahili middlemen, who retail them at a big profit.—Allen Sangree, in Ainslee's Magazine.

American Consular Methods

English and Germans Admire the Reports of Our Representatives

The attention of Germans is being attracted to the extremely practical and useful manner in which American consuls abroad write up their reports, says a Berlin correspondent of the London Express. These reports are of immense benefit to American manufacturers, and the Germans have not been slow to adopt the system of their American friends. The American reports on economical subjects are published in Washington in three ways—first, on their arrival, as "advance sheets;" secondly, as monthly "consular reports," which include the "advance sheets," and, thirdly, in the form of "special consular reports," dealing with subjects of special inquiry. The Berlin consul general for the United States is Mr. Mason, who is highly praised for his work in this direction. English people often ask, and rightly, why Germans are put in charge of the English consulates in Germany. However conscientious and hardworking they may be, Germans cannot be expected to show the same amount of interest and keenness in the furtherance of British commerce in Germany as Englishmen. It is about time England copied America in these matters.

PETTY ECONOMIES.

Many of Them Are Highly Amusing to the Ordinary Observer.

A great majority of women have the instinct of economy very highly developed, although not always in the right direction. Some of the economics of well-to-do women are very funny. Take twine, for instance. In the mind of many opulent housewives it is a sign of wicked waste to cut the string of a parcel, and they will carefully and laboriously untie every knot of a package, however intricate, and then, at the cost of much time and patience, they will do it up in neat little rolls, which are carefully put away as if they were valuable possessions. Every time that string is needed in the household they produce one of these precious rolls from their hoard, with a glow of satisfaction over their thrift. Now, a large ball of twine costs about 6 cents, and contains enough for a year, at least, and yet not one housekeeper in a hundred, it is safe to say, will ever buy a ball of twine. Rubber bands, too, are felt to be invaluable and are put by religiously, for the idea of buying a comfortable box of assorted bands ready for use would never be thought of, although the cost would be infinitesimal. Yet these very women will squander hundreds of dollars in useless fineries and overlook wastes in their kitchens that would, if stopped, reduce their butchers' and grocers' books considerably. Such is their inconsistency.

Like Rip Van Winkle.

One day in the spring of 1884, Mrs. Frederick White of Coventry, N. Y., asked her husband to bring her a sack of flour from a nearby store. He started to do so and that was the last she saw of him until one day recently, when he walked into the house with a sack of flour on his shoulder, saying, as he set it down that he had not forgotten his errand. He had been in the far west, has accumulated a good deal of money and will take Mrs. White to his western home.

Asks Damages for Prenatal Injuries.

On injuries received before he was born a pension claim has been made by a Michigan man. A brother, some twenty years older, served in the war and was reported dead. Though the report afterward proved false, the shock to his mother was very serious and her next child, the present claimant, was born a cripple and has never had the use of his lower limbs. He now maintains that the act of the government in reporting his brother dead was responsible for his injuries.

It is the duty of all women to look happy, the married ones to show that they don't wish they weren't married and the unmarried ones to show that they don't wish they were.—From Miss Fowler's Novels.

His Fears.

"Aren't you afraid to let your baby play in the front hall without the door being locked. I should be fearful lest he be kidnapped."

Jester—Sometimes I am afraid he will be; and then, at other times, I am afraid the kidnappers will overlook him.—Ohio State Journal.

To Abolish the Whipping Post.

The law-makers are wrangling over the abolition of the whipping post. The man who succeeds in passing such a bill, will prove as great a benefactor to the breaker of man's laws as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has to the breaker of nature's laws. If you've neglected your stomach until indigestion, constipation, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles are upon you, there's but one cure, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Don't fail to try it for la grippe.

TOO TIRED TO STIR!

Weary Women Get Strength and Vigor from Dr. Greene's Nervura.

SHE had planned to go out with her husband, but her strength failed her.

Her nerves were excited all day, and when night came she just couldn't find the courage.

It is the old story of weakness and nervousness taking the pleasure out of life and filling it with discontent and suffering. It is not honest fatigue resulting from the daily task; it is weariness born of weakness and ill health.

The ideal strengthener for weak women is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It builds them up in every way by toning up the blood and strengthening the nerves. Nothing else in the world can do Nervura's work. It seeks out the weak spots and strengthens them. It enriches the blood and gives it a healthy circulation, thus putting new life into the entire body.

Strength to overcome the general discouragement is followed by the ambition to be well. A few nights of sound, refreshing sleep brings a new sensation of acquired strength. How ready now is this woman for every duty and every plan for pleasure! The new color in her cheeks shows the potent work of the vegetable elements in Nervura. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and have obtained my old elastic step around the house. After creeping around for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly."

SUPPLEMENT.

St. Hilaire Spectator.

ST. HILAIRE, - MINNESOTA.

Wednesday, Jan. 16, 1901.

Ex-Secretary of the Navy W. C. Whitney has made an offer to the New York game commission of thirty elk from his preserve at Lenox, to be used for stocking purposes in the Adirondacks.

The twenty-fifth city in the United States in the order of population has by the present census more than double the number of people contained in the twenty-fifth city of twenty years ago, and nearly a third more people than in the city of that rank ten years ago.

The colored people of Coffeyville, Kan., are reported to be in great excitement under the spell of a nine year old colored preacher, Willie Jefferson by name, who seems to know the Bible by heart and is a mental freak generally. He is said to speak with considerable power.

It is believed by the engineers who are repairing the Galveston-Mexico cable, which was broken by the Galveston hurricane, that the storm was accompanied by a submarine eruption. The evidence of this eruption is found in the twisted condition of the cable. The sheathing is found to have been reversed and the wires binding it to the core turned the wrong way.

The Winnebago county board has adopted a memorial to the Wisconsin legislature asking that body to prohibit the playing of the game of football in the state of Wisconsin on the ground that "it is dangerous to the health, and to the life of the persons playing it, as it is now played." The memorial was introduced by Supervisor Nash, of Menasha, whose leg was broken in a game of football.

A 13-year-old New York youth has just been arrested and sentenced to a juvenile asylum there as a professional gambler. When he appeared before the magistrate he was togged out in finery that was the envy of the slums. He had on his person over $250 in gold and bills, which he confessed he had acquired from an original investment of 25 cents in a crap game, and he was rather proud of his achievement than otherwise.

One of the pleasantest features of the recent New York state conference of charities and correction was the number of young men whose work in the field under discussion made them prominent figures in the convention. Of the heads of college settlements, a large majority were men who have not yet reached middle life, and many other noble charities were represented by workers who are giving to humanity the strength which is the glory of young men.

The Paris Petit Journal publishes the following telegram from Bourges: "In the course of a recent visit of the minister of war to the military establishments of Bourges experiments were made with a new gun, the inventor of which is Capt. Tchrnile, of the Artillery, who is attached to the foundry here. This weapon is of great power, and is worked on very ingenious supports, invented by M. Battaille. Experiments were also made with illuminating shells. These projectiles, on bursting above a point previously determined, send forth several globes of fire, which vividly light up a large extent of country for a considerable length of time."

The establishment of an American bank at Calcutta, backed by abundant capital and able business men, is a suggestive incident in the history of India and America. As an illustration of our rapidly growing trade with the East, it is stated that one American house alone, interested in this enterprise, has more than one hundred agents in India, and has at all times merchandise to the value of almost one million dollars in transit. America's part in the business of all Oriental countries seems destined henceforth to be a leading one, and to meet the requirements of these new conditions. American banking houses will inevitably follow the cargo and the flag.

The generosity of actors and actresses is proverbial, but theaters are not often as hospitable as the Paris Opera Comique, which is offering free invitations to its performances on a fixed and intelligible principle. The ball was started by Mr. Gustave Charpentier, the author of "Louise." This being the story of a little work-girl, M. Carpentier thought little work girls would be delighted to see it, so he sent them a number of invitations, with the most gratifying results. It is now announced that the director of the Opera Comique intends to invite the clerks of notaries and advocates to the performance of "La Basoche," in which they are likely to be specially interested.

Captain A. S. Rowan, who is with his regiment on the Island of Cebu, in the Philippines, has written to his home in Atchison, Kan., for lettuce, radish and onion seeds. The natives raise no vegetables. The soldiers have no fresh vegetables, except onions and potatoes shipped from the United States. There are twelve companies of soldiers on Cebu. They are much scattered, occupying the coast towns, leaving no troops for campaigning. He writes that insurgents are as active as ever, killing, stealing and plundering.

Some One Would Like It.

"I don't like Muggins' face," said Twynn to Triplet. "He hasn't a pleasing countenance."

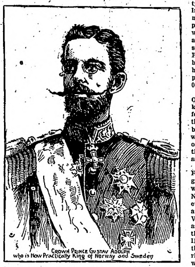
"But an auctioneer would like it," said Triplett."

"How so?"

"It is a countenance forbidding."—Detroit Free Press.

NORWAY'S NEW RULER STIRRING UP TROUBLE.

Crown Prince Gustav Adolph, heir to the double crown of Sweden and Norway, is in the king business just at present, and the chances are that it will eventually get him into trouble. His aged and amiable father, King Oscar, to whom he bears a marked resemblance, is ill and feeble, and Gustav has been appointed regent. The king has so many ailments that it is thought probable that he will never sit upon the throne again.



CROWN PRINCE GUSTAV ADOLPH who is Now Practically King of Norway and Sweden

When Prince Gustav becomes king in name as well as in fact the world will begin to hear about him straightway, not because he is brilliant and daring, but because he is going to get into hot water, which is now in process of heating for him.

The new regent is 40, tall and good looking, with a strong will. He has rigid views upon justice, but lacks any great talent for diplomacy, as well as that peculiar magnetism that marks the present king of Norway and Sweden. In 1881 he married Princess Victoria of Baden-Baden. He already has been regent twice during indispositions of the king.

The members of the Storthing are lying in wait for the prince, not only because he took sides against them in a recent crisis, but also because of certain passages at arms which they have recently been having with the king. In token of the union of the two peoples, a part of the colors of Sweden were added to the flag of Norway, and this act met with no favor from the Norwegian nation. The Storthing passed three bills abolishing it, and each of them the king vetoed, and by virtue of the triple passage the kingly position was overturned. The crown prince not only openly espoused his father's views, but observed that possibly a march of Swedish troops through the Norse country would have a salutary effect. He has always been known to favor Sweden more or less.

Should the king die trouble would certainly follow between the new monarch and his people unless Gustav changed his ideas to suit those of the two countries. The crown prince is generally credited with having the welfare of his people at heart, but he is an ardent admirer of the emperor of Germany, and has also made military matters a study, and it is no secret that his policy as king probably would be along the lines of William the Second to None. Norway and Sweden are not fond of the idea of being launched as a military power.

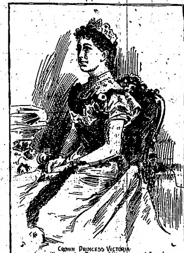
Gustav's younger brother, Oscar, is far more popular than he. Oscar is the prince who gave up his prospects of succession to the throne in order to marry Ebba Munck, his mother's pretty maid of honor. Incidentally Oscar's mother, Queen Sophia, has made a will leaving to him all her money, some $15,000,000. Poor Gustav will be lucky if he inherits more than a pittance of $5,000,000 from his father.

It is possible that Oscar may yet be king. His mother's fortune came from the gambling tables of Wiesbaden, which were a source of great revenue to the house of Nassau.

Ebba Munck of Fulkila is a Norwegian of a descent which the people of Norway, where even the peasantry are descendants of Vikings, look upon as far superior to that of King Oscar II., the grandson of the private of marines who afterward became Marshal Bernadotte in the first Napoleon's armies, and the king of Sweden and Norway. The forcing of Prince Oscar to give up all rights of succeeding to his father's throne because of his marriage with Miss Munck angered the hardy Norwegians, and they have ever since had a great affection for that prince. When he visited the Norwegian capital, Christiania, with his bride shortly after his marriage the whole city turned out to give him a royal welcome, which was participated in by the Norwegian authorities.

Norway is in no way a vassal state of Sweden. It has its own flag and its own government, and the only bond of union between the two countries is the throne. Recently, upon the opening of the Norwegian parliament, the Shorthing, the king's son, the crown prince, was present, and the king had him take the oath of allegiance to the crown of Norway, expecting that the ceremony would please the Norwegians. The prince's oath was received in silence, and a member remarked afterward, "Such a proceeding was against all precedent and was merely a piece of state stage play. The Norwegians are not cajoled so easily."

The name of Bernadotte plays almost the part of a family skeleton in the royal circle at Stockholm, and when Prince Oscar claimed it for himself, the king would not hear the name mentioned. He insisted that Prince Oscar should take the title of Count of Wisborg. This Prince Oscar did, and then simply added that of Prince Bernadotte. But for the military genius of John Bernadotte, the private of marines, King Oscar II. would never have worn the dual crown of Norway and Sweden, yet the king strives to forget that he had such a grandfather. Not so Prince Oscar, and his stubbornness and the fact that he will come into a great fortune upon the death of his aged mother, joined to the fact that he has allied himself with an old Norwegian family, which the other members of the reigning house have snubbed, have made him the idol of the hardy men of Norway. It is possible that one day, sooner than is expected, Ebba Munck and her faithful lord will reign in Christiania over a devoted people.



CROWN PRINCESS VICTORIA who will soon be Queen of Norway and Sweden

Unable to Suppress Hooligans.

London is facing a difficult problem in the shape of gangs of young ruffians who frequent certain sections of the city and waylay passersby, levy blackmail and even commit murder in the populous sections of the city with apparent immunity from punishment owing to the difficulty the police have in finding persons who will prosecute or give evidence against them. These gangs are known to the general public as Hooligans and reports of the recent demonstration on the return of the City of London Imperial Volunteers from South Africa mentioned the Hooligans as being responsible for much of the disgraceful disorder which marked that occasion. The latest feature of of Hooliganism is the formation of gangs of boys in their teens who emulate their elders in crime. The London authorities admit that they have found no method of suppressing the Holligans.

THE HIMALAYAS.

Mrs. Workman Makes World Record for Women.

In June, 1899, the authors of "The Himalayas," Dr. and Mrs. Workman, returned to Srinagar from Java, where they had been on a cycling tour, and lost no time in getting together their outfit and engaging coolies for an expedition to the northern regions of Baltistan. The route followed was over the Deosai plains to Skardu, from thence to Shigar, and by the Askor Nullah to Askole, and it speaks well for Mrs. Workman's strength of nerve that she was able to cross the rope bridge over the Braldu river, near Askole, which is stated to be 270 feet long. In this expedition they were accompanied by the well-known Alpine guide, Mattias Zurbriggen, who had traveled with Sir Martin Conway when he visited and surveyed part of this region in 1892, and therefore had considerable experience, and from what the authors state regarding him he fully upheld his reputation as a thoroughly reliable guide. From Askole the party traversed the Biafo glacier as far as the Hispar pass and the Skoro La. In the latter region Mrs. and Dr. Workman under the guidance of Zurbriggen made the ascents of peaks respectively 18,600 and 19,450 feet above sea level. On the arrival of Mrs. and Dr. Workman at Shigar they determined to attempt the ascent of Koser Gunge. With that object in view they traveled to Yuno, and established a camp at the elevation of 15,000 feet, from which position the attack on the mountain was commenced, but it was not until several days afterward that the final attempt was made. The usual difficulties with the coolies were experienced, and on this occasion the party was only accompanied by two of them. By noon they had reached an elevation of 20,000 feet; the cold was intense, with a strong wind blowing, and Mrs. Workman was obliged to get Zurbriggen to rub her hands and pound her feet to restore circulation. At this juncture one of the coolies gave in and had to be unroped and sent back, after which they struggled on, gaining foot by foot, until at last the summit was reached at an elevation of 21,000 feet. The party had been out from camp thirteen hours, and the climbing had been most difficult, certainly a most wonderful performance for a lady, and one of which Mrs. Workman may justly feel proud. In this expedition she had made ascents of 18,600 and 19,450 feet and 21,000 feet, this being a world mountaineer record for women.

Queer Accident to Guns.

While the British battleship Thunderer was off Milford Haven, Wales, not long ago, a curious accident to one of her guns caused much alarm among her crew. A target had been put out for practice with the ten-inch breechloading guns. When one was fired by electricity only a portion of the projectile was discharged, the base plate of the shot and a portion of the frame being left in the gun. When the plate was removed the pressure of gas forced a portion of the projectile from the breech of the gun. On the second gun being fired a hole about three inches in diameter was blown through the projectile, the other part of the base plate being left behind. The base plate was in this case separated from the rest of the projectile. Such accidents are believed never previously to have occurred on board any ship. There was much alarm among those in the turret, as the bursting of the guns was for a time feared. It is suggested that either the powder in the projectiles was damp or there was water in the guns. So far as can be seen both guns are sound.

Cracow Taxes Too High.

The excessive taxes laid on house rents by the Austrian government are slowly but surely bringing their natural fruits all through the country, but especially in the large towns. For every 100 kronen ($20) of rent the owner must pay 48 kronen ($9.65). At present there are 147 houses in Cracow to be sold by auction because the taxes cannot be paid. If one counts about 1,500 houses, at the rate of fifty inhabitants a house, this will make almost 10 per cent, and many houses have more than 100 inhabitants. Furthermore, the government has raised the duties on sales from 2 per cent of the value of each house to 4 per cent. No wonder, if, notwithstanding the heavy penalties in case of detection, owners defend themselves by putting the rents in their official reports at lower figures than they really are.—Chicago News.

A DARING GIRL.

Pretty Susan Shelly Has Many Thrilling Adventures.

Pretty and accomplished Susan Shelly of Shellingrove, Pa., has recently acquired considerable notoriety by her many deeds of daring that would challenge the bravado of the most dashing cowboy of the wild west. She is well known to the citizens of Freeburg, Snyder county, and vicinity. She is 21 years of age, highly educated, and but for the publicity given her for wearing male attire, playing hobo and hold-up of a train near Richmond, Ind., within the past fortnight, her Freeburg friends and acquaintances would only think of her as the pretty, witty and accomplished singer and pianist as she was ten years ago. It seems her motive in leading a temporary life of dime novel romance is to imbue her with the true spirit of the real and practical in the realm of daring and adventure to enable her to write a book containing her experiences as a tramp and railroad hold-up. Professor H. B. Moyer, director of the Freeburg Music College, says of Miss Shelly: "She was a student at the music college here when hardly 12 years old. After the lapse of some years, having in the meantime taken a thorough course in the New York College of Oratory and Music, she returned to Freeburg and filled the chair of elocution. Her ideal of life seemed to be centered around some vocation in which the physical activities were called into frequent requisition. She was always preparing for some definite work."

Curio Hunters in Rural England.

Nowadays there is scarcely a cottage too remote to be visited by the furniture collectors. Most districts are scoured by the agents of the large furniture firms in London, and the rural folk are beginning to understand the value of their old oak chairs and grandfather clocks and their beloved china handed down from generation to generation. On genuine old willow pattern plates and dishes there is a great run nowadays, and many a cottage dresser has been shorn of its glory in consequence. Still, some of the poor people—all honor to them—cling to their old sticks and plates and refuse to be tempted by the offers of the old curio hunters.

THE PETRIFIED FERN.

In a valley, centuries ago,
Grew a little fern-leaf, green and slender,
Veining delicate and fibres tender;
Waving when the wind crept down so low;
Rushes tall and moss and grass grew round it.
Playful sunbeams darted in and found it,
Drops of dew stole in by night, and crowned it;
But no foot of man e'er trod that way;
Earth was young and keeping holiday.

Monster fishes swam the silent main,
Stately forests waved their giant branches,
Mountains hurled their snowy avalanches,
Mammoth creatures stalked across the plain,
Nature reveled in great mysteries,
But the fern was not of these,
Did not number with the hills and trees;
Only grew and waved its own sweet way,
No one came to note it day by day.

Earth one day put on a frolic mood,
Heaved the rocks and changed the mighty motion
Of the deep strong currents of the ocean;
Moved the plain and shook the haughty wood,
Crushed the little fern in soft moist clay,—
Covered it and laid it safe away.
O the long, long centuries since that day!
O the changes! O life's bitter cost,
Since that useless little fern was lost!

Useless? Lost? There came a thoughtful man
Searching nature's secrets, far and deep;
From a fissure in a rocky steep
He withdrew a stone, o'er which there ran
Fairy pencilings, a quaint design,
Veinings, leafage, fibres clear and fine,
And the fern's life lay in every line!
So, I think, God hides some souls away,
Sweetly to surprise us, the last day.

Fate,

BY E. J. KEYES.

(Copyright, 1900: Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Dinner was being served at the bungalow of the consul-general at Bankok.

The omnipresent punkah waved noiselessly overhead, cooling the evening air, which was heavy with the odor of the lotus flowers. The guests conversed gaily in languages foreign to their own, for a fluent tongue is essential to friendships in Siam.

The men, and the women, too, with one exception were dressed in spotless white. This exception proved to be the most beautiful woman in the room. Perhaps, as she had passed the heydey of her youth, she considered her black gown as more appropriate, and the fact that the absolute purity of her skin shone with exquisite beauty against that gown was beyond argument.

There was a lull in the conversation.

"Apropos of your last remark on the duty of a man toward a woman who loves him," said the Honorable Raleigh Carter, as he turned to a member of the French legation on his left, "I should like to tell you a story."

The attention of the table was his in an instant, for the minister told a story well—a rare accomplishment.

"Years ago," he began, "no matter the number, a young fellow we will call Wainwright was a student at Harvard. He went there, fresh from a country town, more of a boy than most men at his age, with simplicity and goodness written on his face, and a power to gain friends that was envied him by many. He was so much in earnest in everything he did his attentions were so rare and so courteous that he instantly became a prominent figure at the college social functions.

"At one of these he met the sweetest, most lovable young woman he had ever imagined. She was the sister of his room-mate, and through him the intimacy ripened.

"You are the one fellow on earth who is good enough for Isabel," he often told him, but Wainwright was silent.

"Back in that little village he remembered clinging arms, a farewell kiss, a promise of eternal faith. He knew then, too late perhaps, that he had never loved her, that she could never reach those deep-laid chords that this clever, refined young woman of the world had struck into harmony at once.

"As the year passed it became part of his regime to spend the end of each week at her home, and at last they found themselves alone. It was a perfect night—star-lit, redolent with the springtime—a night for love.

"I should like to tell you a story."

"They were standing together by an open window, and a passing zephyr blew a lock of her hair across his eyes. At the moment it was the one thing needful to blind him to the past. With a motion that was the tenderest invitation he held out his arms; with a movement as natural Isabel laid her head upon his breast. Words were not necessary; their love was unspeakable.

"Afterwards when the influences were changed, Wainwright was wrung with remorse. He knew his relations to both were dishonorable and he determined to break with the other woman—"

Here the Frenchman interrupted. "Quite right," he vouchsafed. "Even a man's word of honor cannot compel him to marry a woman he no longer loves."

For a moment the Honorable Mr. Carter was silent. Outside came the swish of oars in the adjacent river and the strain of a song borne on the mellow, languorous air.

The woman in the black gown, who sat directly opposite him, had dropped her handkerchief, and when she regained it he again took up the thread.

"In a short time Wainwright's father died, and the lad left college never to return. He went back to that distasteful village, commenced his life where he had left it off and found that everything was changed, that nothing could be the same again. The blue eyes, the sympathetic hand-touch, the tender voice, were nothing to him now, and yet hating to pain one who so loved him, he could not bring himself to tell her."

The gentleman from France smiled contemptuously.

"And so ruined his own life and the other woman's. The odds were in favor the other way," he remarked.

"Perhaps," said the consul grimly.

Time passed. So things drifted and at last Wainwright enclosed a newspaper clipping in an envelope and addressed it to Isabel. It was the announcement of his own marriage. He felt the woman despised him, and at the time he prayed she would.

The years passed, and with them the wife, but the love look was ever on her face, for no action of Wainwright's had disabused her mind of the belief that she was all to him. Finally, his stern sense of duty satisfied, he sought the world again. He met Isabel then—

She was leaning indolently against the porch rail.

The ever-ready Frenchman pursed his lips incredulously.

"And she still loved him?" he inquired.

"That I never knew," was the answer.

"There was an unmistakeable something always between them—their relations were those of strangers and he could never close the breach. He longed to tell her what his life had been; as a woman who knew the world he felt she would forgive him, and if she forgave him, might she not love him?"

Once again the Frenchman leaned forward.

"He should have told her the story. He should have asked for her love," he said emphatically.

The consul-general raised his eyes from the wine glass in his fingers, and his glance shot piercingly across the table.

"He has done both," he replied, giving the signal to arise.

Later, when most of the guests had sought cooler, more secluded spots under the banyans and palms of the lawn, a solitary black-gowned figure leaned indolently against a pillar of the veranda. Despite the haughty uplifting of her head the brilliant oriental night could not hide the sorrowfully drooping mouth, and her hand trembled visibly against the railing as the consul appeared within the doorway.

He stood there a moment—a noble and impressive figure, then walked slowly towards her.

"Isabel," he said, softly, "my story awaits its ending."

She was silent, and the sad note of a night-bird came softly from a far-off tree.

Again he spoke and every word was subtle pleading.

"It has been so long—so long without you, my love," he whispered.

Her hand dropped and fell against his own.

"So long, my love," she echoed softly. Her face was turned from him, but he placed his hand upon her forehead, and drawing her head gently backwards till it rested on his heart, he kissed her on the lips.

Baby Whale Is Thriving.

A baby whale, two and one-half feet in length, was washed ashore in the breakers a few miles south of the Cliff House recently, and was picked up by C. Baker, S. Roberts and George Whistler, who were walking on the beach. The little whale was lively and in good condition, except for a slight bruise on the side of its head, and in half an hour the young men had him in a receptacle filled with salt water. The little fellow was brought to this city, and thrived so well that in a short time, to the amazement of his captors, he had grown to a length of nearly four feet. He is one of the blue species, and blows vigorously most of the time he is thrashing around in his tank. Seafaring men who looked upon the little whale said they had never seen so diminutive a specimen of his species before, but that he was nevertheless a whale. His tail is shapely and is already avoided by the young men who have taken it upon themselves to raise the embryo leviathan to adult size.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Odd Sun Dial.

Among the Montagnais Indians a crude form of sun dial is used in hunting to let the squaws, who follow their lords and masters, know whether they may "take it easy" or "hurry up," for they might fare badly if they lagged behind when their husbands were ready for supper. And so the men when hunting erect in the snow a stick at some well known place and draw the exact line of the stick's shadow in the snow before going on. When the women arrive there with their pots and other cooking utensils they note the new line of the shadow, and by observing the angle which it forms with the line already drawn in the snow they can tell how far ahead their husbands are.

No matter how important you may think you are today should you die tomorrow the busy old world wouldn't even miss you.

STREET LIGHTING.

Reasons Why the Expenditures of New York for This Purpose Are Large.

Chicago spends $600,000 a year in street lighting; Boston, $650,000; Cincinnati, $425,000; Baltimore, $350,000; San Francisco, $245,000; Providence, $250,000; New Orleans, $230,000; Cleveland, $325,000, and Washington, a city of long distances, low houses and wide streets, $235,000. New York will expend for street lighting in 1901 $2,745,000 for gas and electricity. Of this total Manhattan uses $960,000; Brooklyn, $350,000; The Bronx, $350,000; Queens, $255,000, and Richmond, $130,000. By comparison with the expenditures of other American cities for illumination, New York's annual payment may seem to be abnormally high, but there are various reasons why the cost of public lighting should be proportionately much larger here than elsewhere. New York has a larger waterfront than any other American city. While other cities have usually one public market, New York has a dozen, and the eight included within the borough of Manhattan use on an average 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas in a year. Many other American cities rent the premises they require for public departments, whereas New York owns most of her public buildings, and the gas bills, which in some other cases are met by private individuals, are in most cases here paid directly from the appropriation, which, while nominally for street lighting, actually includes all forms of illumination for which the city is responsible. New York has in all nearly 60,000 lamps, gas and electric. There are 30,000 in New York and The Bronx, of which 24,286 are gas lamps, 4,538 electric, and the others naphtha lamps. Brooklyn has 11,015 gas lamps and 4,603 electric lamps. Queens borough, the most extensive division of New York to be lighted, has 3,839 gas lamps and 2,106 electric lamps. Richmond, the most progressive of the boroughs of New York in this particular, has all electric lights—no gas. Of these, 2,583 are incandescent lamps and 382 are arc light. There are, moreover, 100 oil lamps in use in Richmond borough. The extent of the territory to be covered and the peculiar conditions existing in New York explain to a great extent the reasons for so large an appropriation for illumination, nearly 3 per cent of the entire budget of the city, which is $100,000,000 for next year. Though the most expensively lighted city in the country, the assertion is not made for New York that it is the best lighted American city.—New York Sun.

FROM A POORHOUSE.

A Wayside Honeymoon from Portland to Boston and Separation.

Social circles of the Deering Poor Farm were startled recently by the elopement of two inmates of the institution, Mary Furillo and Harry Rockwood, says the Portland Daily Press. Miss Furillo has seen some thirty-six summers, while Mr. Rockwood's knowledge of the world covers a period of just half that time. Neither of the young persons are very strong mentally, but when they met it was a case of love at first sight, and as the rules of the institution which sheltered them did not permit marrying and giving in marriage, they decided to leave its roof together. Joining hands they took their departure unbeknown to the superintendent and the other inmates. Nothing was heard of the departed couple until about five days after their disappearance. Then word came from the authorities in Boston that they were in that city and expressed a desire to see Portland once more. The authorities directed that they be returned and the Boston people were glad to comply. Miss Furillo and Rockwood had walked from Portland to Boston, making the trip in five days. They slept wherever night found them and begged their meals from the good-natured country people living along the route they were traveling. By the time they reached the Hub, however, some of their romantic notions had been dispelled, and they were ready to return to the more prosaic, even though arduous poor farm life. Upon the return of the erring wanderers it was deemed best by the poor authorities that they be maintained at separate institutions. Accordingly the Furillo woman was sent out to Deering and Rockwood to the Portland street home.

WORTH FORTUNES.

Mention of Some of the World's Costliest Pictures.

"The Ansidei Madonna," by Raphael, holds the distinction of being the most expensive picture in the world. It was purchased out of parliamentary grants from the Duke of Marlborough for $350,000, which is equal to $60 per square inch. In repose, coloring, drawing and technical achievement it is one of the finest of Raphael's paintings, but there was much dispute concerning the advisability of the English nation paying for it such an unprecedented sum. Another costly purchase from the Duke of Marlborough's collection was the portrait of Charles I. by Van Dyck. This picture was sold for a pretty sum by the parliament after the death of Charles I., and the parliament of 1885 paid $87,500 to get it back. The "Family of Darius," sold by Ruskin to be "the most precious Paul Veronese in the world," was bought by the London National gallery a few years ago for $68,250. Terberg's "The Peace of Munster" sold for $44,000, which was about $120 per square inch. "La Vierge au Panier," by Correggio, sold as long ago as 1825 for $19,000, a sum which it was said at the time would cover this little panel with sovereigns 27 times over. Other pictures for which fortunes have been paid are the "Portrait of a Man," and "Portrait of an Old Lady," by Rembrandt, for $62,500, and "The Two Ambassadors," by Holbein; "Admiral Pareja," by Velasquez, and "An Italian Nobleman," by Moroni. For these three pictures was paid the princely sum of $125,000.

The most of the type on the Crookston Daily Journal is now set with a Merghanthaler, the latest improved type setting machine. We admire the taste of the one who selected the face of type. Mr. Gorden is an enterprising and progressive newspaper man and stops nothing short of getting the best of everything for his already well equipped plant. We believe this is the first and only linotype machine in the Red River Valley on the Minnesota side.

Isaac P. Blumberg a "poor but honest" young man of Syracuse, N. Y., joined the Modern Woodmen in that city, on Aug. 15, 1900. He took out a certificate for $1,000 payable to his aged mother. His rate of assessment was 40c, and he had paid three assessments, or $1.20 in all, when he died on Dec. 21st. Thus his mother who is poor and helpless, receives $1,000 for $1.20. Although the amount is practically a clear donation, it will do a world of good and the powerful Woodman society does not mourn the loss.

Red Men Pow-Wow.

The local tribe of Red Men were assisted by Pete Paradis, Martin Bjerk, Bob Fritz, Emil Brink and J. Hogquist of St. Hilaire, last Monday night, and three candidates learned the mysteries of the hunters rocky trail. An enjoyable evening was put in, and it is the wish of the boys that their St. Hilaire brothern can often repeat the visitation.—Thief River Falls Press.

Julius Pleth, the land man, received his costly sign board last week which was made by a St. Paul firm and now has the same swinging to the breeze. You will have no trouble in finding his location.

True enough—Look out for your boys. Family government is the best. It does more for the state than jails and penitentiaries. The mother does more for the moral of community than the preacher possibly can, and the father is in a position to do more good for the country than a major general. Your boys, to become intelligent and useful citizens, must be kept at work and don't forget that idleness is the devil's workshop. The boy that idles his time away in loafing when he ought to be at work is taking steps to become a tramp.—Culbertson (Neb.) Era.

New General Store.

K. M. Hansen of the firm of Mullarky and Hansen, which has long conducted a successful general store business in this city, has associated himself with Mr. Benj. Christianson, formerly a Wisconsin merchant, but for the past year a resident of this city, and will succeed to the business of the old firm. Mr. Mullarky is forced to seek a milder climate than that of Minnesota or sacrifice the health of his family, and the stock of Mullarky and Hanson has been closed out in the past few months preparatory to a dissolution of partnership. The new firm will purchase the remnant of the stock and add thereto a full line of new goods.—Thief River Falls Press.

The triflin' scrap he's apt ter lose
Ain't wuth much, I'll be bound.
He spins his yarn, an' spins it well—

An' so we can't blame Fred ef he
Don't allus git things straight.

Credit Problem Solved.

A new departure was introduced by a local firm at Blue Earth, this state, which will be watched with no little interest by Minnesota merchants who have endeavored to solve the credit problem. The firm does a general merchandise trade, and in order to place its business entirely on a cash basis, has opened a banking department. Customers who desire credit are given an opportunity to obtain money at the banking department, giving their notes which are drawn for short time loans without interest. The cash thus obtained goes to the mercantile side of the establishment, which is thus kept on a strictly cash basis. The proprietors are sanguine over the new plan and others are watching to see the outcome. So far as known, this is the only country store in the state operating such a system.

A gentleman once said to a reporter, "I never took a newspaper that did not pay me more than I did for it. One time an old friend of mine started a paper way down South and sent it to me and I subscribed, just to encourage him, and after a while it published a notice that an administrater had an order to sell a lot at public auction. So I inquired about the lot and told my friend to run it up to $50. He bid me off the lot for $37, and I sold it in a month for $100 so I made $63 clear by thaking that paper. My father told me that when he was a young man he saw a notice in the paper that a school teacher was wanted way off in a distant county, and he went there and got the situation, and a little girl was sent to him, and after a while she grew up sweet and pretty and he married her. Now if he hadn't taken that paper what do you reckon would have become of me? I would have been some other fellow or maybe I wouldn't have been at all."—Ex.

Feed Your Screenings.

How many farmers stop to consider how much feed they are raising and hauling to market for which they get absolutely nothing in return? We have learned that pigeon grass seed has a feed value equal to corn if used properly and yet farmers give it away after having paid the threshing bill on it; not only on the grass seed but on wild buckwheat and other seeds which are "taken off" as "dirt" at the mills or elevator and cleaned out and sold to sheep feeders, thus giving the nonproducer what the farmer should have saved. Between 3,500 and 4,000 sheep in this city have been fattened on such feed purchased from mills and elevators at about $3.50 to $4.00 per ton. This feed the farmer should have fed at home.

We are all glad to know that the flocks were fed to the farmers profit. One buyer informed the writer that he would have at least $400 of screenings this season and it is asserted that one firm of sheep feeders cleared $1.00 per head on 8,000 sheep fed last year. Farmers, you cannot blame anyone but yourselves. Home-made windmills are easily made and attached to fanning mills and this year screenings are too plenty to say that it does not pay to clean the grain before selling it. A good self-feeder, made hopper like with an aperature opening into a trough at the bottom, prevents waste and is not expensive. The floor should be two feet wide and the hopper should be eight inches wide at the bottom by two feet six inches at the top inside measure and should be three feet high exclusive of legs. Feeder can be made of cheap lumber, and should be covered to exclude snow or rain. The aperature into the trough is made by nailing the lower side board a short distance from the bottom one (about 1¾ is right for ordinary screenings.) The more straw in them the greater the opening required.—D. B. Lynch in Dakota Farmer.

War, Famine and Pestilence.

War, famine and pestilence have done their share, and perhaps more, this year in reducing the population of the world. Last year the principal military operations were confined to the Philippine Islands, the Soudan and South Africa, and the losses in killed and wounded from these and scattering sources were 48,161. This year the principal operations have been in the Philippine Islands, South Africa, China and Colombia, and from these the returns of killed and wounded are as follows: China 90,913, South Africa 24,008, Philippine 6,621 and Colombia 5,070. The returns from China represent not only the results of collisions between the Chinese and the allies, but also the dreadful massacres which preceded and followed the outbreak in various parts of the empire. Adding to the above the totals from other parts of Asia and Africa and from Mexico, Venezuela, Bulgaria and Morocco, the total is 133,753, as compared with 48,161 last year. Epidemic diseases have not been so destructive of life as in 1899. The returns for plague are but 20,907, a decrease of 230,000, while cholera deaths are put at 60,000, an increase of 58,000. No accurate estimate has been made of the number of victims of the Indian famine. The official reports so far as known foot up 500,000, but the actual number probably greatly exceeds this.—Chicago Tribune.

A Chinaman on Americans.

A Chinamar, on being asked his opinion of Americans, gave the following reply: "They live for months without eating a mouthful of rice. They eat bullock and sheep in enormous quantities with knives and prongs. They never enjoy themselves by sitting quietly on their ancestors' graves, but jump around and kick balls, as if they were paid for it. They have no dignity, for they may be seen walking with women.

The Chinaman told only part of the truth, for he overlooked the fact that we have the best flour in the world; the most wholesome meat, and that we drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer, the most healthful beverage, because it is the purest. A Trick of the Trade.

"I—I think I would like to look at a diamond ring," said the young man, as the jeweler came forward.

"Exactly. A diamond ring for a lady?"

"Yes."

"A young lady?"

"Yes."

"A young lady to whom you are engaged?"

"What's the difference whether I'm engaged to her or not?" asked the customer, with considerable tartness.

"A great deal, sir. You intend this ring for a Christmas present, probably?"

"I probably do."

"Very well. We have diamond rings for $25 and diamond rings for $50, $75 and $1000. If not actually engaged to the girl, take a $25 ring, and when she brings it in here to find out the cost we'll lie $50 worth for your benefit. If really engaged, take one of a higher price, and you can pawn it for two-thirds of its value after marriage. Now, then, make your selection."—Washington Post.

LIEUT. MABEL C. HUNT.

A Bright Salvation Army Lassie, Who Knows How to Keep Her Corps in Good Health.

Ogden, Utah, Jan. 12, 1901.—Special.)—The Pacific Coast Division of the Salvation Army, whose noble work in the interest of fallen humanity has done so much for this Western country, has its headquarters in this city. One of the brightest and most enthusiastic workers is Lieut. Miss Mabel Clarfce Hunt. Everyone knows how these devoted people parade the streets day or night, exposing themselves to all kinds of weather, that no opportunity may be lost of rescuing some poor unfortunate from sin and suffering. In some cases their recklessness in thus exposing themselves has been commented upon as almost suicidal. Their answer to such criticisms invariably is their unfailing faith in the Divine injunction to "do right and fear not." Lieut. Hunt explains one of the means she employs to keep her "Soldiers" in good health, as follows:

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills of great value in cases of Kidney and Liver Trouble and Diseases contracted from severe colds. Several of our lads and lasses have been repeatedly exposed to cold weather and rain, and have spoken for hours out of doors, often with wet feet and chilled to the marrow. As a consequence of this exposure, Pulmonary Trouble, Rheumatism and Kidney Disorders often ensue. In such cases I always advise Dodd's Kidney Pills, for I have noticed better results, quicker relief and more lasting benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases than from all other medicines I know of combined. They cleanse the blood, regulate the system and destroy disease."

A medicine which can do what Lieut. Hunt says so positively Dodd's Kidney Pills do, is surely worth the attention of all who suffer with any form of Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism or Blood Disorders.

Safe Betting.

A Durham farmer was traveling to London to consult a lawyer, when the fear struck him that he had left certain important papers behind. He hurriedly searched his bag.

"If I did leave those papers," he remarked, I'm a fool."

The search proceeded, and a moment later he said:

"I believe it'll turn out that I'm a fool."

Just as he was examining the last bundle of papers he exclaimed:

"I believe it'l turn out I'm a fool."

A man on the other side of the compartment lowered his newspaper for a moment and said, slowly and deliberately:

"Oblige me, sir, by laying a little money that same way for me."—London advance.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

MISS PFALZGRAF

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the winds from unsunned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay.

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, O Father! Let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm, I merit;
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—John G. Whittier.

For Love of Madelaine.

BY JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY.

(Copyright, 1500, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

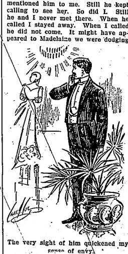
Although I had been a frequent caller at the home of Madelaine Zimmer, as I had a right to be, I had never met Charles Newkirk there. Indeed, there were many other young men of my acquaintance whom I had never met at her home, for that matter, but the fact that Newkirk and I never happened to be callers in the luxurious house of the Zimmers at the same time is worthy of mention. This was the Newkirk who was in love with Madelaine.

His tenderness for her was hardly within my knowledge, as he had never told me of it, but it was so firmly a matter of belief with me that it interfered with my ease of mind. I knew he called to see her; that was sufficient to make out a plain case of rivalry against him. After that whenever I encountered him at the club or at receptions the very sight of him quickened my sense of envy. His handsome features, his rakish mustache, his correct clothes and his graceful carriage had the distressing effect of putting me in despair of winning Madelaine so long as he was in the field. For that reason I was glad I had never met him when I was paying my devotions to her, as I felt I would suffer, by comparison, in her eyes.

If he was handsome and dashing, he was devoid of some of the essentials for a good husband. I knew this. Madelaine, I was sure, did not know it. Therefore, as one who loved her with every fiber of his heart that was sensible to passion, I felt a double purpose in my wooing—to save her from him and to win her for myself.

I wanted to tell her what sort of a fellow at heart Newkirk was. Being his rival, however, I dared not. I knew from the discoveries LeBruyere made in dissecting the souls of women that it would have a contrary effect.

Newkirk never spoke of her to me, I never spoke of her to him. She never mentioned him to me. Still he kept calling to see her. So did I. Still he and I never met there. When he called I stayed away. When I called he did not come. It might have appeared to Madelaine we were dodging each other. I was glad we were, for I feared my impetuous disposition would have spoiled my chances.



The very sight of him quickened my sense of envy.

Fortunately I was able to preserve an unruffled demeanor, but I was watchful and determined. Newkirk had affairs of business that called him often to New York. I heard also in the club gossip that he had an affair of the heart there, too. From that moment I was resolved to put a literal construction on the maxim: "All is fair in love and war."

Soon after this Newkirk went East, to remain a month, he said. In happy coincidence the Zimmers left the very next day to pass the summer session at Charlevoix. The day following I sailed for Charlevoix to pass my vacation. She welcomed me there with evidences of delight. It was a period of supreme happiness to be near and to know that Newkirk would not interfere for a whole month.

Then was my time, if ever, I realized; to win her. As a wise general would do preparatory to assaulting a citadel, I made a plan. It was simple enough. It was to tell her that Newkirk was dead. That would leave the field clear. In her moment of bereavement I would naturally be the one man to whom she would turn for consolation. The rest would be easy.

I broke the sad news to her one day while we were strolling along the cliffs. She didn't take it much to heart, and I feared for my success. Women are so much more confiding in times of grief. It was too late to change the plan then. I did the best I could. I held her hand, I pressed it to my lips, I muttered things so tender that they escaped my articulation. When I thought there was nothing proper left for me to do but jump over the cliff and hope they would never find my body, she turned to me with an expression of tenderness in her great brown eyes that filled my soul with joy.

"And you love me, Madelaine?" I sighed.

"I have loved you with all my heart for a long, long time, John," she whispered.

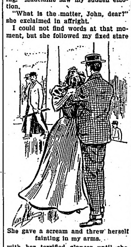
There we plighted our troth. The birds sang sweeter than ever they sang before. The sun shone brighter; the lake and the sky were bluer and the air was perfumed as we slowly paced along. We forgot the dinner hour and didn't care, for we were happy.

It was late in the afternoon when we returned to the hotel. We were sitting in the cooling shade of the great veranda. Another boatload of visitors hauled up from the wharf were being discharged from the hacks and we were studying them as they passed into the hotel.

My eye fell on one of them and it made my love-laden heart stop beating. Madelaine saw my sudden emotion.

"What is the matter, John, dear?" she exclaimed in affright.

I could not find words at that moment, but she followed my fixed stare with her terrified glances until she, too, saw the cause of my attack of momentary paralysis.



She gave a scream and threw herself fainting in my arms.

She gave a scream and threw herself, fainting, in my arms.

There, among the new arrivals, stood Charles Newkirk, back from the grave in which I had so recently placed him.

"What does this mean, Newkirk?" I demanded as savagely as I could when I recovered a part of my senses.

Whatever answer he made was lost to me, for at that moment Madelaine's mother came shrieking to her daughter's aid. A score of other women rushed in upon me. I surrendered my fainting loved one to their more skillful attentions, and extricating myself from the hysterical concourse, I went to meet Newkirk face to face. Madelaine was mine at last and I had nothing to fear from him. As her protector I felt it to be my plain duty to punish him for his impertinent intrusion.

He was gone from the veranda. I went into the hotel rotunda looking for him, but he was not there. I went to the clerk's desk.

"Where did that insolent fellow go?" I demanded.

"Whom do you mean?" asked the apprehensive clerk.

"Why that fellow Newkirk."

"They have gone to their room."

"They? Who are they? Newkirk is the only one I want."

"I mean Mr. and Mrs. Newkirk. They just arrived—on their wedding trip, I believe."

I looked at the hotel register and there was Newkirk's familiar handwriting tracing the words:

"Charles Newkirk and wife."

"Shall I send up your card?" asked the clerk.

"No; I guess I have made a mistake," I said softly.

Then I hurried back to see if Madelaine had recovered. She was sitting beside her mother looking pale. I sat on the other side of her. She leaned over to me with a faded expression in her erstwhile lustrous eyes.

"Was it his ghost, John?" she asked in a hoarse whisper.

"No, dear, that was his wife you saw with him," I said calmly.

"But you told me he was dead," she said, with a tone of deep injury in her voice.

"Well, aren't you more surprised to hear that he is married?"

"Why, no. He told me he was going East to marry some other girl when I jilted him the week before last."

Iron Melted in Five Minutes.

A European inventor recently performed a remarkable experiment in the laboratory of Thomas A. Edison at Orange, N. J. He placed a cup half full of a chemical in a crucible and covered it with a small quantity of powdered aluminum. He then placed an iron wrench about half an inch thick and six inches long in the crucible. Touching a match to the compound, the mixture blazed furiously, and in five seconds the iron wrench was melted. It was estimated that the heat evolved in the process was 3,000 degrees centigrade, hitherto considered impossible to reach. The inventor keeps the nature of his chemical compound a secret.

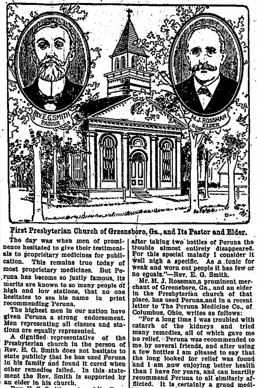
We Hold Famous Jewels.

Some of the most famous jewels in the world are in the possession of American women. Mrs. Bradley Martin has some of the French crown jewels and so has Mrs. Astor. One diamond ornament belonging to Mrs. Astor was once the property of Diane de Poictiers. The Duchess of Marlborough has the famous Orloff pearls which once adorned the neck of Empress Catherine of Russia. They were given to her by her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Mrs. Clarence Mackay has some curious rings which once shown on the fingers of a Hindoo rajah, and Mrs. George Vanderbilt has a rope of rubies unsurpassed by anything of the kind in the world.—New York Press.

Irish Rivers Dark-Colored.

The rivers of the Emerald Isle have generally a dark color, owing to the fact that most of them, at some point in their course, flow through peat marshes or beds, which impart a dark hue to the water.

PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR PRAISES PE-RU-NA



First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, Ga., and Its Pastor and Elder.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true today of most people. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

A dignified representative of the Presbyterian church in the person of Rev. E. G. Smith does not hesitate to state publicly that he has used Peruna in his family and found it cured when other remedies failed. In this statement the Rev. Smith is supported by an elder in his church.

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"Having used Peruna in my family for some time it gives me pleasure to testify to its true worth. My little boy seven years of age had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific. As a tonic for weak and worn out people it has few or no equals."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Mr. M. J. Rosman, a prominent merchant of Greensboro, Ga., and an elder in the Presbyterian church of that place, has used Peruna and in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, writes as follows:

"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and tried many remedies, all of which gave me no relief. Peruna was recommended to me by several friends, and after using a few bottles I am pleased to say that the long looked for relief was found and I am now enjoying better health than I have for years, and can heartily recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted. It is certainly a grand medicine."—M. J. Rosman.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

YOU HAVE CHILDREN.

Then, of Course, You Wish Them to Be Well Bred—Some Things They Should Be Taught.

Little children should be taught not to sit sideways or on the edges of chairs, or to lean back in them, or to put their elbows on the table.

They should not be permitted to play with bread or stray silver, and should be taught to wipe their little mouths both before and after drinking, and not to drink until they have swallowed what they may be eating.

Do not allow the little ones to turn up their glasses or mugs to their noses while drinking.

Show them how to break a potato with a fork; how to carry a fork to the mouth. Teach them to take soup quietly from the side of the spoon.

Watch them and see that they do not put their spoons and forks too far into their mouths, and that they do not crowd the mouth with food.

Little children are great mimics, and after they have been once properly trained in table manners, commit fewer breaches of etiquette than their elders.—Home Chat.

"Yes," replied the fair pastor.

ALL HOPES ARE GONE

QUEEN VICTORIA'S DEATH EXPECTED AT ANY MOMENT.

Aged Sovereign of Great Britain at Death's Door — Severe Sinking Spell Accompanied by an Increase of Paralytic Symptoms—Artificial Methods Employed to Prolong Life—Emperor William of Germany Goes to His Grandmother's Bedside — Prince of Wales in Ill Health.

Cowes, Jan. 21, 7:50 a. m.—The queen is still alive, but all hopes are gone. Her majesty is unconscious and the end is expected at any moment.

-o-

London, Jan. 21, 8:25 a. m.—A special train left the Victoria station for Osborne at 8 o'clock this morning with Emperor William, the prince of Wales, the duke of York and the Duke of Connaught aboard.

-o-

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 21.—A collapse, or what the physicians feared was a collapse, occurred unexpectedly about 10 o'clock last evening. Arrangements were hurriedly made to provide special telegraphic and telephonic facilities. Details are not obtainable at this hour, but it is asserted that the queen's condition is chiefly due to a severe, sinking spell and an increase of the Paralytic Symptoms.

It is understood that the physicians have resorted to artificial methods to prolong life such as are used only in cases of persons in extremis.

The Associated Press learns that the paralysis is chiefly in the face, one side of which appears to have lost all nerve and muscular power. At 8 o'clock last evening the malady had not reached the vital organs, although it had naturally caused an almost total loss of the power of speech. What was so much feared was that the brain might be attacked. Keenly sensitive to her affliction and appearance the queen has absolutely refused to see any one but her nurses and doctors, and it is understood that the prince of Wales was the only exception to this rule, and that his interview with the queen lasted but a few minutes. Hence the exact is known only to a very few, and it is the royal wish that the public should not be informed of the existence of paralysis. Arrangements have been made with a local undertaker to have all the preliminaries to burial ready in case of emergency.

The departure of the prince of Wales for London shortly after 12 o'clock to meet Emperor William was quietly accomplished. The queen had been informed of the kaiser's coming and had signified her desire that the prince should go to meet him. Rather against his will the man who for the moment was practically the king of England, obeyed his mother's wishes. It was said the queen wanted the emperor to postpone his visit to Osborne house as she did not wish to receive him in her present condition. Apparently in her lucid moments she believed she would be able to conquer the dread disease which has fastened itself upon her.

Emperor William Arrives.

London, Jan. 21. — Throughout the United Kingdom yesterday was a Sunday of anxiety and suspension. No one outside the circle of the court knew the real condition of the queen or the nature of her illness. The universal question was whether death was imminent. The London newspapers had not learned that her majesty had suffered a shock of paralysis.

Crowds assembled to witness the arrival of Emperor William. Apart from such incidents, however, the customary quiet of a London Sunday was not disturbed. The most alarming reports of the day came in the form of telegrams from the princess and others at Osborne house. The coming of Emperor William and the news that King Leopold was about starting for London inspired fears that death was near at hand. On the other hand the fact that the Prince of Wales was able to leave Osborne house had An Encouraging Effect.

When the prince arrived at London station at 4 o'clock several hundred people were there to greet him. But there was no demonstration except a respectful doffing of hats.

The government had arranged to send the fast cruiser Minerva to bring Emperor William, but he embarked on a mail packet before he learned of the plans, being accompanied by the duke of Connaught. The steamship had a rough passage and on entering Sheerness harbor she went by the warships without any ceremonies. Admiral Kennedy and Count von Mirbach of the German embassy, received the emperor and escorted him to a special waiting room.

Two hours before his majesty's train was due in London people began to gather about Charing Cross station. The crowd included not only the usual hangers on, but many fashionable people and hundreds of Germans anxious to see the emperor on his first appearance in London for years.

The prince of Wales arrived just before the train entered the station at 6:20 p. m. The duke of York, Prince Christian, Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein and Prince Arthur of Connaught completed the group of royal personages.

In Mournful Silence.

Emperor William stepped out of a saloon car, wearing a traveling suit. He saluted the prince of Wales by kissing him on both cheeks, and the prince returned a similar salutation. He then embraced the duke of York and shook hands with the others. The people looked on as the carriages drove off, uncovering their heads, and the emperor and prince of Wales acknowledged the courtesy by raising their hats. No cheers broke the mournful silence. The crowd in the vicinity of Buckingham palace maintained the same demeanor when the emperor and prince of Wales entered the ground.

At 10 p. m. the prince of Wales began a conversation with Osborne house which lasted nearly an hour. As a result of this the emperor and prince decided to start for Osborne this morning. Orders were given that a royal yacht should be kept in waiting to convey them to the Isle of Wight.

ALBERT EDWARD'S HEALTH.

Serious Indisposition Causes Much Anxiety.

London, Jan. 21.—In the closing days of Queen Victoria's life another serious portend arises, namely, the serious indisposition of the prince of Wales. With worry and anxiety so ill was he last evening that he could not immediately respond to the summons from Osborne house. The most his physician could do was to promise that he could leave to-day at 8 o'clock. The more noteworthy is that the London papers to-day do not make even a veiled hint that the queen has had a paralytic stroke. Pages are devoted to the mournful scenes at Osborne house and to descriptions of happenings here as well as to messages from the colonies and foreign countries testifying to sympathy everywhere evoked. According to the Daily Telegraph Emperor William has expressed a desire to be received at Osborne house not as emperor but as grandson. He said on hearing of the queen's illness: "I am my grandmother's eldest grandson and my mother is unable from illness to hasten to her bedside."

ROTHSCHILD IN A DUEL.

Wounds His Opponent Severely in the Arm.

Paris, Jan. 21. — The long-expected duel between the Count de Lubersac and Baron Robert de Rothschild was fought with swords at 11 o'clock yesterday morning on Baron Edmond de Rothschild's estate at Boulogne dur Seine. The carriages of the principals, seconds, doctors and a few friends arrived there from Paris shortly before 11 o'clock. Count de Lubersac's seconds were M. Schlege and Count de Laborde, and those of Baron de Rothschild were Baron Leonino and Viscount de Bondy. The duel began at 11 and lasted ten minutes, when Count de Lubersac received a lunge, perforating his arm from the elbow to the armpit. The duel was then stopped. Both the count and the baron fought most determinedly; neither flinched and neither showed the slightest desire to spare the other. Sixteen engagements took place, all of a desperate character. The combatants attacked each other furiously. The sleeves of their shirts were literally torn to pieces by the points of their swords, as the duelists repeatedly lunged at each other. Several times they came to close quarters and their seconds were obliged to separate them.

A violent quarrel followed. Brill finally pulled a revolver and shot Weir just above the heart.

Many American Officers Sick.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Reports from the Philippines indicate a great deal of sickness prevailing among both naval and army officers on duty in the archipelago. Long terms of duty in these islands are likely to impair the most robust constitution, according to the views of army and naval medical officers, and a limitation of duty tours in the Philippines to a period of two years is advocated.

CLAPP THE WINNER

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS MAKES HIM THE CANDIDATE.

Will Take the Place in the United States Senate Made Vacant by the Death of Senator C. K. Davis—Tawney's Followers Decide the Contest—Withdraws on Fifteenth Ballot and Supporters Jump to Successful Man — Speakers' Vote Decides.

St. Paul, Jan. 21.—Former Attorney General Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul was chosen as the Republican caucus nominee for the place in the United States senate made vacant by the death of C. K. Davis, Saturday afternoon, after one of the hardest contests in the history of the state. Six candidates remained in the contest and received votes for fifteen ballots, and as many others were looked on as possible nominees.

Friday night, in a caucus lasting four and a half hours, fourteen ballots were cast, the final one showing no material change from the first. The caucus then took a recess until 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and the work was continued at that time. Only five of the 140 Republicans were absent and all were represented by proxies.

Tawney Releases Men From Pledges.

The first ballot of the day, the fifteenth of the contest, showed a gain of three for Clapp and the loss of the same number for Evans. However, that ballot was never announced. Earlier in the afternoon Mr. Tawney had told his friends he would release them from their pledges, but they announced that they would continue to vote for him. This ballot showed them all in line, but before the vote was footed Senator Lord announced a desire to change from Tawney to Evans. He was quickly followed by others, but Senator McArthur announced his change from Tawney to Clapp, others making like statements, Clapp getting most of the Tawney vote.

Speaker Casts Deciding Vote.

Speaker Dowling, in the chair, realizing the nearness of a decision, cast the seventy-first Clapp vote, that being the number to select. Other changes followed, and then Representative Sherman Smith of the Evans forces moved to make the nomination of Clapp unanimous. This motion was carried, and a committee was sent after the winning and defeated candidates, who addressed the caucus.

Career of M. E. Clapp.

Moses E. Clapp is forty-nine years of age. He was born in Delphi, Ind. When he was seven years of age his parents moved to Wisconsin. He secured his common school education in Hudson and graduated from the Wisconsin Law School in 1873. He moved to Fergus Falls, Minn., in 1880, where he took up the practice of law, permanently locating in St. Paul in 1891. Mr. Clapp was elected attorney general of the state in 1886, 1888 and 1890, and has always been prominent in politics. He was candidate for the Republican nomination for governor in 1896, but was defeated by Gov. Clough. He enjoys a large law practice. He is an orator of ability and is familiarly known as the "Black Eagle of Minnesota."

The remains are reported to have been horribly mangled.

The judge informed the father he could give his boy a good thrashing at the police station in the presence of the humane officer, or submit to his being sent to jail for thirty days. The father chose to give his boy the whipping, and it was administered to the satisfaction of the officer.

MONEY WAS RECOVERED.

Hampton, Iowa, Jan. 21. — A registered mail package containing $2,000 was last Monday taken from the mail car on a side track of the Chicago Great Western railway here. Postoffice Inspectors W. M. Ketcham of Marshalltown and C. E. Stewart of Iowa City, after a three days' investigation, were unable to locate the theft. Finally Saturday evening Inspector Ketcham and Sheriff Watt and Postoffice Clerk Morey found the money in the cellar of Jack Hanson, a brakeman of the Chicago Great Western. He was arrested and has confessed.

D., of Minneapolis. The church is a handsome red pressed brick structure, trimmed with brown stone and cost, with furnishings, $8,000.

May Be Postoffice Robbers.

Vermillion, S. D., Jan. 21.—Postoffice Inspector C. L. Morris of Sioux Falls is of the opinion that the three men recently arrested for holding up a saloon and killing the proprietor at Snyder, Neb., are the ones who recently robbed the postoffice at Komstad, in this (Clay) county, and who over a year ago robbed the Dalesburg postoffice. For the latter robbery two of the men were arrested, but afterward broke jail and made their escape.

Minnesota Concern Wins.

Stillwater, Minn., Jan. 21.—The Minnesota Thresher Manufacturing company has been advised that the United States court of appeals had filed a decision favorable to the company in the action brought for infringement of a patent. The amount involved was over $2,000,000, of which the Stillwater company gets one-half. The action was against all of the leading thresher companies of the country, and was bitterly fought.

The family is in a serious condition.

Troops No Longer Needed.

Corbin, Ky., Jan. 20.—The presence of the soldiers here had a quieting effect upon the citizens of Corbin yesterday and last night the troops, being no longer needed, withdrew. While members of the Whites and Shotwells are still in Corbin under arms they are not being interfered with by the soldiers as they say they have no intention of precipitating trouble. With the arrest and removal to Williamsburg jail of five members of the Shotwells and Rolla White, who shot the father of the Shotwell boys, no further trouble is anticipated.

Paving With Cannon Balls.

Washington, Jan. 20.—A private letter from China says that the soldiers at Tien-tsin are using the cannon balls in the arsenals to pave the roads. They have found an enormous quantity of iron shot and shell of different sizes, which some ingenius Yankee suggested would be a good substitute for paving stones. The authorities in command adopted the idea, and with the aid of a steam roller they made a very good road.

SHIPYARD STRIKE.

Likely to Delay Work on Some of Uncle Sam's War Vessels.

New York, Jan. 20.—A strike in the Nixon shipyards at Elizabeth, N. J., threatens to tie up the yard and delay the government work now in progress on ships for the navy, besides a number of private contracts, including five submarine boats. The strike took place because nine non-union carpenters were employed. A delegation of four men, representing the carpenters, painters, joiners and calkers, waited on Mr. Nixon and asked if he would not discharge the men. He refused to treat with the men, and instead of discharging the non-union men, discharged the delegates. This action greatly incensed the men and they went on strike.

POLICE OFFICER RESCUED.

Officer A. C. Swanson of the Council Bluffs Force Tells an Interesting Story.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 19, 1901.—(Special.)—Kindhearted Officer Swanson of the local police force is very popular in the city. He has lived here for seventeen years, and has enjoyed many high offices in social and society work. He is now Vice-President of the "Dannebrog" Brotherhood, the largest Danish secret society in America, which combines benevolent with the social features. Owing to the constant exposure and many hours on his feet, which his duty as a police officer makes unavoidable, Mr. Swanson became the victim of serious Kidney and Liver Trouble. He was very bad, but has entirely recovered. He gives the story in his own words, as follows:

"I have been a sufferer for many years with Kidney and Liver Trouble, and have tried many remedies, some of which gave me temporary relief, and others which were absolutely worthless. I began to think that there was no help for me, when my nephew gave me part of a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills which he had left, saying that it would do no harm to try them, as they had certainly fixed him all right. What he gave me helped me so much that I felt justified in purchasing more, and I grew slowly better. It took almost two months to effect a complete cure, as mine was a very bad case, but I can cheerfully and truthfully say that I am a well man to-day, and am very grateful that Dodd's Kidney Pills were thus brought to my notice."

The wonderful cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills in Iowa have created quite a sensation in some parts of the state. There does not seem to be any case of Lame Back, Rheumatism, Kidney or Bladder Trouble which these wonderful Pills cannot cure. They are certainly popular here, and the sale through the local druggists is very large.

THE LEGISLATURE

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 15. — Mr. Johnson of Hennepin introduced at last night's session of the house a bill providing for a change in the law providing for the burial by the state of the bodies of old soldiers who die in straightened circumstances. The change proposed by Mr. Johnson will make the law applicable to veterans of the Spanish-American war. Mr. Johnson asked for a suspension of the rules to enable the bill to be put upon its final reading at once. Objection was made and the bill went to the committee on general legislation.

Ninety-seven of the 119 members were in their seats when the house was called to order. Mr. Dowling announced that he would make public his committee appointments this morning, and the next half hour was employed in receiving bills and resolutions. Messrs. Deming and Roberts (Hennepin) introduced a half-dozen bills providing for minor changes in the pinting of official and samble election ballots, and Mr. Dunn (Ramsey) offered a trio, each providing changes of minor importance in the mortgage laws.

In the Senate.

The senate received a petition last night from residents of Wright county that was the first step in a movement to secure amendatory laws remedying the defects in the game and fish code. The petition asks that the shipment and sale of ducks geese and other wild aquatic fowl may be prohibited in the fall as well as in the spring, and that some effective means of its enforcement be provided. Senator Young submitted the petition and it was referred to the game and fish committee.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—A bill which provides for the application of the Hennepin county primary election law to every county in the state was introduced in the house yesterday morning and formed the single feature of the brief session.

Representative Hogan introduced a bill making a new schedule of fees for sheriffs. Ten other bills of minor importance were introduced and referred.

Speaker Dowling announced his committee appointments. The following are the important committees with their chairmen:

Appropriations, Jacobson; banks, Barteau; binding twine, Haugen; claims, Grass; commerce, Feeney; corporations, other than municipal, Stevenson; crimes and punishments, Ofsthun; elections, Dobbyn; drainage, Berg; general legislation, Torson; judiciary, Allen; legislative expenses, Larson; municipal legislation, Jackson; public buildings, Smith; railroads, Ferris; state prison, Sweet; temperance, Ward; ways and means, Swanson.

In the Senate.

Lieut. Gov. Smith announced the senate committees at the opening of the session. With several unimportant changes the committees remain as they were two years ago.

Senator McGill heads the committee on taxes and tax laws in place of Senator Greer, chairman at the last session. Senator Somerville becomes chairman of the committee on corporations and Senator Roverud takes the head of the committee on legislative expenses in place of Senator Sivright. The judiciary committee remains practically the same, except that Senator McCarthy takes the place of Senator Benedict.

Senator Greer introduced a bill placing teachers of the state university, normals, independent and special school districts on a civil service basis after two years of successful teaching, only to permit of their removal for cause.

Senator Underleak introduced a bill to permit wives to bring suits for divorce in their own names. These and other bills introduced were referred to the judiciary committee.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 17.—The house listened to the first reading of fifteen bills yesterday morning and adjourned without doing anything whatever inside of forty minutes after Chaplain Lewis of the senate had offered the invocation.

Some of the bills introduced were of considerable interest. The most important of the lot was the bill introduced by Mr. Bush providing for the use of "ferrets" for discovering and causing to be placed on the assessment rolls property that is concealed. The bill is identical with the Iowa law, which provides that county commissioners shall be empowered to employ persons to search for concealed property, and ordains that the person who reports concealed property and causes it to be placed on the roll for taxation shall be paid 15 per cent of the amount of taxes received on such property.

Mr. Sweet introduced a bill amending the law against kidnapping, the practical effect of which will be to raise the limit of imprisonment for the offense from ten to twenty years.

Mr. Smith offered a bill creating the office of fire marshal.

Mr. Plowman introduced a bill which has been turned down by the judiciary committee heretofore. It provides that the register of deeds shall make a return each year of the mortgages and other evidences of wealth registered, and that the assessor shall assess the same for the purposes of taxation.

The other bills were local in their character.

In the Senate.

A short but busy session was the record of the senate yesterday morning.

The ball was started rolling with the presentation of a resolution which had passed the house for the appointment of a joint apportionment committee of fourteen members of the house and seven of the senate. The resolution was tabled.

Several important bills were presented, among which were the following: By Senator Johnson, to legalise employment by counties of "tax ferrets;" by Senator Wilson, to submit to the voters at the next general election the question of whether or not a constitutional convention be held to revise the Minnesota constitution; referred to judiciary committee.

Other bills were introduced and referred to their respective committees, as follows: For immediate election of secretaries to act as treasurers at library association organizations; to permit filing of bills of sale with town clerks; to permit A. O. U. W. and M. W. A. lodges to incorporate; to legalize mortgage foreclosures when location of property is in doubt.

The senate then adjourned.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 18. — Senator Miller caused some little stir by presenting a resolution calling for an investigation committee composed of two members of the senate and three of the house to ascertain how a discrepancy occurred in a bill passed by the legislature of 1899 between the time it was passed and the time it was presented to the governor. The bill in question provided for a 4 1-2 per cent tax on express companies in the form it was passed by the legislature. When it reached the governor the tax had been mysteriously increased to 5 per cent. Senators Miller and Roberts were appointed for the senate on the investigating committee.

Senator Greer offered a bill providing for the drainage of state capitol lands in Kandiyohi county, the expense to be met by leasing the lands.

Senator Snyder presented a measure to establish a state board of control to manage all state institutions, a duplicate of the bill presented in the house. It was referred to the finance committee.

Other bills offered included: By Senator Grue, making fire insurance policies valid when notes for premiums habe passed maturity; permitting township insurance companies to insure creameries within their respective town limits. By Senator Wilson, to have record kept of all log markings in the Second district. By Senator Thompson, requiring telephone companies to get permission from town supervisors before constructing lines through respective towns. By Senator Wilson, giving landlords right of re-entry if lessees do not pay rent.

In the House.

J. H. Burns introduced a bill in the house which provides that when a telegraph or telephone company, "or any other person," is furnished with the written consent of the supervisors of the town he, or they, shall be permitted to use the highways and roads for the purposes of erecting poles and stringing wires without regard to the owners of the contiguous land.

It is supposed that the bill would, if it became a law, open up the way to a good many things that are not indicated in the text of the bill.

Mr. Hurd of Ramsey introduced a bill to put the office of state oil inspector on a salary basis.

Mr. Sweet introduced a bill putting all county officers on a four-year term basis.

G. W. Armstrong of Hennepin has a bill which provides for an eight-hour day for all labor.

Mr. Bush introduced a bill making train wrecking or robbing an offense of the first-class and prescribing life imprisonment as the limit of punishment and fixing the minimum punishment at twenty years.

NEW LINE TO MANILA.

Freight Steamers to Be Put Into Service From Seattle in April.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 19.—The Colonial Steamship Company of New York and Seattle announces the establishment of a line of freight steamers between Seattle and Manila, with the first sailing some time in April. Three steamships will be put on the route and a regular monthly schedule is to be arranged. A second line is already planned here by the China Mutual Steamship company, and definite announcement of its establishment is expected. The ships will carry grain, lumber, supplies and manufactured articles from Puget sound, and will bring back hemp and hardwood. The quartermaster's department is arranging for a regular service of immense transports from Seattle to Manila. The Samoa, a 10,000-ton ship, has been purchased and will arrive from Hongkong within the next sixty days. Two other ships will also be put on the run. They will carry animals and supplies for the land forces in the Orient.

DUKE'S NATIONALITY.

This Is Where the Hitch Is in Regard to Wilhelmina's Marriage.

New York, Jan. 19.—A dispatch from Amsterdam says: The Amsterdam Gazette publishes two of the measures contained in Queen Wilhelmina's marriage bill. The first gives the approval of the states general and the Dutch people to the marriage; the second provides £12,500 a year for Duke Henry in the event of his becoming a widower. A third measure concerns the nationality of the duke. Here is a difficulty, for the duke wishes to become a Netherlander, but, at the same time to retain his own nationality. This is contrary to Dutch law, and should the duke persist, all arrangements for the marriage may fall through. The duke is bound to conform to the law, which cannot be altered. In the event of his refusal a serious hitch will ensue which will at least postpone the marriage indefinitely.

HUMANE NONSENSE.

A Petition to Prevent Sales of Horses and Mules for Army Purposes.

Boston, Jan. 19.—The directors of the American Humane Education society and Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of cruelty to animals, have voted to petition congress to take measures to prevent the further shipment of American horses and mules for use by the British army in South Africa, in consideration of of the terrible suffering of American horses and mules shipped from American ports for use by the British army in South Africa.

Food Shortage in Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 19.—Edward N. Carpenter, the last man out from the Tanana district, says there is a great shortage of food at Circle City, and that the government officials at Eagle City are sending provisions in as amply as possible. On his way out he met many teams laden with supplies for the famine threatened district. Lack of provisions is also retarding mining operations in the Tanana district.

Trying a Donkey.

A newcomer in Africa has many surprises. A. B. Lloyd, the author of "Dwarf Land and Cannibal Country," narrates an amusing little experience of his own in purchasing a donkey in Zanzibar:

We had to procure donkeys, by no means an easy task. Of course each one had to be tried, as we were to use them for riding purposes, and in the course of the work we had various experiences. I had set my mind upon a fine female donkey and took her out for an afternoon's ride. I shall not forget it. At first when I mounted her she would not move, in spite of all my most tender persuasions, and finally she began to back.

Now, the streets of Zanzibar are very narrow, and coming up behind me was a large bullock wagon. My sweet tempered donkey backed right on to the horns of the bullocks. Then it was no longer a case of making her go, but of making her stop.

Away she flew, right along the Naza Moja road, and nothing I could do would check her headlong career. In fact, I soon tired of trying and let her go. On she went, right in among the coconnut trees, regardless of everything until she came to a steep bank. Here she stopped. This showed that she had good sense, and I decided to keep her.

Queer Oaths.

The Isle of Man, like the soldier in Jacque's familiar speech, is "full of strange oaths." Mr. Shee, Q. C., before beginning his judicial duties as special commissioner in connection with the Dunbell case was required to swear that he would administer justice as impartially "as the herring's backbone doth lie in the middle of the fish." The Isle of Man is not the only place in the world in which the animal kingdom plays a part in the making of oaths. One of the many modes in which Chinese witnesses are impressed with the importance of telling the truth is slicing off the head of a fowl, a ceremony which is supposed to represent the unhappy fate of the perjurer. Many Indian witnesses were sworn on tigers' skins, in the belief that if they defile their lips with lies their bodies will become food for tigers, while others stand on lizards' skins and ask that their bodies shall be covered with the scales of the reptiles if they fail to tell the truth. A Norwegian witness asks that his meadows and cattle shall be cursed if he swears falsely. "Cursed be my cattle," he exclaims, "my beasts, my sheep, so that after this day they may never thrive or benefit me; yea, cursed may I be and everything I possess."—London Globe.

Knew He Loved Her.

Mrs. Duncan Stewart described Lady Beaconsfield as originally a factory girl. Mr. Lewis first saw her going to her factory, beautiful and with bare feet. He educated her and married her, died and left her very rich, and then she married Disraeli. When asked why she married her second husband, she would say, as if it was a feather in her cap, "My dear, he made love to me while my first husband was alive, and therefore I knew that he really loved me."—Augustus J. C. Hare's Recollections.

NOT DRIED CURRANTS

A LEARNED GROCER COMMENTS UPON A COMMON MISTAKE.

The Tiny Fruit Used In Cake, Puddings, Buns and the Like Are Raisins Made From Little Grapes That Are Grown In Greece.

"Mother wants a pound of dried currants," said a little girl who came into the learned grocer's store in Eighth avenue.

"I hain't got a dried currant in the store and there hain't none in the city," replied the learned grocer. "But I know what you want, sissy, and I've got 'em."

The learned grocer brought forth a box of the little, sticky, sugary, gritty currants used in fruit cake, plum puddings, mince pies, buns and the like.

"Why, them's 'em!" exclaimed the little girl.

"Yes; them's 'em," assented the grocer, "and if the Grecian maiden who trod this particular lot of 'em into shipshape had used a little water or even a feather duster on her feet before she began there wouldn't be so much grit in 'em as there is. She must have been having a regular hoedown on the classic sands before she began to dance on this box of fruit. There, sissy; tell your mother she must bathe 'em in several waters before she uses 'em, or she might just as well put a lot of sandpaper in her fruit cake. And tell her that they ain't dried currants either."

"What's the reason they ain't dried currants?" demanded a disputative customer when the girl had gone.

"They ain't dried currants any more than they are dried pumpkins," replied the grocer. "The reason they ain't dried currants is that they weren't currants before they were dried. Good reason enough, ain't it?"

"Yes," said the customer, less disputative than he was. "But what does everybody call them dried currants for then?"

"'Cause they don't know any better," said the learned grocer. "They'll go right on coming in here and asking for dried currants just the same after I tell 'em why they ain't dried currants as they did before."

"What should they ask for, then?" inquired the customer.

"If any man should come in here and ask for dried corinths," replied the learned grocer, "he would not necessarily be a gentleman, but I'd bet on him being a scholar. Dried corinths is what you should ask for when you want this little sugar coated, gritty raisin, for it's a raisin pure and simple."

"How's that?" the customer wanted to know.

"Because it was a grape before it was dried," said the grocer, "and if raisins ain't grapes what are they?"

"But you said these were dried corinths," persisted the customer. "What's a corinth, anyhow?"

"A corinth is the smallest grape that grows," replied the learned grocer, "and it lost its name years and years ago because it was gradually corrupted into 'currant,' which became also the name of the acidulated little berry of our garden, which you might dry from now until Gabriel sounds his horn without getting it nearer the condition of a raisin than a pea is.

"This little grape grows all over the islands of the Grecian archipelago and was first exported from Corinth, and that's what gave it its proper name. The bunches don't grow much bigger than a stem of red currants, and they are so full of sugar that when they are picked and dried in the sun they actually seem to melt and run together like gumdrops, and it takes a lot of care and work to separate them again.

"After they are separated is the time when the Grecian maiden gets her work in on 'em, for it is one of her pleasant duties to jump on a heap of the sticky stuff with her bare feet until she has compressed enough of the little raisins to squeeze three boxes of them into one. No hydraulic pump could do it better. If it could, we wouldn't have the sand and grit the maiden's feet mingle with the fruit, and without that no dried corinths are genuine.

"Still, I shall expect folks to come in here right along and ask for dried currants just the same," said the learned grocer as he went to wait on a new customer.—New York Press.

Pitch and Toss.

The professor happened in at the doctor's the other morning and found him polishing the belongings on the sideboard.

"Improving the shining hours, are you?" he said.

"No, sir," replied the doctor. "I'm improving the shining ewers."

"H'm!" ejaculated the professor. "Whose are they?"

"They're ours."

"Well, isn't that what I said?"—Chicago Tribune.

Each Great in His Own Way.

They tell a story about John Sherman and Bob Fitzsimmons, the prizefighter. During his triumphal tour after he had downed Corbett the great gladiator was in Washington and called at the state department. Then was seen a contest between brain and brawn, head and hands. Fitzsimmons looked sheepish and ill at ease, but Mr. Sherman evidently tried to make him feel at home.

"Your recent contest was a severe one, I believe, Mr. Fitzsimmons?" he said.

Mr. Fitzsimmons uttered a couple of inaudible words and grinned.

"It seemed to have pretty thoroughly aroused the country, the contest, did it not?"

Mr. Fitzsimmons scrutinized the brim of his hat attentively, blushed, grinned and said:

"The United States is a fine country, your honor," and backed out of the office, responding with short, sharp ducks of the head to the secretary of state's farewell bows. When the doors had closed upon the then world's champion, the wrinkles at the sides of Mr. Sherman's eyes contracted into a smile.

"A great man that, Babcock," he said dryly to his secretary, and went on with his work.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Custom Influences Language.

Pomologists, like botanists, find it impossible to enforce the rules of priority in names of fruits and flowers. In fruits the names of Bartlett for a pear and Telegraph for a grape have not been changed in spite of the efforts of leading pomologists and pomological societies to support prior names. Those who lead in these good efforts forget that the only law for language is the law of custom. In a famous grammar we are told "the English language requires the pronoun 'it' for all inanimate objects," but custom has so firmly made the sun a he and the moon a she that we have accept it. Thus it will ever be. To secure the adoption of a prior name reformers must bestir themselves before custom gets possession of the field.—Meehan's Monthly.

Care In Powder Mills.

The garments of workers in powder mills are pocketless, so that they cannot carry knives or matches, or indeed anything, and are made of noninflammable material. No one is allowed to go about with trousers turned up at the bottom, because grit is collected in that way and the merest hard speck

Whereas, At a session of the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota, held July 21st, 1900 a petition signed by Laurent Gagner, and other land owners, whose lands were liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the work proposed therein, praying for the establishment and construction of a public drainage ditch along a route described therein, accompanied by a bond duly approved, as provided by law, was filed with the County Auditor of said County; and it appearing by proper evidence to the satisfaction of said Board of County Commissioners that at least thirty (30) days' notice has been given of the pendency of said petition and of the time at which the same would be heard, as by law provided, whereupon the said Board did, at its session on the 21st day of July A. D. 1900 proceed to hear and determine said petition; and said Board having determined that the construction of such ditch would be of public benefit and utility, and conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare, we did accept said petition, and thereupon, did appoint as viewers of said proposed work, three (3) resident freeholders of said Red Lake County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and are not of kin to any of the parties interested therein, and directed them to meet preparatory to commencing their duties as such viewers, at the residence of said petitioner in said County, at one o'clock p. m. on the 27th day of September 1900, and certified copies of the said petition and order of said Board appointing them as said viewers was issued to and served upon said viewers as by law provided, as will more fully appear from the certificate of service of Charles Sampson as Sheriff of said County, now on file in the office of the County Auditor of said County, they proceeded, at the time set in said order, to make an accurate survey of the line of said proposed drainage ditch from its source to its outlet, and did cause stakes to be placed along said line at each 100 feet, as numbered progressing downstream from its source, and made and filed a report thereof; and reported that said drainage ditch would be of public utility and in their said report made the necessary computations and assessments, description of location, the land through which the same would pass, the names of the owners, and the damages or allowances thereto, the expense attending such work, and all the estimates by law required, duly sworn to as by law required.

And the Auditor of said Red Lake County did, after the filing of said report, cause a notice to be given, to be published, posted and mailed, as by law provided, of the pendency of said petition and of the time and place set for the hearing thereof.

Now, Therefore, We, the Board of County Commissioners of said County of Red Lake having met in session, at the time set for the hearing of said petition, to-wit, the 7th day of January 1901 and adjourned to the 9th day of January 1901 and proceeded to hear the same, and having found that the report of said viewers is made according to the provisions of law, and that the proposed drainage ditch to be of public utility, and conducive to public health, or of public benefit and convenience, and, from the evidence before us, that the estimated benefits of said work are greater than its total cost, including damages awarded, do hereby locate and establish the said drainage ditch according to the report of said viewers appointed and acting as aforesaid: which said report, together with the plats and exhibits accompanying the same is hereby referred to and made a part hereof for greater particularity, as determining the location, width, depth and manner of construction of said proposed drainage ditch. And the said Board of County Commissioners having from said viewers' report and the evidence before them determined upon the benefits to be assessed and the damages to be awarded to the several tracts of land in said report described, do hereby assess benefits and award damages to the said lands: according to exhibit 4 of Terrebonne ditch now on file in the Auditors' office of said Red Lake County.

And it is further ordered that the damages awarded to the persons or corporations above named be paid out of the County Treasury, and that the Auditor and the Chairman of said Board cause warrants to be drawn on the Treasurer of said County and delivered to the persons entitled thereof, as provided by law.

How a Boy Measured a Tree.

He is not a boy in a book. He lives in our house. He seldom says anything remarkable. He eats oatmeal in large quantities and tears his trousers and goes through the toes of his boots and loses his cap and slams the doors and chases the cat just like any other boy. But he is remarkable, for he asks a few questions and does much thinking. If he does not understand, he whistles—an excellent habit on most occasions.

There was much whistling in our yard one summer. It seemed to be an all summer's performance. Near the end of the season, however, our boy announced the height of our tall maple to be 33 feet.

"Why how do you know?" was the general question.

"Measured it."

"How?"

"Footrule and yardstick."

"You didn't climb that tall tree?" his mother asked anxiously.

"No, mother; I just found the length of the shadow and measured that."

"But the length of the shadow changes."

"Yes, mother, but twice a day the shadows are just as long as things themselves. I've been trying it all summer. I drove a stick into the ground, and when the shadow was just as long as the stick I knew that the shadow of the tree would be just as long as the tree, and that's 33 feet."

"So that is what you have been whistling about all summer?"

"Did I whistle?" asked Tom.

Can She Be I?

Through many, many summers
I look, as through a glass,
And see a world of showers and flowers
And laughing children pass,
And in her big blue sunbonnet
One other little lass—

A lass who watched the swallows
Skim just beyond her hand
And where the flickers fled and sped
And nests of bang birds fanned
And felt those birds were fairy folk
On wing to fairyland.

In her warm fist she carried—
Trudging o'er hills and dales—
In tiny papers laid, and weighed
As if in fairy scales,
The salt that catches bobolinks
When sprinkled on their tails.

A little lass and wistful,
Who gazed up the far sky,
And reached for fairy things and wings
In vain and wondered why;
Poor little lass! I wonder still Could she be really I!

A Boy Preacher.

George Haines of Winfield, Pa., is a theological wonder. Aged but 9 years, he holds religious services every Sunday morning and preaches a sermon, his favorite texts being taken from the fourteenth chapter of St. John.

Young Haines is the son of Amos Haines, a well known merchant. In preaching he makes many striking gestures and evinces the greatest earnestness and enthusiasm.

Many stories are told of the lad's precocity by the townspeople. Almost from the moment he could talk George began to show unmistakable signs of a preacher's calling.

In Search of Honey.

It has been said that the busy bee will go as far as 12 miles in search of honey, but beekeepers declare this to be absurd. One states that the insect will die of starvation if it has to seek a hunting ground more than three miles from the hive. Some give the bee greater powers of endurance and allow that it may fly up to five or even six miles, although such journeys would be killing if regularly taken. As a rule, however, it is supposed bees find their supplies within a distance of two miles or so of their home.

A Lamp Roost.

Nellie was much interested in Aunt Mary's chandelier when she went to the city to stay with her, and when she went home she exclaimed:

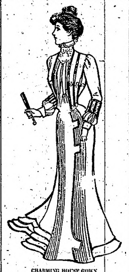
"Oh, mother, I do wish we had a place for our lamps to roost on like Aunt Mary has!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WOMAN AND FASHION.

A Smart Gown For the House—A Drab Serge Tailor Made Costume.

The sketch portrays a charming gown in old rose faced cloth. Perpendicular rows of black stitching adorn either side of the front, while the left side is further ornamented with a fancifully arranged fold of black satin and three fancy metal buttons. Two narrow shaped flounces bordered with black satin trim the lower edge, and one encircles the upper part.

The bodice opens in the middle of the front and is trimmed at the waist with a wide band of lace, over which pass the satin straps, extending from shoulders to belt, and enriched with buttons. In the interior is a narrow vest of tinsel brocade opening on a full plastron of white chiffon falling from a pointed yoke of white lace. The collar band is of the lace, while the turnover collar is of the brocade. The belt is of black satin almost covered with lace. The short bell sleeve of cloth is ornamented with a wide band of lace, with straps of satin crossing it and fastened down with the buttons. The full undersleeve is of plaited chiffon gathered into a cuff of brocade.—Philadelphia Ledger.



CHARMING HOUSE GOWN.

Winter Skirts.

Plain skirts are considered very smart, but that does not by any means signify that trimmed skirts have gone out of fashion. Quite the contrary, for the dressmakers are all busy turning out skirts that show the greatest quantity of fine work, and it really must needs tax the ingenuity of the designers to evolve so many new ideas all the time. A good illustration of this is shown in a satin and net gown that is made of a delicate shade of rose pink. The body of the skirt is of rose pink accordion plaited net trimmed with two wide bands of silk or satin of exactly the same shade cut in pointed scallops at both sides. The points of the scallops are held together with bands of pink ruching, and on the foot of the skirt between the points are large flowers of exactly the same shade of pink. The waist of the pink net has a fichu of the same and a dainty trimming of lace just in front, while a high draped belt of green velvet carries out the coloring of a pink rose, which was evidently the plan of the gown.—Harper's Bazar.

A Tailor Made Costume.

The tailor made costume represented is of drab serge, the skirt ornamented with two bands of violet taffetas running down the front and round the bottom. The collar and bands are faced with violet panne, and the corsage and sleeves are trimmed with violet taffetas.—Paris Herald.

NORSEMEN AT ODDS.

THE PRINCE REGENT OF NORWAY AND SWEDEN IN TROUBLE.

Gustave Is Disliked by the Norwegians, Who Seek Separation—Plausibility of Sweden's Contention—Revival of an Old Quarrel.

The spirit of unrest that sent the Norsemen of old to the ends of the earth—some say to America itself—is again manifesting itself in the ancient kingdom of Norway. The hardy Norwegians, who draw the breath of freedom from their mountains and fiords, are again agitating the question of breaking their unwelcome yoke with Sweden, their sister country.

The present agitation is due to the fact that the king of the dual monarchy, Oscar II, a scholarly and mild mannered man, is ill, and his son, Prince Gustave, has assumed the regency. Gustave is extremely unpopular in the Norwegian moiety of his realm owing to his determined resistance to the demands of the Norwegians for more independence in foreign and other affairs. The Swedes, with Prince Gustave at their head, say that the Norwegians having obtained an ell in having their separate flag granted want a yard and desire the complete separation of the two kingdoms. This they are determined not to grant, for they contend, with great show of reason, that the union of the two kingdoms is all that prevents their sharing the fate of Finland, that of being gobbled up by the Russian bear.

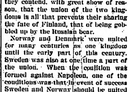
KING OSCAR OF SWEDEN.

Norway and Denmark were united for many centuries as one kingdom until the early part of this century. Sweden was also at one time a part of the union. When the coalition was formed against Napoleon, one of the conditions was that in event of success Sweden and Norway should be united under one king. The Norwegians offered resistance to this plan and elected as king the heir of the old royal line of Sweden. He proved incompetent, and the Swedish king, who was formerly Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte, became king as well of Norway. Each of the two halves of the monarchy retained its own constitution and was in fact autonomous. The union has not proved altogether a peaceable one, and there have been continual threats of secession on the part of the Norwegians. The present king, Oscar II, has been successful in conciliating his rebellious Norwegian subjects, but his heir apparent, Prince Gustave, is a firebrand to them. He has persistently and successfully opposed their desires for greater freedom in foreign affairs and for separation.

HOUSE WAGON AND HEALTH.

Trip of Three Thousand Miles Made by the Farnsworth Family.

Here is a consumptive who has recovered his health in a new way. A year ago when Mr. E. E. Farnsworth left Winfield, Kan., he could hardly walk owing to his weakness and emaciation, whereas now he is the picture of health, brown as an Indian and apparently cured of all his ailments. As a last resort, when he saw that the disease was getting the better of him, he decided to start off on a novel journey. A house wagon was built which for one year was his only home and that of his wife and her father. This was drawn by a pair of horses. The trio covered about 3,000 miles, traversed six states and even entered Mexico. They discovered and investigated some practically unknown cliff dwellings, and not a day's illness marred the success of their journey. When they found a particularly desirable spot they would remain there until their provisions were exhausted, and then move on leisurely.



THE FARNSWORTH HOUSE WAGON.

A REPENTANT SINNER.

By Count Leo Tolstoi.

Explanation of the cause of Count Leo Tolstoi's excommunication from the Russian church is found by his friends in his latest story entitled "A Repentant Sinner." This story was first published in the Novoe Vremya, St. Petersburg, and such was its unusual nature that it immediately involved all the doctrinaires in heated discussion. Following is a translation of the story:

"There once dwelt on the earth a man 66 years old. He had lived his entire life without virtue and without repentance, and this man became sick, and still he did not repent. And when death approached and his last hour had come he prayed.

"'Lord, as thou didst pardon the thief on the cross, pardon me.'

"After he had spoken he gave up the ghost, and his spirit, beloved of God, had faith in the mercy of the Creator and soared to the threshold of paradise. And the sinner knocked suppliantly for entrance into heaven. From behind the gate came a voice, saying:

"'Who knocks at the gate of paradise? How did he live on earth?'

"The voice of the judge replied, enumerating all the sins of the man. There was not one virtue to his credit. And the voice from behind the gate said:

"'Sinners cannot enter the portals of heaven. Depart!'

"But the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am Peter, the apostle.'

"And the sinner said: 'Have pity on me, Peter. Remember the weakness of men and the great heart of God. Were you not a disciple of Christ? Was it not you who received the doctrines from his lips? You have had the example of his life. Oh, remember! He was in trouble and asked you three times not to sleep, but to pray, and you slept because your eyelids were heavy with sleep, and thrice he came and found you asleep. Even so have I done. Recall also that you renounced him three times before Caiaphas after promising him thrice never to deny him. This also have I done. You will not keep me out of heaven, will you?'

"And the voice died away behind the gates of paradise, and at the same instant the sinner ceased knocking, for the gate of heaven opened. But another voice was heard from behind an inner door, which demanded:

"'Who is this man, and how did he live on earth?'

"Once more the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating all the sins of the man, and there was not a single meritorious action to his credit, and the voice replied from behind the inner door:

"'Depart. So ignoble a sinner cannot live among us in paradise.'

"And the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, nor do I know thy name.'

"'I am the royal prophet David.'

"The sinner did not despair. He did not recede, but said:

"'Have pity on me, King David. Remember the weakness of man and the large heart of God. God loved you. He gave you a place above other men. You had everything—royalty, glory, gold, favorites and children. But from the infinite height of your position you saw the wife of a poor man. Sin surrounded you. You yielded to temptation, and you took the wife of Uri and delivered her husband to the avenging sword of the Ammonites. You, the king, took from the poor man his last ewe. Even so have I done. And remember how you repentantly said: 'I remember my sins, and I repent of them.' Even so have I done, and surely you will not bar the door of heaven for me.'

"And the voice died away from behind the inner door of heaven. At that moment the sinner ceased knocking, for the door was opened half way. Then a third voice came from behind the door and said:

"'Who is this man and how did he live on the earth?'

"And for the third time the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating the man's sins without recounting a single virtue, and the voice replied:

"'Get thee hence! Such sinners cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.'

"And the man said, 'I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am John the Evangelist, the favorite disciple of Christ.'

"At that the sinner rejoiced and said: 'Now they surely cannot keep me out. Peter and David let me enter because they knew the weakness of human nature and the great heart of God. You, John, will surely let me enter, because you are filled with love. Was it not you, O John the Evangelist, who exclaimed in your lifetime, "God is love, and who does not love cannot know God?" Was it not you who, in your weakness, but repentance, exclaimed, "Brothers, love ye one another?" How will you then refuse me; how will you deny me entrance? Either renounce what you have said or love me and open for me the inner door of heaven.'

"And the door opened wide, and John the Evangelist embraced the sinner and allowed him to enter the kingdom of heaven."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Rich Uncle.

Old Lawyer—How'd I get my start? Well, shortly after I was called to the bar a rich uncle died, and I came into possession of a cool hundred thousand.

Young Lawyer (in surprise)—But I never knew you had a rich uncle!

TRIBUTE TO DAVIS

SENATORS EULOGIZE THE DECEASED MINNESOTAN.

Nelson, Hoar, Lodge and Others Included in the List of Speakers—Duluth Docks to Be Raised—A. B. Stickney Weds—Drop In Price of Twine—State News in General.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—No legislative business of importance was transacted by the senate. The session was devoted to services held in memory of the late Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota. The long and distinguished services of the Minnesota senator and the intimate relations he sustained to his colleagues in the senate had endeared him to all and when his demise came every member of the body felt that he had suffered a personal loss. For many years Mr. Davis served as chairman of the committee on foreign relations and in that capacity and in the capacity of member of the Paris peace commission he was intimately identified with the foreign affairs of the government.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the routine morning business, Mr. Nelson (Minn.) called up his resolution expressive of the regret of the senate at the death of Senator Davis. As Mr. Nelson called up the resolution Mrs. Davis, accompanied by some friends, entered the executive gallery of the senate.

Mr. Nelson the First Speaker.

Mr. Nelson, the colleague of the late Senator Davis, was the first speaker. He began by touching upon the history of the deceased senator, saying that he died at a time when in the full maturity of his great mental vigor, at a time when he was better equipped than ever to serve his country and at a time when his country stood in the greatest need of his services. Continuing, Senator Nelson said:

"To trace his life, the development of his vigorous mind and its wonderful resources from youth to manhood, from a great lawyer to a profound statesman and leader, is to scan a human epic, marvelous and inspiring in its progress, and grand and enduring in its results and outcome. He was equipped with a mind of the first order, eager, thirsty and searching. In his youth he was a most ardent student, to whom his lessons were but the doorsteps to the sanctuary of knowledge, which he was ever exploring. He became a devouring student of history, philosophy and poetry at a time when most youths are tethered in their arithmetics, their grammar and their geographies."

Trained in Diplomacy and Statecraft.

Mr. Nelson paid a tribute to the profundity of the knowledge of his colleague and the distinguished position he occupied in the Spanish war debates and conferences and said:

"He exhausted and rendered clear and lucid the most profound and intricate problems of diplomacy and statecraft. When he had spoken, there was little if anything more to bear on the subject."

Mr. Nelson paid a tribute to the literary accomplishment of his late colleague and closed with an apostrophe to American manhood as represented by Mr. Davis.

Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts, commenting upon the fact that so many senators die in office, said that in the eulogies pronounced in the chamber the portraitures have been true and faithful. In a young republic, he said, the greatest place for a live man was that of a soldier in time of war and a statesman in time of peace. Mr. Davis was both. He did a man's full duty in both.

Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts analyzed the character of Mr. Davis, as from the closest personal friendship, and said the late senator was not fully appreciated as a public man.

WILL RAISE DOCKS.

Engineering Feat Planned by Iron Range Road.

DULUTH, Jan. 12.—President Greatsinger, Chief Engineer Angst and Superintendent McGonagle of the Iron Range road have been in consultation for some days over the improvements to be made this winter at the road's terminals, and plans for the reconstruction of docks 3 and 4 are now in the hands of contractors. From 200 to 400 men will be employed in the work, which will take from now till well into the spring. Both docks will be raised bodily, one six feet, the other nine. As they are a quarter of a mile long, 50 feet wide and more than 50 feet high above water, the task will be a difficult engineering feat.

Contractors After Their Pay.

REDWOOD FALLS, Minn., Jan. 10.—Michael King of Des Moines, the contractor who finished the grading on the Gulf and Manitoba line constructed from Beaver Falls to the Minneapolis and St. Louis tracks, near this city, has been there to place a lien on the right of way to secure his pay for the work. John Graham of Minneapolis had already placed a lien on the line for materials furnished.

Base Ball Franchise Transferred.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 10.—The announcement is made that the transfer of the Sioux City Western league base ball franchise was formally made to Minneapolis during the secret session of league representatives in St. Joseph on Tuesday. It is also said the Pueblo franchise will probably be transferred to Sioux City.

Killed in an Assault.

APPLETON, Minn., Jan. 11.—Hans Agre and Victor Nelson sought admittance to the house of Matt Janath. They were refused, and thereupon broke in the windows. Janath shot and killed Agre and surrendered to the authorities. Nelson is detained as a witness and may be prosecuted.

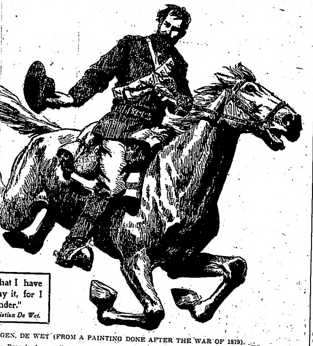
BRITONS ADMIRE GEN. DE WET.

All the British newspapers recognize in General Christian De Wet the revivification of the war spirit of the Boer, and they realize that until he is captured or killed the war is not ended.

One of the most noted correspondents, in telling of his impressions of De Wet, says:

"Is it any wonder, therefore, that this man has come to be recognized as the greatest guerrilla chief since the time of Phil Sheridan?"

That's from an English viewpoint.



GEN. DE WET (FROM A PAINTING DONE AFTER THE WAR OF 1879).

> "If you hear that I have surrendered, deny it, for I will never surrender."
> —General Christian De Wet.

Here's what one of the Boer leaders, Commandant W. D. Snyman, says:

"When I bade goodby to General De Wet in the Free State he said to me: 'If you hear that I have surrendered, deny it. I will never surrender; I will fight as long as one man stands by me.' President Steyn said to me as I left him near Komatipoort: 'You may tell the American friends of our cause that as long as I live I shall defend that cause. We will continue this fight until we win.'

"That is the spirit which animates the entire army, from the youngest boy in the ranks to the oldest grandfather who carries a rifle.

"I know that you will say that De Wet and his small army canot contend much longer against the vast forces of Lord Kitchener. De Wet is as far superior to Kitchener in military strategy as Napoleon was to the most ignorant soldier in his army. That is a broad statement, but De Wet has proved it several times to the great mortification of the hero of Omdurman.

"For three months Kitchener, with an army of almost 40,000 men, tried to capture us, and De Wet laughed at his efforts, and incidentally captured from him at Rooidal sufficient winter clothing for every burgher in the army, 8,700 shells and enough small arms ammunition to last his forces for three years! And De Wet did this with less than 5,000 men!

"Since June the entire Boer army has been supported by the British taxpayer. Almost every single rifle in the Boer army was captured from the British in battles; every cartridge and shell used in our fights since June was taken from the British. Whenever there is a lack of anything in our camp we sally forth and take it from the British.

"The English taxpayers are furnishing the sinews for both armies in South Africa, and so long as the Boers can secure the necessaries of war so cheaply and easily they need have no fear that the national treasury must issue bonds to carry on the struggle.

"The Boers will continue the war by harassing their enemy continually, for years if need be. They will make it necessary to keep a mighty force in the country, and sooner or later England will realize that she cannot afford to spend $500,000,000 a year, year after year, when none of her citizens except a clique of mining men can expect to gain anything by the vast expenditure."

Such is the man who holds the British empire in check, the man whose operations have made it necessary for the government to order 50,000 more horses to equip the force employed in the task of "rounding" him up. By the power of his military genius he has made the Boer war recrudescent; he has brought upon Great Britain a continuation of a struggle that has been tremendously costly in blood and treasure, and he has revived the spirit of freedom in a land that was overrun by the invader.

A TYPICAL WOMAN.

George Eliot Had the Idiosyncrasies of Her Sex.

For no judgment of George Eliot can be discerning which does not consider the vital fact that she was—even in a degree really typical—a woman. She belonged to the subjective sex, and is the most objective of novelists. It is the fashion at present to neglect the distinction of sex in speaking of women, and pay them the compliment, or do them the justice, of treating them severally as individuals, discriminated merely as men are discriminated. Nevertheless, until their distinction in certain fields of activity is as much a matter of course as that of men—until there are no more "Women's Buildings" at world's fairs, for example, and the propaganda in favor of the sex as an entity ceases to obscure the individual standard which naturally tends to get itself established if let alone—anything like the eminence of George Eliot's powers will be singularized because of the possessor's sex. It is—as yet—generally remarkable, worthy of remark, that a woman should have reached such a height of accomplishment. But that her accomplishment should have been in the field of thought rather than in that of feeling, and so splendidly successful in this field as almost to have originated a species in the domain of fiction, is specifically the notable phenomenon in George Eliot's case. Why is she so unlike George Sand and Charlotte Bronte—one may exclude Jane Austen, in thinking of precedents, as exclusively an artist. Is it because of her different and in the main superior mental quality, and the greater subordination of feeling to thought in her original make-up? Probably not. Whatever George Eliot became there can be no doubt that Mary Ann Evans was a woman in whom the idiosyncrasies of sex were particularly developed. As to the existence of such idiosyncrasies and their native, elemental, and possibly ineradicable character George Eliot herself never had any doubts. The difference between the sexes is one of the phenomena that compose her material. Her writings are full of man considered as man, and woman as woman. She has widened the sphere of woman's interest for us, but has not obscured its identity.—From "George Eliot," by W. C. Brownell, in Scribner's.

The Marble Heart Club.

There are a few young ladies in this city who, not knowing the secret that nature has written in the rocks, which some of us have deciphered, have turned their faces from mankind—masculine gender—and called themselves the Marble Heart club. There are four members of this club, all young, smiling, sweet faced, with wondrous eyes, of blue and brown and black. And innocence is their specialty. Now in the face of such a specialty as that, the question comes, why do the young ladies choose such a name? Do they really think that their hearts, which beat with such a flutter beneath their modern shirtwaists, are really made of the cold, pink veined and beautiful metamorphosed limestone? Or do they know the secret of the rocks and act with a strange consistency? May be, and this is true, they know that the beautiful and poetic marble was once limestone filled with cast-off elements of life and changed into the beautiful stone by the action of some great heat, it may be of passion.—Milwaukee Journal.

Green Peas in December.

Time was—and it was not so many years ago, either—when green peas were a luxury that only the very rich could indulge in at the latter end of November. Now you may have your lamb and green peas until well into December, and the green peas are not the costly part of the combination, says the New York Times. While not exactly as plentiful as they are in summer, there is no market of any sort worth patronizing where green peas may not be had at price but little in excess of that paid in the spring, when alone, a generation ago, green peas were in season. That they are now to be had so plenteously and cheaply is due to the fact that truck farmers have learned a whole lot within the past decade about the value of things that are out of season. Rotation of crops, in the south particularly, has materially increased the income of the up-to-date farmer and made the season line for his crops one that is hardly traceable. Some of the peas that were in the market during the early part of the month were late ones raised on the Long Island truck farms. Most of those now to be had come from North Carolina and Florida, the best being the late crop from the latter state.

Raking Down the Fire.

The fire must be raked down and fresh coal put on in the evening, but a small amount of coal will answer for the night, unless the drafts have been open the greater part of the day. On an extremely cold day it may be necessary to have the drafts open a part of the time, and some coal put on at noon. All the clinkers should be removed when the fire is raked down in the morning. The water-pan should be replenished in the morning. Some careless people leave the ashes for days at a time at the bottom of the furnace, house of its share and often burning out the grate. If the furnace fire be allowed to burn to a white heat it will be ruined for that day unless some coal be put on a little later. The cold-air boxes must admit enough air to drive the hot air through the house, but not more than can be heated.

Removal of Patient's Stomach.

Of the numerous operations in which the stomach of a patient has been entirely removed, one at least has been completely successful. A San Francisco woman had her stomach removed two years ago the coming February, and has since been in remarkably good health, eating considerably and without discomfort.

Gertrude Atherton's novel, "Senator North," has been incorporated in the German Tauchnitz edition of English books. It is said that a well-known English playwright has proposed to her to dramatize the book.

"COON" SONGS.

Lyrics of Foremost Colored Literary Man of Today.

There was born in Dayton, O., in 1872, a colored boy, destined before he reached 30 years of age to have made for himself a world wide reputation. That boy was Paul Laurence Dunbar, the polished man of letters, the brilliant poet, the fascinating dialect song writer and the foremost colored literary man of the age. All in the space of eight short years Mr. Dunbar climbed the ladder of fame from the deepest obscurity to his present height. He was the child of slave parents; was educated in the public schools of Dayton, receiving as good an education as most boys in his circumstances would have received. For some months after he finished his schooling he worked as an elevator boy. But during this period his literary bent was gathering strength of purpose, and being perfected. In his hours, more likely minutes of rest, in the elevator he was continually scribbling verses on scraps of paper. These scraps he gave to his mother with the injunction not to destroy them. This was the beginning; his present success every one knows, and the end—well, there is a brilliant future before him. It is in connection with "coon" songs, however, that Mr. Dunbar is best known. Probably there is no more popular writer of these delightful dialect songs than he. Certainly, his lyrics have been accorded an unwonted popularity and great sales. "Uncle Eph's Christmas," which is to be presented at Boston Music Hall this week, contains some of his most tuneful "coon" songs. In fact, the libretto of "Uncle Eph's Christmas" was written by Mr. Dunbar. Will Marion Cook, who has assisted Mr. Dunbar before by writing the music for his songs, is the composer of the music in "Uncle Eph's Christmas."

Pot-Boilers Pay Best.

An artist whose name is familiar in this town said several days ago that he made more out of his pot-boilers than from his more pretentious pictures, says the New York Sun. In this case pot-boilers means illustrating. "Of course, a lot of the illustrating," he said, "is high-grade work of its class, and I am not ashamed to sign my name to it. Like many other artists in my class, however, I make a good many pictures for illustrating which are either published anonymously or under an assumed name. I can not afford to sell my oil painting for small prices, no matter how much I may need the money. This would not be fair to people who have bought my pictures, and it would injure my reputation."

Thieves Take Wedding Presents.

A large company was assembled at the house of Mrs. Purcell in Union county, South Dakota, where a wedding was being solemnized. The wedding presents were numerous, a purse of $75 in gold being among the rest. One of the guests was announced to do a fancy clog dance in the barn and everybody flocked thither. While the dance was in progress thieves ransacked the house and carried off every valuable article, of course including the $75.

THE GREEN PERIL,

THAT STALKS IN FRANCE ALARMING HER LAWMAKERS.

In the Last Six Years the Consumption of Absinthe Has Doubled in the French Nation, Says This Writer—Introduced as Medicine.

At last the French lawmakers have awakened to the green peril of France—the deadly absinthe, says the New York Press. The consumption of this drug has been for years the curse of the French people. Its effects upon the nervous system are such that it is especially harmful to an excitable people like the French. That it is responsible for the increase in insanity in France is shown by the fact that the growth in its consumption goes hand in hand with the increase of cases of mental derangement. Cases of insanity directly traceable to the use of this drug seldom or never recover. In large quantities absinthe produces epilectic convulsions, as has been shown by experiment, and the continued though moderate use of it produces symptoms of an epileptic character which are not due to the alcohol in the decoction. In the last six years the consumption of absinthe has doubled in France, the absinthe drinkers of that country now consuming, according to M. Vaillant, 2,200,000 gallons a year. The confirmed absinthe drinker is nervous, irascible, erratic and incapable of self-contol or of logical reasoning. He does not get drunk like the whisky drinker, but is driven to a sort of frenzy. Absinthe also stimulates the lowest and most abnormal passions. No man can remain perfectly sane and be addicted to absinthe. The French Academy of Medicine and the French members of the Chamber of Deputies see grave dangers ahead for France if the use of the drug is not checked. If the increase in its use goes on with the same rapidity which it has in the last four years it is only a question of time when France will become a nation of lunatics. In this country little absinthe is consumed. Ten years ago there was quite a "fad" for absinthe drinking in the United States, but it was of short duration, American common sense soon relegating the dangerous drink to obscurity. Later it became the custom to say to the bartender when ordering a cocktail, "Just a dash of absinthe in it." Now the bartenders in the best drinking places in New York say that absinthe in a cocktail is seldom called for. Now and then a young man who is just "learning the ropes" of the big city and wants to appear "knowing" will call for an "absinthe frappe," or some old "rounder," whose flickering candle is almost gone out, will order an absinthe as a "bracer," but as a general drink it is seldom used here now. The real "rounder," the man who has drunk all his life and intends to drink for the remainder of it, eschews absinthe as he would a temperance pledge. In restaurants and cafes frequented by foreigners one may occasionally see men sitting over their cloudy green liquor, but as a rule the "drip glass" remains unused behind the bar, and the absinthe bottle keeps it company. The history of the introduction of this drink into France is curious. When the French soldiers were sent to the Algerian war in 1844-7, they were advised to mix absinthe with the water they drank as a preventive against fever. It was as pleasant a tasting medicine as any man had ever taken, and the result was that the whole French army in Algiers became an army of absinthe drinkers. When the soldiers returned to France they brought the absinthe habit with them and introduced their friends to the new drink. The absinthe habit spread throughout France with remarkable rapidity, and has now become a great national evil, calling for strict legislation if the country would save itself from its green peril.

Gas Belt Being Exhausted.........

RAPID DWINDLING OF THE SUPPLY IN INDIANA CHARGED TO RECKLESS WASTE.

So great have been the demands arising from the extensive use of natural gas in factories, public buildings and dwellings of Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio, that the supply is rapidly being overdrawn and it is estimated that the gas belt of Indiana, where the product is obtained, will in two years at the furthest be practically exhausted. Attention to this matter has been called by the statement of the Indianapolis Gas company that it is unable to declare dividends owing to the fact that three-fourths of the citizens of Indianapolis are guilty of recklessly wasting and stealing gas from the company and the answer of citizens to the effect that they have to resort to seemingly sharp practices because the quality of the gas is so poor that they cannot get light without so doing. The directors of the gas company allege that the violations of the law are not confined to the poor or vicious, but include city and county buildings, city officials, lawyers, churches, ministers of the gospel, physicians, architects, and some of the most prominent residents and business houses in the city of Indianapolis.

As described by the company, the method of stealing is to cut additional small holes in the feed pipe, without paying the extra charge due for the increased supply. Everybody, apparently, according to the company, does this; or, at least, it was found that out of 18,000 consumers, three-quarters were using more gas than they paid for. As a result, the company's earnings decreased $110,000 a year, and the dividends had to be deferred.

No gas meters have been used in Indianapolis, despite the efforts of the company to secure their adoption, and there is no means of definitely determining the amount of the product used by each consumer.

Spread of the Coffee Plant.

Some interesting facts regarding the coffee tree have been printed recently. The native home of this plant is said to be Kaffra, in southern Abyssinia. It was not until it had been in use for centuries by the Arabians that the plant was carried to Java. In 1706 a tree from Java was sent to Amsterdam, and when it flowered and ripened seeds a young seedling was presented to Louis XIV. From this plant seedlings were sent to Martinique, and from these plants again seedlings were sent to Jamaica, Cayenne and San Domingo; while from Amsterdam plants were sent to Surinam. In fact, it was from the one plant, sent from Java in the beginning of the 18th century by Governor General Van Horn, that everything in the French possessions and West Indies sprang. In this way has traveled the progeny of the original coffee plant, introduced from Arabia at the end of the seventeenth century.

ABOUT EAST AFRICA.

Two Notable Facts to Which Dr. Smith Calls Attention.

Dr. Donaldson Smith was the first white man in the wide district between Lake Rudolf in East Africa and the Nile. Among the most important of his remarks before the Royal Geographical society were those relating to the meteorology of the country. He said there is no doubt that the desert conditions of the lands inland from the Indian ocean is the result of the fact that the north winds blowing over the mountains of Abyssinia are wrung perfectly dry of their moisture in crossing the mountains and then descend the southern slopes as dry winds. These breezes are the northern trade winds and as they cross the lofty mountain ranges of the Abyssinian highlands practically all the moisture in them is condensed and precipitated and only a pitiful drop or so is permitted to reach the more southern lands. So Somaliland and the lowlands to the south of Abyssinia are very dry. All the rivers and lakes which came under his observation this year were half dried up. The other striking fact which he mentioned is that the whole fauna, both birds and mammals, appears to change as soon as Lake Rudolf is passed. In other words of the fauna between the Indian ocean and Lake Rudolf and the Nile. Gazelles and heartbeasts were seen on both sides of the lake, but the varieties were different. Waller's gazelle, which had been a constant companion, was nowhere to be seen, but the oribi and reedbuck took his place. More than one hundred species of birds were seen to the west of the lake and were found to belong principally to West African types.—New York Sun.

When Life Is Departing.

A. D. Waller of the Paris Academy of Sciences has devised an electrical means of distinguishing between living and dead matter. His statement of the method is somewhat as follows: Living matter responds to an electrical stimulus by yielding an after current in the same direction. The same matter after it has been killed by heating or other method does not respond to excitation unless it does so by causing a reversed current, due to polarization. This phenomena is characteristic of all living matter, animal or vegetable. The similar induced current is the last sign of life and its amount may even be used to measure the amount of vitality remaining. In order to make this test the body is first connected to a delicate galvanometer and if there is any deflection caused this is corrected; an electrical stimulus is administered to the body and then the galvanometer again connected to it. If there is now a deflection of the latter the body is living; no deflection shows that it is indubitably dead.

The Solar Corona.

The expedition sent by the Smithsonian Institution to observe the total solar eclipse of May, 1900, paid especial attention to the measurement of the intensity of the radiation of heat from the sun's corona by means of the solometer. This is the first time that successful measures of the sort have been effected. The chief result of the experiment is summarized as follows by Prof. C. G. Abbot: The corona is effectively cooler than the valometer and appears, therefore, neither to reflect much light from the sun nor chiefly by virtue of a high temperature to give light of its own, but seems rather to be giving light in a manner not associated with a high temperature, or at least with the preponderance of infra-red rays usual in the spectra of hot bodies. "As this last statement," Dr. Abbot adds, "involves a rejection of both the eruptive and meteroic coronal theories, it ought to receive searching criticism and the experimental observations on which it rests ought to be verified at future eclipses."—New York Sun.

Prize for Word Substitutes.

A prize of $1.25 a word is offered by the German Linguistic union of Germany for the best German words that can be substituted for the following foreign expressions: Amateur, baby, concours hippique, couplet, hotel-restaurant, pedal (on bicycles), record, reclame, rochode, rochieren, sweater (as part of a woman's garment). The conditions are that the proposed substitute must not occur in any dictionary. German-Americans who wish to compete may send their list, by Dec. 31, to Dr. Siebert, Wilmersdorf, near Berlin.—Wolfgang Voltz, in Chicago Record.

Mrs Frances M Anderson

MISS FRANCES M. ANDERSON, daughter of HON. JUDGE ANDERSON, of Virginia, is at present in Washington, D. C., as Corresponding Secretary of the Higher Educational League, of that city. Cured of la grippe by Peruna.

MISS FRANCES M. ANDERSON, Corresponding Secretary of the Higher Educational League, writes from the "Astoria," Washington, D. C., the following:

"About two months ago I was taken very ill with la grippe and was obliged to go to bed. I took three bottles of Peruna with very beneficial results, and was able to leave my bed in a week and regained my usual strength very soon.

"I have nothing but praise for Peruna, and recommend it to those similarly afflicted whenever I can."—Frances M. Anderson.

La grippe is, strictly speaking, epidemic catarrh—that is to say, a variety of acute catarrh which is so contagious and runs a course more or less definite, the same as scarlet fever, whooping cough, etc.

During the acute stages of la grippe it is not a very fatal disease, but the condition in which it leaves the system has caused the death of a countless number.

Indeed nearly every person who has had la grippe within the last three years finds himself more or less deranged by the pernicious effects of this disease. The majority of those who have escaped death find life scarcely worth living.

If this vast multitude of people could only know with what certainty and promptness Peruna would relieve them of all the bad effects which la grippe has brought upon them, what an untold amount of suffering would be averted!

Thousands have already heard how quickly this remedy will cure in these cases and have been saved; but tens of thousands have not yet heard, and continue to suffer on, dropping into the grave one by one.

Peruna cures catarrh in all stages and varieties, whether acute or chronic, and is therefore the most effective remedy ever devised for removing all the derangements which follows la grippe.

Samuel M. York writes from Union Grove, Ala., the following letter:

Dear Sir—"Last week I was taken with la grippe and catarrhal deafness. I wrote you for advice and followed your directions. After taking two bottles of Peruna I found myself well of la grippe, and my hearing was fully restored. My health is better than it has been in five years.

"My wife improved in health very much after taking Peruna."—Samuel M. York.

Miss Caroline J. Kahl, Otisco, Ind., writes as follows:

"Three years I had la grippe and pulmonary trouble. I was very sick. I had hemorrhages of the lungs nearly every day for a year and three bottles of your Peruna cured me. The doctor said I had consumption. I am now in better health than I have been for many years.

"I highly recommend Peruna to all my neighbors and friends. Peruna is my favorite medicine. I shall always have Peruna in the house."—Miss Caroline J. Kahl.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

The Wings of Wealth.

To have his swing in Wall street is the consuming desire of every man with with the money-craze in his blood and brain, yet most of the ex-"kings of Wall street" died poor unless they had other sources of income; their living successors dare not try to retire by converting their holdings into cash.

Outside of Wall street the final experiences of thousands of envied men have been similarly bad; an ex-millionaire, once supposed to be the shrewdest of the shrewd, is keeping a cheap restaurant in Boston, another is an object of charity in Chicago, and many monetary meteors, to whose names "Lucky" was prefixed a few years ago, would exchange all their luck that remains for a permanent assurance against the wolf at the door.—Saturday Evening Post.

Wandering.

The Bartender—You see, I have to drink a good deal. Every half-hour or so somebody comes in and asks me to take something.

The Waiter—I suppose, at my restaurant, if I was asked every half-hour to eat something, I'd have to do it?

The Bartender—Jim, you'r a good fellow, but there is no arguing with you. You will wander from the subject.—Boston Transcript.

As a Persuader.

Merchant—I am much amazed that you collected that old account against Teebrown. What pressure did you bring to bear upon him?

Bill Collector—Well, I don't know whether it had any effect or not, but I had a picture of the battleship Kentucky pasted on the bill, and he pungled up as soon as he saw it.—Chicago Tribune.

HOW TO GO UPSTAIRS.

Three Distinct Methods to Reach the Upper Home Regions.

"The proper way to go up stairs," said the young ambulance surgeon, "is to hold the body erect and step leisurely, planting each foot firmly on the successive stairs."

He paused for a moment as he pushed his chair back from the table, and lit a perfecto that his host, the newspaper man, passed to him.

"Pshaw!" remarked the molder of public opinion. "I suppose you have just come from a lecture on hygiene, and that owl-faced professor has impressed you with the idea that he really knows what he is talking about. Now, my experience," he continued, with a grin, "proves that the best way to get up stairs is to take the elevator."

Bob laughed at the alleged witticism, but stopped suddenly when the hostess remarked: "I suppose either way would be acceptable, but your usual way seems to be to pull off your shoes and crawl up on all fours, so that no one hears you. Even that might be all right," she continued, "but why do you complete the transit by falling over a chair and waking up everybody within a block of the house with your side remarks? I should think that either of the methods you suggest would be an improvement on the style you apparently preferred last century."—New York Telegraph.

LOCATED BY CALCULATION.

Lord Kelvin Once Demonstrated His Quick Wit to His Class and Spotted Culprit.

Lord Kelvin once surprised his class by the quick and amusing manner in which he solved a problem on "sound." In the midst of an experiment, Lord Kelvin had ceased lecturing, and was silently watching, along with most of the students, the progress of an experiment. There was a dead silence, which was suddenly and rudely broken by the sound of a marble, which an inattentive student had purposely dropped, and which continued to roll and drop, drop, drop, down all the tiers of benches until it reached the ground floor. Meanwhile, Lord Kelvin had quickly turned around and observed where the marble emerged on the floor. He counted back the number of times he had heard it drop, and then announced:

"Mr. X———, of the fourth tier, you may report to me after the lecture."

The eminent scientist had correctly spotted the culprit.—London M. A. P.

Extensive repairs will be required by the Oregon and it is not unlikely that the Union iron works may get the contract for the work.

Eccentricities of genius do not figure very largely in Mr. Howell's recent reminiscences of our great writers of the last generation. There is no comfort in his book for silly young men who try to excuse their own lapses from decency by the examples of Byron and Poe; for Mr. Howells shows that our foremost Americans were clean-living as well as high-thinking citizens. The possession of genius does not confer exemptions; it imposes weightier responsibilities.

Forty-two English citizens during the last ten years have changed their surnames, because they were the same as those of famous villains in well-known books and plays. For this privilege they paid the country £420. Dickens is responsible for over a third of the name changes, and, among others, seven Quilps have sued for a new name during the past six years alone. Quilp in "The Old Curiosity Shop" was such a detestable villain that victims of the same name said it did them and their business harm. Uriah Heep, the cringing rogue of "David Copperfield," is responsible for five people of that name seeking new cognomens. Another name that has been changed by seven different families is "Legree," spelled in several different ways, the name of the scoundrelly painter in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

When the usual committee representing the two houses called on President McKinley on the day they assembled, it is said the president cordially remarked that he was glad to see them and glad that congress was again in session. This is a pleasanter attitude than that of dread with which many people regard the assembling of the national legislature. When great national political conflicts are taking place there is sometimes reasons for apprehension. At the present time there is need of constructive legislation, and we ought rather to be sorry that congress has but three months in which to accomplish it than to regret that it has met to undertake the task.

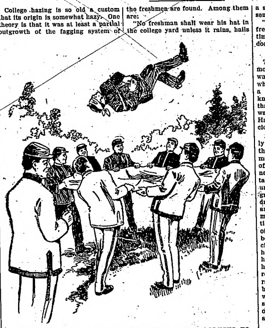
The anecdote which follows must undoubtedly be accepted as both authentic and official, since it is contained in a report to the state department by an American consul. One of the duties of a consul is to discover, if he can, and make known to his countrymen all openings for profitable business in the district within which his jurisdiction lies. Accordingly, we are told how the Germans at Aix-la-Chapelle received an American circus. The magnitude and character of the bill posting and the rapid erection of the huge tents filled them with astonishment. On the day of the circus not a workman went to the factories, and spindles lay in astonished idleness. The tents were crowded at each performance. Vague antipathies against the United States were changed to respect and awe, any farther achievement being deemed possible for Americans. That commerce follows the flag is a trite assertion. The Aix-la-Chapelle consul seems to add, "especially when the flag waves above an American circus!"

That the young queen of Italy stands on a good footing with the ladies of her court may be inferred from a remark soon after her elevation to the throne. "When one has to stand so long and make so many courtesies, it is best to seek comfort. My own practice is to wear easy corsets and shoes that do not pinch." An innovation, certainly! Hitherto, royalty's attitude toward the discomforts of court dress has been rather the philosophy of Rip Van Winkle on seeing his wife at the wash-tubs: "Well, I suppose somebody has got to do it!"

An earthquake, lately, in Caracas, Venezuela, brought ruin and terror. The city was in a state of chaos for days. The keeper of the jail, which always has inmates confined there for political offenses, issued the following notice, which ought to have amused as well as reassured those who read it. "To the public: I have the satisfaction to inform the families of those who are detained here that this morning's earthquake has happily

ORIGIN OF COLLEGE HAZING.

College hazing is so old a custom that its origin is somewhat hazy. One theory is that it was at least a partial outgrowth of the fagging system of



TOSSING A BLANKET.—HOW THE FRESHMEN ARE INTRODUCED TO MYSTERIES OF COLLEGE BROTHERHOODS.

English colleges, in which it was the custom to make new students do menial work for the upper classmen. The hazing which has been indulged in has largely been practiced upon freshmen, but occasionally other classmen have been hazed. To haze means to disturb, harass, annoy, and it was in some way figured out that this was just what ought to be done to men entering college for the first time. It was decided that they should be servile and that they should do whatever they were told by upper classmen, no matter how absurd or degrading an act should be demanded of them. As early as the year 1760, sixteen years before the breaking out of the revolutionary war, the following regulations were enacted at Yale university:

"It being the duty of seniors to teach freshmen the laws, usages and customs of the college, to this end they are empowered to order the whole freshman class or any particular member of it to appear, in order to be instructed and reproved, at such time and place as they shall appoint, when and where every freshman shall attend, answer all proper questions and behave decently.

"The freshmen are forbidden to wear their hats in the college yard until the May vacation, and whenever a freshman either speaks to a superior or is spoken to by one he shall keep his hat off until he is bidden to put it back on.

"A freshman shall not play with any of the members of an upper class without being asked.

"Freshmen are required to perform all reasonable errands for any superior.

"Freshmen shall not run in the college yard nor up and down stairs, nor call to any one through a college window."

In the "Ancient Laws and Liberties" of Harvard similar restrictions upon the freshmen are found. Among them are:

"No freshman shall wear his hat in the college yard unless it rains, hails or snows, provided he be on foot and have not both hands full.

"Freshmen are to consider all other classes as their seniors.

"No freshman shall speak to a senior with his hat on, nor have it on in a senior's room; nor in his own if a senior be there.

"When any person knocks at a freshman's door, except in studying time, he shall immediately open the door without inquiring who is there."

Fighting Freshman Sustained.

The death blow to the hat law and most of the other absurd regulations was struck of one hundred years ago, when Levi Hedge, who was afterwards a famous professor, threatened to knock down a senior who demanded that he remove his hat. The trouble was brought before the president of Harvard for adjudication and he decided in favor of Freshman Hedge.

Although these regulations were early overthrown the spirit underlying them was kept alive and frequently manifested itself in the mistreatment of members of the freshmen class. The new college men were "smoked out," taken from bed at midnight and doused under the town pump, painted with green or red paint, made to eat or drink vile combinations, blindfolded and made to run three or four miles, made to sing or dance or deliver orations, while very often they were shorn of their hair completely. There have been many instances of the most vicious kinds of practices. Young men have been thrown into rivers or lakes, headed up in barrels and rolled down hill, etc. Occasionally freshmen have resisted the perpetration of these outrages. Revolvers have been drawn by both sides, and when the freshman who was thus inclined to defend himself has been caught unarmed he has often been made to pay dearly for his self-defense.

With the progress of education and civilization these practices have become less common in many of the large universities, but they still exist to some extent and in their worst form is evident from the developments in the West Point case. This fact led an old college man to remark the other day:

"The time has come when the brutal college hazer should be treated in exactly the same way as any other criminal. No effort should be spared either by the college or civil authorities to catch the culprits, and when apprehended they should be given the full penalties allowed by the law. If a few of the young wretches, who are nothing but brutes in human form, were sent to the penitentiary as they should be for five or ten years it would have a most salutary effect upon college hazing."

Pearl Oysters Do Engraving.

People very often marvel at the cheapness of the engraved or etched pearl shells which come from China. They sell for little or nothing, and the uninitiated will be apt to wonder how it is the work can be done so cheaply. The reason for it is, instead of graving the picture into the hard shell, an operation that would be laborious and slow, the Chinese draw the sketch on a little scrap of tea lead and insert it into a pearl oyster shell when it is tender. The inside of the shell in this manner gets an impression of the sketch from the tea lead picture, and as soon as it is sufficiently well printed the Chinese take the lead out and insert it in another shell.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TO THE FRONTIER.

The Russians Are Pushing Railroad Work in Manchuria.

The Russians are exhibiting the greatest energy in pushing railroad work in Manchuria, a letter to the London Times says, wholly independent of military operations. The chief engineer of construction beyond Lake Baikal says that the branch railway deflecting from the main Siberian trunk line and going as far as the Manchurian frontier in the region of Hailar, will be completed and ready for the transportation of troops by the end of February, if no unexpected delay takes place in the delivery of material. This material has been ordered from the works in the Urals, so as to save time by carrying them over as short a distance as possible. The branch line will join the northwestern section of the road through Manchuria, which is to be pushed on at once with all possible speed. Strategical roadways are also being pushed forward. Along these roads barracks, storehouses and baking ovens have [illegible] of troops. For some time everything on the roads east of Lake Baikal has been subordinated to military requirements, and ordinary travelers have had a hard time.—Indianapolis News.

Typical of Prehistoric Peruvians.

The pupils of the Lima (Pa.) orphan asylum have made a gift of a golden urn of the Inca period in aid of the Galveston sufferers. The urn was discovered last year in one of the ancient burying grounds of the prehistoric race of Peru, near Lima. The urn weighs about 120 grains. The metal of which it is composed is similar to the "electrum" mentioned by Pliny, of the "lukos chrusos," or white gold, referred to in Homer's "Iliad." On each side of the urn is a human head, with the large nose typical of the prehistoric Peruvian race. The value of the vessel is very great, as it is a rare archaeological curiosity.

[illegible] Tossing the Boxer.

This, says a London paper, is a clever, ingenious and most amusing [illegible] hat, but it would seem as if four nationalities were intended, for on the crown of the hats are the colors of the several European allies now in the celestial empire. Each holds one corner of a yellow sheet and by an ingenious device the figure of a Chinaman placed in the center is thrown in the air as soon as a side spring is touched. By means of register near at hand the throw can be either high or low, and the attitude of the victim is most natural. He can, however, be replaced either with dice or balls.

During the recent heavy storm a house near Los Nietos was swept off its foundation and carried downstream, where it lodged in the willows. The family, who vacated it, had left a lighted lamp on the kitchen table, and next morning the lamp was still burning, although the house had floated for a considerable distance.—Los Angeles Times.

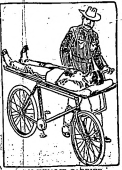
NEW BICYCLE AMBULANCE.

The bicycle is such a convenient means of transportation that it is nothing extraordinary that inventors should apply it to the carriage of an ambulance for emergency cases. We illustrate in the accompanying cut a machine fitted with an ambulance which can be manipulated by the rider alone, without the aid of any other person. It is intended primarily as a means of reaching the injured as soon as possible, rather than providing a rapid means of transporting the sufferer to a hospital. The bicycle is provided with a curved bar at the front and rear, which are clamped to the frame and provided with sockets to receive the sides of the frame. The latter is of light tubing and has braces to stretch the canvas when the stretcher is open. When not in use the braces are folded in line with the frame and the whole may be rolled up and attached to the bicycle without interfering with the rider sufficiently to impede his progress. To steer the wheel when the stretcher is in use an elongated handle is clamped to the front fork, extending nearly to the level of the canvas, the rescuer using one hand to push the ambulance and the other to steer with.



AN INVALID CARRIER.

PREVENTION OF SKIN DISEASES.

Among the most common diseases of the skin are acne and eczema, one of which is known to be, and the other probably is, the result of the presence of a microbe on or in the skin. This microbe is a vegetable growth, although a very minute one, and like other noxious weeds, when once it has been planted and has begun to grow it is often extremely difficult to dislodge it.

Every farmer knows that it is easier to keep a field clean by constant care than to clear it after it has once been overgrown with weeds. It is the same with the skin. It is easier to keep the skin in health, and to arrest a commencing disease, than to cure a disease once it has become firmly established.

If it were generally understood that the presence of a few pimples constitutes a true skin disease, which, if neglected, will probably grow worse, fewer persons would suffer from the disfigurement of acne.

The skin is much like the system in general; if it is in good condition it will repel the assaults of disease, but if neglected it becomes less resistant, and soon offers a favorable soil for the growth of noxious germs.

The skin is one of the so-called excretory organs, and if the other organs of similar function—the kidneys and the bowels—do not perform their work properly, an undue proportion of the waste products of the body must be got rid of through the pores of the skin. This throws work upon the integument which it is not accustomed to perform, and it soon becomes diseased in consequence.

The first thing necessary to keep the skin well is to maintain the health of the body by exercise, cleanliness, fresh air day and night, good food properly cooked, a sufficient amount of sleep, and suitable clothing. In addition to these general measures the skin itself should receive special attention in the way of a daily bath, followed by vigorous rubbing with a coarse towel or flesh brush.

Some persons have naturally clear skins, while others appear to have a special predisposition to blackheads and pimples. The fortunate ones must see to it that they do not mar what nature has given them by an unhygienic mode of life; but the others need not despair, for their tendency to eruptions may often be overcome by scrupulous care both of the body and of the skin itself, after the manner above indicated, and in such other ways as the physician may direct.

THE ORIGIN OF WRITING.

Arthur J. Evans, the discoverer of the remains of a great prehistoric palace at Knossos in Crete, which is believed to be the original of the fabled "Labyrinth," says that the revelations made there carry back the existence of written documents on Greek soil some eight centuries beyond the earliest dated Phoenician record as seen on the Moabite stone. These discoveries, therefore, "place the whole question of the origin of writing on a new basis." Mr. Evans thinks that the Cretan hieroglyphs exactly correspond with what, in virtue of their names, we must suppose to have been the pictoral originals of the Phoenician letters on which the alphabet is based. Among these are Aleph, the ox's head; Beth, the house; Daleth, the door, and so forth. This contravenes the old theory of De Rouge that the Phoenician letters were derived from early Egyptian forms signifying quite different objects.

BICYCLE WHEEL IN ASTRONOMY.

At the Yale observatory an interesting use has been found for the bicycle wheel. By fitting such a wheel with a series of opaque screens placed at regular [illegible] from 30 to 50 turns in a minute in front of the cameras used to photograph meteors, Dr. Elkin has succeeded in measuring the velocity of the meteor's flight. The principle depends upon the interruptions produced by the screens in the trails of light made upon the photographic plates by the flying meteors. The velocity of the wheel is known at every instant by means of a chronographic record, and the length of the interruptions indicates the seed of the meteors.

CLOUD PHOTOGRAPHY.

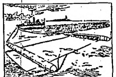
The photographing of clouds has recently become a recognized branch of practical meteorology. It also affords beautiful pictures for the collections of amateur photographers. The French astronomer, Monsieur Antoniadi, of the Juvisy observatory, who has had much experience in cloud photography, says that all kinds of cameras, large and small, mounted and unmounted, can be employed for the purpose; but considerable practice is required to determine the proper time of exposure. In order to quench the blue of the sky and bring out the contrast between the clouds and their background, yellow screens, perferably composed of thin cells containing a chemical solution, are employed. Exposures vary from a small fraction up to one-third of a second.

THE ELEPHANT AS A WORKER.

Mr. E. N. Buxton, in discussing the question of the preservation of big game in Africa, points out the great difficulty of protecting elephants, on account of the high market value of their tusks, and then avers that personally he is opposed to the destruction of elephants at all, on the ground that, valuable as they are for their ivory, they might be still more valuable as weight-carriers. The idea of employing elephants as domestic animals of burden is not new, and many have testified to the patient and effective manner in which they apply their enormous strength in the service of man.

SHIP CHANNEL EXCAVATOR.

The dredging of a deep water channel for large ships by any of the several methods now in use is a laborious task in spite of all the improved machinery designed for the purpose, but an Irish inventor believes he has invented an apparatus which will do this work more economically and thoroughly than it can be accomplished by any of the old methods. He has taken out patents on the invention in eighteen different countries. The apparatus consists of a pair of large steel cylinders, with elongated lips projecting from the central portion which are adapted to engage the earth as the cylinders are drawn toward each other, scooping the earth into the rear portion of the cylinders. The arrangement is such that the vessel can be floated to any required position and then drawn apart to the required distance and sunk to the river bed. The controlling apparatus on the ship above then begins to tighten the chains, causing the cylinders to be forced toward each other, which presses the scoops into the earth and causes a layer of the material of any desired thickness to slide into the cylinders. When the latter are filled they are tilted backward until the opening is at the top. Then the water in the end compartment is forced out by injecting air and the vesseds rise to the surface, to be transported to the dumping ground.



IMPROVED DREDGING APPARATUS.

AGE OF THE BIG TREES.

An age as great as 5,000 years has sometimes been ascribed to the giant trees of California. Prof. Charles E. Bessey, of the University of Nebraska, regards this estimate as very much exaggerated. He says that he once counted with great care the rings of growth of a tree felled in 1853, and which was fully 24 or 25 feet in diameter, so that its stump served as the floor of a dancing pavilion. The rings numbered 1,147, and that number would represent the age of the tree in years. Professor Bessey adds that he gravely doubts whether any of the existing trees approach the age of 2,000 years.

BEET BEATS SUGAR-CANE.

According to a recent consular report from Magdeburg, Germany, the production of beet sugar in the world is now twice as great as that of cane sugar. This victory of the beet over the cane is ascribed to the influence of the science of chemistry in developing the industry of beet sugar making. This influence is especially exerted in Germany, where more than a thousand chemists are exclusively employed in the sugar factories. The manufacture of beet sugar has taken a sudden start in Spain since she lost her colonies in the war with the United States.

TRAINS WITH DOUBLE MOTORS.

Experiments are being made on the Wannsee railroad between Berlin and Zehlendorf, Germany, to determine the precise value of electric propulsion as a substitute for steam. The train used consists of eight ordinary cars, and is provided with an electric motor car at each end, the advantage of this arrangement being that the reversing of the train at the terminals of the journey becomes unnecessary. Thus far the electric power has proved to be about 15 per cent cheaper than steam power.

A TOBACCO SPEECH.

Eulogy of the Weed Applauded in the House.

It is not often that the Congressional Record contains such a unique contribution to literature as the speech which Representative Otey of Virginia delivered in the house on tobacco. Mr. Otey represents the Lynchburg district, in the tobacco growing section of his state, and his eulogy of the weed ought to keep him in congress for the remainder of his days. He is the especial advocate of a bill to allow a larger ration of tobacco to the soldiers in the army, and it was in advocacy of this measure that he delivered his speech. "It is a fact," asserted Mr. Otey, "that there is no solace in camp life or on shipboard like the pipe and nothing staves off hunger and thirst like the chew of tobacco." All the smokers and chewers in the house applauded this assertion, and then Mr. Otey went back to ancient history. He showed how, from its earliest discovery, tobacco has been considered a curative. He quoted an old practitioner of "physicke" who commended tobacco in 1610, and recalled the words of Hariot, who was one of Sir Walter Raleigh's expedition in 1584, and who said that tobacco was a notable preserver of health. He quoted some lines in praise of tobacco from Spenser's "Faerie Queene," and was especially applauded when he cited the case of a man who could not breathe and whose physician "directed him to take tobacco in fume and little by little he recovered his former strength." There was rapt attention in the house as Mr. Otey recited the chemical analysis of tobacco, with humorous comments on chloride of potassium, molic acid, silica, and ligneous matter. The peroration of the eulogy on tobacco is worth quoting: "His patriotism," said Major Otey, referring to the soldier, "expires only with his life; his soul is enraptured with enthusiasm, his memory is on the wing, and runs back with lightning quickness to the battles fought and victories won; but he will recall that the ration of tobacco plucked from his mind a rooted sorrow, razed out the written troubles of his brain, and with this sweet oblivious antidote cleansed the bosom of perilous stuff that weighed upon his heart."—Washington Post.

CHEAP CAR RIDES.

Street Car Line That Carries Passengers for Nothing in Congo.

Boma is the capital of the Congo Free State. It is fifty miles from the mouth of the river. Fifteen years ago Boma was nothing but a rocky hill at the base of which stretched a great marsh, the prolific source of tropical fevers. A great change has been wrought in the appearance and conditions of Boma. A number of long streets have been built over the hill. This height has been dug down and leveled so that it is no longer difficult to reach it from the bank of the river. The marshes have been drained, beautiful little parks now flourish, and the Boma of today is a smiling, flourishing town. Piers extend out into the river and vessels from Europe tie up at these iron structures and discharge their cargoes directly into the little cars that are pulled by small steam engines along the main street of Boma. The peculiarity of this steam tramway is that it makes no charge to any one who desires to ride on it. The entire populace of Boma may travel between the town and the river without paying a cent. Passenger trains, however, run only four times a day. The man on the street corner who desires to hail a train must sometimes find it a rather long time to wait. Though the passenger service is so infrequent the trains are running about all the time, for Boma is a very busy place, and Royal avenue, through which the tramway runs, is lined with stores. The cars carry goods from the steamers to the shops of Royal avenue, or palm oil and other native products down to the wharves. At times, however, when several days have elapsed after the arrival of a steamer, there may be no freightage business, but the tramway is as busy as ever, for then big loads of dirt are hauled from one part of Royal avenue to another in the still uncompleted work of leveling the town.—New York Sun.

A MERRY HEART.

Presence of a Jovial Man Is Like a Medicine.

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," says the Proverbs, but there are different degrees of merriment, and different effects following its exercise. The man who keeps a merry heart through paths of pain and hours of sorrow and years of care; who, standing on the rock of faith, gazes ahead through storms and sunshine alike with a "cheerful countenance," this one imparts confidence, impresses his own convictions, sheds comfort on those around him, and his presence is "like a medicine" to such as need him. And who is there who doesn't need, at some time, the inspiring brightness of the man with a merry heart? Of the woman, for that matter. Women can bear up under greater trials than men can; so I believe the man with a merry heart is most apt to be a woman after all's said and done. At birth, we all have planted within us the seed of that which "maketh the heart glad," and well cultivated, the germ grows to the life of completeness, wherein is given place this agreeable possession called a "merry heart." We all ought to have it in full blossom—swaying in every breath from heaven, and shedding fragrance, brightness and joy on all around.—Farm Journal.

Sleep Themselves to Death.

Explorer Jacques Dibon, lecturing before the Geographical Society of Paris, described a strange city in the French Senegal colony, once busily prosperous, but now almost abandoned. Some gradual change in the climate or soil has caused increasing drowsiness. Most of the inhabitants slept twenty hours daily. Some even fell asleep while walking, and many have slept to death, their friends finding it impossible to arouse them even after several days of uninterrupted lethargy. The explorer says that neither himself nor any of the colonial doctors was able to discover the real cause of the phe

A Good One on Eddy.

Congressman Frank Eddy of Minnesota rather takes pride in the fact that he is the shabbiest man in either branch of the national legislature. He even tells a story now and then at his own expense. The other day, he says, he was walking down the shady side of Pennsylvania avenue when he was accosted by a specimen of the genus hobo. The man was ragged, unkempt and haggard. In husky tones he confided to Mr. Eddy that he was hungry, and asked for the price of a meal. The congressmen looked at the tramp through his thick glasses, and slowly dug down into his trousers pockets. Finally he fished up a quarter and handed it to him.

"It's all I've got," said Mr. Eddy in his usual solemn tones. "And to tell the truth, I don't know just where my next meal is coming from. But you take it. You look hungry."

The man started to put the coin into his pocket, and then paused. He cast a comprehensive look at his benefactor and then handed it back to him.

"Here pard," said he, "I'm pretty much on the bum; but there are worse" There were tears in the tramp's eyes. "I believe in doing the square thing. You keep it, and I'll rustle some guy in the next block."

Before he could stop him the kind hearted hobo had forced the quarter into Mr. Eddy's hand and was shuffling on in search of another victim.

In setting and distributing type a compositor's hand travels on an average 11 miles a day. Leaving Sundays and holidays out of account, this means about 3,000 miles a year. More than half the deaths among compositors are due to lung diseases. In the course of his lifetime an average man gets through about 5,500 miles of reading matter.—Ex.

We have been informed by a very reliable person that John T. Knight, Judge of Probate for Red Lake county is in the habit of refusing to allow patrons of the Spectator to publish probate notices in this paper; giving as his reason that the Spectator did not support him in the last campaign. The Spectator always fights in the open and we will give Judge Knight fair warning that if this occurs again, we will have a little fun on our own account.

Our Race of Money.

"If it is not true that we Americans regard money-making as the work for which life was given to us, why, when we have millions, do we go on struggling to make more millions--and more? writes "An American Mother," in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "It is not so with the older races. The London tradesman of middle age shuts his shop, buys an acre in the suburbs and lives on a small income or spends the rest of his life in losing it in poultry or fancy gardening. The German or Frenchman seldom works when past sixty. He gives his last years to some study or hobby—music, a microscope, or it may be dominoes. You meet him and his wife, jolly, shrewd, intelligent, jogging all over Europe, Baedeker in hand. They tell you they have a curiosity to see this fine world before they go out of it."

Recipes for Removing Spots.

Having had several very earnest requests to send a preparation once given in this paper by some of the household readers, I will try to do the best I can for you as well as I remember. It was an excellent sponging preparation which can be made and bottled and kept for any emergency, and is simple to use. It is as follows; "Boil a dessertspoonful of pearline in a large cupful of hot water for three minutes, stirring all the while to keep it smooth. Turn this into a little jar or large-necked bottle and keep it on hand, as it forms thick, jelly-like paste, which can be reduced if necessary; but for good sponging it needs only to be applied with a damp cloth, then after the soilure disppears, rinse off with a cloth wrung out in clear, warm water. Coat collars and back of gowns oily from wearing, and spots of grease or soil may all be removed nicely with this preparation. It is necessary to brush a garment well before applying this, leaving no dust. I am glad to be able to help the readers of this valuable paper.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Corresndent

It now seems that the cause of Senator Hanna's confidence in the passage of the subsidy bill lies in his intention to tack it as a rider onto the River and Harbor bill. This sort of thing is admittedly vicious and is absolutely forbidden by the rules of the House. The Senate, however, can do what is pleased and if it should adopt the plan mentioned, the House would have to consider its action. Meanwhile, desperate efforts are being made by Senator Hanna to create a sentimant throughout the country favorable to the bill. In this city a press bureau has been organized for the purpose of supplying newspaper correspondents with information bearing its progress. Another has been mailing by the ton literature favoring it, and a third has been directly in correspondence with the leading members of business, financial and commercial exchanges urging action in its support. Such bureaus cost enormously, and there is much curiosity to know what disinterested citizens are financing it.

Senator Allen, just before the filibuster against the Army Reorganization bill was abandoned, made a red hot speech against the McKinley policy in the Philippines, which made a large army necessary—in his own words: "I am opposed to this bill, because its avowed purpose is to provide soldiers to be sent to the Philippines." He paid his compliments to Senator Hawley, who had denounced the petition signed by 2,000 Filipinos, presented to the Senate by Senator Tellor, as treasonable, by saying: "The flippancy with which the terms traitor and treason are being used these days is getting to be a stench in the nostrils of some of us." Incidentally he gave the West Pointers in the army a few side swipes and expressed the opinion that the officers who has never been to West Point were among the best in the army. Referring to the investigation now being made in West Point by a committee of the House, Mr. Allen said: "Look at this investigation going on now. This thing called hazing. Why, the prize fighter is a gentleman, the bull-baiter is a gentleman, when compared with the cadets at West Point. This hazing takes place within the knowledge of the officers of the institution."

The Popular Vote for President.

There is never any official announcement of the popular vote for president the nearest approach of it being tabulations of the popular vote in each state as officially announced. It is rare that any two such tabulations exactly agree, for discrepancies arise from the fact that one table may take as its basis the largest vote received by any elector, while another may take the average vote of the electors. A tabulation of the vote cast last November, which is at least approximately accurate, shows a total of 13,955,518 votes. President McKinley received 7,214,863 votes and Mr. Bryan 6,357,233. Mr. McKinley's plurality was 854,630 and his majority 463,208. The Prohibitionists cast 208,632 votes; the Populists 46,369; the Social Democrats 92,121; the Social Labor party 33,183, and the Union Reform party 5,698.—Youth's Companion.

A CRY FOR HELP.

Result of a Prompt Reply.—Two Letters from Mrs. Watson, Published by Special Permission.—For Women's Eyes Only.

March 15, 1899.

To MRS. PINKHAM, LYNN, MASS.:

"DEAR MADAM:—I am suffering from inflammation of the ovaries and womb, and have been for eighteen months. I have a continual pain and soreness in my back and side. I am only free from pain when lying down, or sitting in an easy chair. When I stand I suffer with severe pain in my side and back. I believe my troubles were caused by over work and lifting some years ago.

"Life is a drag to me, and I sometimes feel like giving up ever being a well woman; have become careless and unconcerned about everything. I am in bed now. I have had several doctors, but they did me but little good.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been recommended to me by a friend, and I have made up my mind to give it a fair trial.

"I write this letter with the hope of hearing from you in regard to my case."—MRS. S. J. WATSON, Hampton, Va.

MRS. S. J. WATSON.

November 27, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to acknowledge to you the benefit that your advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"I had been suffering with female troubles for some time, could walk but a short distance, had terrible bearing down pains in lower part of my bowels, backache, and pain in ovary. I used your medicine for four months and was so much better that I could walk three times the distance that I could before.

"I am to-day in better health than I have been for more than two years, and I know it is all due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I recommend your advice and medicine to all women who suffer."—MRS. S. J. WATSON, Hampton, Va.

AROUND THE CAMPFIRE

The Emblem of the Free.

O, see that banner floating there,
Its stars so bright and stripes so fair;
It is the emblem of the free
That waves o'er land and sea.
No finer flag in all this world
Was ever to the breeze unfurled;
And conquered it shall never be,
This flag of liberty.

No North, no South, no East, no West,
No one can say who loves it best;
Each loyal heart it thrills to see
This emblem of the free.
Those stripes of red, that field of blue,
Those stars that sparkle like the dew
Our joy and pride shall ever be,
This flag of liberty.

If o'er our homes these colors stream,
Or on the field of battle gleam;
In peace or war our guide shall be
This emblem of the free.
Let all who love sweet freedom's land
Beneath this banner firmly stand;
And conquered it shall never be,
This flag of liberty.

An Englishwoman Who Became a Soldier

History records several instances of women enlisting as soldiers or sailors and serving long terms undiscovered, even fighting in battle and being wounded. One of the most notable of these queer people was Hannah Snell, an Englishwoman. She was born in 1723, and was a strong, healthy lass, fond of outdoor work of any sort, who much preferred pitching hay or driving a mettlesome horse to the ordinary round of work in the kitchen. When she was 20 years old she married a sailor named Summs, a good-for-nothing fellow, who squandered her small savings and deserted her within six months. Hannah resolved to find her worthless husband and punish him if possible, so she donned a suit of his old clothes and set out and walked to Portsmouth. Here her search was unsuccessful and her few shillings being at an end, she enlisted in a regiment of infantry and was sent to Carlisle, near the Scottish border. Soldier life proved very attractive from the first. Hannah quickly learned the drill and was much liked by her officers and comrades, going from station to station quite unsuspected. But soon a young man whom she had known at home joined the same company; fearful of being recognized by him, she deserted, walked across England and re-enlisted under another name in the city of London. Her new regiment being immediately ordered to India, Hannah soon found herself aboard a transport. Here she was not long in becoming a favorite with every one by reason of her skill in sewing and cooking, and for real bravery during several severe storms that nearly wrecked the ship. England and France were fighting for the possession of India at that time, and Hannah's regiment had no sooner arrived off the southeastern coast of that country than it was sent on shore to take part in the siege of Pondicherry, a town held by the French army. Eleven weeks they lay before the place, suffering hardships that broke down many a strong soldier, but Hannah stuck to her duties and was in the very front at several assaults upon the city. Rain finally forced the British to abandon their position, and in fording a river under fire during the retreat she received twelve wounds, several of which were both painful and dangerous. By the aid of a Hindoo woman in the hospital, to whom Hannah revealed her secret, she succeeded in remaining undiscovered during the long months needed for her recovery. Quite undaunted by her suffering, she set out for England, working her passage as an ordinary seaman in a home-bound ship in all sorts of weather. Voyages were long and tedious in those days, and it was some months before she arrived at Lisbon, Portugal. Always on the watch for news of her husband, she made inquiries ashore among sailors from all parts of the world, and was at last rewarded by finding a seaman who had made a voyage with Summs a year previous. According to his story they touched at Genoa, Italy, where Summs, being found guilty of murder while carousing ashore, had been sewed in a sack and cast into the sea—a common enough eighteenth century punishment. A short time after this Hannah landed in England, and, her search being ended, obtained an honorable discharge from the service, with a pension of $100 a year besides. This enabled her to set up as a landlady of an inn near London, where many people came to see her and listen to her own account of her strange career. She prospered and was quite satisfied to lead an uneventful life to the end of her days, but her odd experiences had shown her the superiority of men's clothes and she never wore skirts again.—Chicago Record.

Significance of Our Flag.

There is much to be said for the American abundance of the flag. It is a sacrament of the national life—an outward and visible sign of the inward grace of nationality. The nation is an unseen thing, making itself outwardly visible through such symbols. "The kingdom of heaven is within you," some one quoted to Frederick Maurice. "Yes, and so is the kingdom of England," he answered. So is the American republic. But it naturally seeks expression in symbols, and the flag, with us, takes the place of many symbols which are possessed by other countries, but not by us. Kingship is a symbol with which we dispense, although the disposition to fuss over our presidents personally has grown of late years, and is essentially a monarchical tendency. The flag stands for the nation, says the Saturday Evening Post. It is the symbol of the bond which unites the whole country, from Alaska to Florida, from Campobello island to the Golden Gate. It stands for that historic past whose life we share through participation in the life of the nation. It identifies each of us with the whole American people, near and far, past and present, and even yet to come. Its forms are not things of beauty, for the straight line is not the line of beauty. But they have a historic sense which more than compensates for their lack of grace. It speaks of the past, when the thirteen feeble colonies arrayed themselves against the first empire of the world, and made the unlucky number forever fortunate. It speaks of the present, when the handful of corn on the tops of the mountain has grown to be a forest like the cedars of Lebanon. It tells us of triumph, of growth, of unity in willing submission to the lawful authority of a free government. Let it wave in the daily sight of every American citizen, for its significance is as inexhaustible as it is broadly democratic.

Specialists Required in War.

Gradually, as the science of war has extended to the more minute details of military activity, the success of this training and education has given birth to a number of special schools in Germany. In addition to the numerous cadet schools there have been established in recent years a large number of technical academies devoted entirely to the training of soldiers in some particular branch of the service. For instance, there is the shooting school for infantry at Spandau, the fencing school for officers in Berlin, and in various parts of Germany the several artillery schools where soldiers are taught to handle the larger weapons of war. In short, there are schools for everything from field surgery to horseshoeing. Finally, there is the Kriegs Akademie, a sort of war college, such as it is now proposed to establish in the United States, where officers are trained in the strategy of high command.—Munsey's Magazine.

An Analytical Scotchman.

A famous Scotch colonel tells the following story in his reminiscences: A young sabaltern of his own nationality was one day on guard with another officer at Gibraltar, when the latter fell over the rock and was killed. The subaltern, however, made no mention of the accident in his guard report, but left the addendum, "Nothing extraordinary since guard mounting," standing without qualification. Some hours afterward the brigade general came to demand explanations. "You say, sir, in your report 'Nothing extraordinary since guard mounting,' when your own fellow-officer has fallen down a rocky precipice 400 feet deep and had been killed!" "Well, general," replied Lieut. Sandy, slowly, "I dinna think there's anything extraordinary in that. If he had fallen doon a precipice 400 feet deep and not been killed I should ha' thocht it extraordinary and put in doon in ma reepoort."

Lord Kitchener's Reproof.

A certain yeomanry commander, while on parade, rated his men in unmeasured terms. Nothing was right that the troopers did. They sat their horses wrong, they moved unlike machinery, etc., and were "no better than a d—— rabble," "a lot of gutter snipes," etc. "That," said Lord Kitchener, who came up, "is not the way to address men. They are not a d—— rabble, but soldiers, and to be spoken to as such. No troops can be trained in that fashion, and the commander who does not respect his men is unable to lead them." The whole force, we are told, heard the observation, and the men were as decorously elated as the yeomanry officer was obviously crestfallen.—Daily American.

Barrack System for Navy.

Admiral Crowninshield this year renews his argument for the extension of the barrack system in the navy, calling attention to the fact that our receiving ships are nothing more nor less than poorly constructed, ill-ventilated, badly lighted, unsanitary, old-fashioned, floating houses (and in many cases they often fail in being afloat, for after years of lying at the same berth their keels are frequently deep in the mud). Within fifty feet of any one of them a modern barracks would have every advantage of the water that any of these ships have, and besides would have all the advantages of modern construction and sanitation.

Four Out of Five Rejected.

Out of more than 40,000 applicants at federal navy recruiting stations during the latest governmental year only 8,128 were accepted, and of these a noteworthy percentage were re-enlistments. Man-o'-war's men nowadays must possess peculiar qualifications and knowledge and in order to acquire these qualifications there must be schooling in actual service.

A Cape Times correspondent has interviewed Mrs. De Wet, wife of the Boer general. She said: "You Englishmen will never catch my husband. He is going to win back for the Free Staters and Transvaalers what they have lost. He has enough food and ammunition to last for three years, and that is just how long the war is going to last."

NERVOUS WOMEN CURED BY Dr. Greene's NERVURA.

THE ceaseless drudgery of household cares is more than the strongest man could endure, and it is no wonder that women show the effects of work and worry.

Thousands of women in offices, shops, and factories break down in health under the strain and become weak, tired, nervous, and debilitated, tortured with female complaints, or racked by headache, neuralgia, backache, and kidney trouble.

Here lies the great strain upon the nervous systems of women. They have little or no rest; their life is one continual round of work, duties here, duties there, duties without number. What wonder that such women go to bed at night fatigued, and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning!

Dr. Greene's NERVURA FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

What women need is that great strengthener and invigorator of womankind, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy—that remedy which rebuilds health and strength, purifies and enriches the blood, gives strength and vigor to the nerves, and the strong vitality and energy to the system which will enable women to do their work and yet keep strong and well. It is this great medicine they need. Nothing else in the world can do its work.

MRS. M. D. PERKINS, of 100 G St., So. Boston, Mass., says:

"I was completely run down and could not eat, for the sight of food made me sick. I did not sleep at night and was as tired in the morning as when I retired at night. My head and back ached all the time. I was completely exhausted if I tried to do my housework, and could not walk without being dizzy. I was excessively nervous and very weak.

"Then I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I cannot say enough in its praise. I have not felt so well for years as I do at the present time, thanks to this splendid remedy.

"I can now eat and sleep soundly, waking mornings strong and refreshed. I do my housework, which is now a pleasure instead of a burden as formerly. My weight has increased about twelve pounds in the last two months. I would recommend any one afflicted as I have been to use this wonderful remedy."

Dr. Greene Will Advise You Without Charge.

The benefit of Dr. Greene's special advice is at the disposal of every sickly woman, and it is well to write for it or call and see Dr. Greene at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City. Doing so may shorten the time required for recovery of full strength, and give information which will guide aright in the future. Absolute confidence is observed in all consultations, and no charge is made.

LAST LOOK AT QUEEN

FEATURES NOW FOREVER HIDDEN FROM VIEW.

Royal Family Take a Last Fond Look at the Face of the Dead Queen — Coffin Then Closed by King Edward's Order, Never to Be Opened Again—Emperor William Weeps Bitterly — Edward Overcome by His Emotions—Funeral Service Read.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 26.—The royal family took their last look at the features of the dead queen. About 11 o'clock yesterday morning the shell was brought into the bedroom where was waiting King Edward, Emperor William, the duke of Connaught, Sir James Reid and the royal ladies. The latter having retired, Sir James Reid, with reverent hands, assisted by three trusted household servants and in the presence of the king, the emperor and the duke, removed the body from the bed to the coffin. In death it was lovelier than in the closing days of death. Not a trace of the ravages of disease was visible. The servants having retired, Queen Alexandra, the princess and children were recalled and with lingering steps and stifled sobs they passed slowly before the white robed and peaceful figure. At the foot, never moving, stood the king, and when the mourning crowd had passed there remained only of the dead. Emperor William wept even more bitterly than the royal ladies. Finally he also retired and the king was left alone. Sir James Reid, beckoning the servants, who were holding the coffin lid, asked the king's instructions. For a few seconds the king stood speechless, stifled with emotion at the last farewell. Then he said quickly: "Close it finally. It must not be opened again."

The Son and Grandson

Thus the remains of England's former monarch were closed forever from human sight. The remains were borne into the diningroom. Officers and men of the royal yachts took their stand around the coffin, over which the king and kaiser respectfully laid the robes of Knight of the Garter presenting at the head a diamond crown. Beneath lay the royal ensign, while hanging above was the Union Jack. At the altar was the rector of Whippingham, who read a portion of in the presence of the royal family. Emperor William covered his head with his hands and the grief of Princess Beatrice was pitiful. After the benediction each placed a wreath upon the coffin and then all retired.

The correspondent of the Associated Press has been informed that the queen's will has not been opened, and under the present arrangements it will not be opened until after the funeral, its details being unknown to the royal family. There is no truth in the statement that King Edward and Emperor William knelt beside the dying queen and swore to preserve peace.

According to an attache at Osborne house King Edward desires to be styled his imperial majesty in order to emphasize the fact that he is emperor as well as king.

Invaders Are Daily Becoming More Unpopular With the People of Cape Colony.

London, Jan. 27.—A dispatch received at the war office from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Jan. 24, mentions unimportant contacts with Delarey's and Haasbroek's commands; that a score of Boers have been captured, and that Gen. Methuen has cleared Griqualand. The invaders have done little harm in Cape Colony. They have not been joined by the inhabitants, with whom they are daily becoming more unpopular.

They say that the party has been having a big time, and the governor is enjoying it so well that he has decided to stay two or three weeks longer. He had killed six large mountain lions and three smaller ones up to the time these gentlemen were obliged to return to their homes and business. They say the newspaper reports have been exaggerated, but the governor placed the muzzle of his gun into the mouth of a big lion in order to pry it away from the dogs after they had all but killed it. He then finished the beast with his knife.

While going up in the car she suddenly fainted, as a result, it is believed of having watched the vaccination process, and, falling forward, her head was caught between the floor and the ascending car. Her head was badly crushed, and she died within five minutes.

IN QUEEN'S MEMORY

APPROPRIATE SERVICES HELD THROUGHOUT GREAT BRITAIN.

At St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey Enormous Crowds Attend the Services — Thousands Turned Away From the Churches Unable to Gain Admission — Mourners at Osborne Attend Memorial Services—King Edward Appoints the Kaiser a Field Marshal in Honor of His Birthday.

London, Jan. 28.—Services in memory of Queen Victoria were held yesterday throughout the United Kingdom.

At St. Paul's cathedral there was an unusual scene. Before 9 o'clock in the morning an enormous crowd, wholly attired in black, streamed from all directions to the vast edifice, and by 10 o'clock it was packed. Thousands, unable to obtain admission, stood vainly waiting on the steps and around the building, listening to the low organ strains and muffled peal. The service began at 10:20. Most Rev. Frederick Temple, primate and archbishop of Canterbury, preached a most touching sermon.

There were similar scenes at Westminster Abbey, where all the services throughout the day were attended by enormous congregations. The large assemblage in the chapel royal at St. James Palace included Princess Frederick of Hanover, Princess Frances of Tek, a host of titled people, many members of the cabinet and other distinguished persons. All the Roman Catholic and foreign churches in England held special memorial services.

Services at Cowes.

Cowes, Jan. 28. — The mourners at Osborne house gathered at noon yesterday in the little flint and plaster church at Whippingham. The bishop of Winchester preached a simple, touching sermon on the late queen's worth and example. He spoke of the presence of the "great ruler of the German peoples, who is simply taking his place quietly as the grandson of Queen Victoria, thereby cementing by the force of sentiment, which is keener and further reaching than any force on earth, the undying friendship of the two great kindred branches of our race. To him on this day, his birthday, all England, even in her sorrow, is paying a tribute of gladness because of his ungrudging homage."

HONORS FOR WILLIAM.

Created a Field Marshal in the British Army on His Birthday.

Cowes, Jan. 28.—Yesterday morning Emperor William received from the hand of the duke of Connaught his sword on his appointment as field marshal of the British army in the presence of the househoulds of King Edward and the dead queen, as well as a number of British and German naval officers. His majesty expressed great delight at the appointment. He will entertain King Edward and the members of the royal family at tea on the imperial yacht Hohenzollern.

Yesterday he celebrated his birthday at Osborne and received congratulations from members of the German embassy in London. Emperor William sent messages to Lord Salisbury and Earl Roberts expressing his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him. In addition to the sword King Edward presented to Emperor William, already a Knight of the Garter, the insignia of the order in diamonds. The fact that this gift was ordered by the late queen with the intention of presenting it on the kaiser's birthday, gave a pathetic interest to the presentation.

Germans Are Pleased.

London, Jan. 28. — All the morning papers comment with keen satisfaction upon the exchange of courtesies between King Edward and Emperor William and the telegraphic correspondence between the kaiser and Lord Salisbury and Lord Roberts, pointing out that all this will bind more firmly the Anglo-German friendship.

Observed in aMny Pulpits.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Memorial services in honor of Queen Victoria were held in fifty different churches in this city. There was no concert or movement and no pre-arranged program, each service being conducted independently. The life and character of the late queen were highly extolled by all the ministers.

Services in Washington.

Washington, Jan. 28. — Queen Victoria's life, reign and death formed the theme in many Washington pulpits yesterday, while in most of the local churches of all denominations fitting reference was made to the demise of the ruler of the British empire.

CO-OPERATES WITH CONGRESS.

War Department Defers Action in Report on West Point Hazing.

Washington, Jan. 28.—After further consideration of the subject the secretary of war has concluded to defer action in the report of the Brooke court of inquiry into the matter of hazing at the military academy until congress shall have had an opportunity to act on the report of the special committee now investigating the same subject. He said that the war department was co-operating with the congressional committee for the abolition of hazing at the academy, and that he saw no advantage in action by the department in the matter at this stage.

The minimum output under the lease is 100,000 tons a year [illegible]

INDIAN SCARE DYING DOWN.

Reports of the Uprising Are Greatly Exaggerated.

Omaha, Jan. 27.—Gen. Lee last night received a telegraphic report from Lieut. Dixon, commanding the troop of cavalry sent to the scene of the Creek Indian troubles. He states that he has not yet made a full investigation, but has learned enough to warrant his saying that the reports of an uprising have been greatly exaggerated. Thus far he has encountered no Indians and from civilians he learns there has been no violence on the part of the Indians and he anticipates none. The report of Lieut. Dixon comes from Henrietta, which place he reached during the forenoon.

Has Been Greatly Exaggerated.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 27.—Dispatches from various points in the Indian Territory and along the Oklahoma border show that the Indian scare has been greatly exaggerated. There are some who fear trouble and are preparing for a brush with redskins, but those in authority say that there is now no danger. A telegram from Checotah, Ind. T., says:

"H. G. Turner of Brush Hill, where the Snake band of Indians are supposed to be in camp, was in Checotah this morning and says there is no truth in the report from Eaufaula of Indian uprisings. The Indians, he says, who are supposed to be indulging in war dances are at work."

A special from South McAlester says that the arrival of the troops in the territory and the prompt measures taken by the government in the Northern district to suppress the Snakes have been reported to the Choctaw faction and have had the effect of dampening enthusiasm.

Sheriff Asks for Troops.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 27. — Matters seemed to have quieted yesterday morning in the Indian scare along the eastern border, but at noon the following telegram was received by the governor:

"Situation along our border serious. I cannot be responsible for the safety of our people unless militia is ordered out at once.

—"William Tilghman, Sheriff."

At 1 o'clock the governor held a consultation over the telephone with Col. Hoffman and Sheriff Tilghman at Chandler, and they stated that many depredations were being committed over the line in the Creek reservation, both by the Indians and by outlaws, but up to that time nobody had crossed the line and there was no positive evidence of any intention to cross to commit any overt acts on this side of the line. The governor advised that a close watch be kept along the line and advise sent him of any overt act against citizens or property in Oklahoma, but until there was some attempt to cross the line to commit some such act he did not feel that he would be justified in ordering the national guard to the scene.

CABMAN SUES CARLISLE.

He Wants $2,000 Damages for Alleged False Arrest.

New York, Jan. 27.—John G. Carlisle, who was secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland, has been sued by a cab driver for $2,000 damages. He denied that Mrs. Carlisle used his cab.

The Legislature

Proceedings of the Week in the . . . . . State Law Mill . . .

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 22. — The house, in a fourteen-minute session yesterday morning, did nothing but resolve to make the election of a senator a special order for to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

The chaplain made a touching reference to the illness of Queen Victoria in his prayer, and Mr. Roberts of Hennepin at once offered the resolution making the election a special order.

Mr. Hendricks introduced a bill providing for the transfer of $400,000 of the taxes collected from the railroads under the gross earnings law to the road and bridge fund.

The seventy-five members present were not inclined to do any work and the house adjourned at 10:27.

In the Senate.

The session of the senate yesterday morning lasted just fifteen minutes.

The only important matter before that body was the announcement by Lieut. Gov. Smith of the committee to pass upon the state board of control bill. The members of this committee are Senators Snyder, Thompson, Everett, Somerville and Potter.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—Knute Nelson for the long term and Moses E. Clapp for the short term yesterday received the majority vote in the separate branches of the legislature. The election of these gentlemen to the United States senate will be formally completed to-day when the legislature meets in joint session to review the vote and declare the result.

In the senate there were no nominating speeches, the lieutenant governor announcing the special order at 11 o'clock.

The roll call on the long term was at once proceeded with. Senator McCusick and Senator Ryder, Republicans, and Fitzpatrick, Democrat, were absent. The members present voted on straight party lines, the minority members voting for R. R. Nelson without a break.

For the short term a diversion was created when Senator McNamee voted for Moses E. Clapp instead of Charles A. Towne and drew a round of applause for himself.

Knute Nelson was declared to have received 42 votes against 18 for R. R. Nelson, and Moses E. Clapp 43 votes against 17 for Towne.

In the house Speaker Dowling announced the special order at the same time as in the senate.

Mr. Ward of Alexander nominated Knute Nelson for the long term and Mr. Hickey of Ramsey nominated R. R. Nelson. The ballot was recorded on strict party lines, Messrs. Smith and Alford being absent, the vote stood: Knute Nelson, 94; R. R. Nelson, 22.

For the short term Mr. Dunn nominated Gen. Clapp and Mr. Pennington put Senator Towne in nomination. Again there was a deflection from Towne, Mr. Umland of Ramsey simply shaking his head when his name was called. He was recorded as present and refusing to vote.

The speaker announced that the house and senate would meet in joint convention in the hall of the house at noon to-day for the purpose of the formal election.

In the Senate.

Senator Halvorsen introduced an anti-cigarette bill in the senate yesterday morning. The bill is brief and to the point, providing for a fine of $50 against any one who sells or gives away cigarettes of cigarette paper within this state. The bill went into the hands of the judiciary committee.

Senator Jepson introduced a bill copied somewhat after the Minneapolis wine room ordinance. It forbids the maintaining of booths, stalls or wine rooms in places where intoxicating liquors are sold. The bill was referred to the temperance committee.

Other bills were presented as follows: By Senator Young, to establish joint liability of husband and wife for domestic debts; referred to judiciary. By Senator Wilson, to establish new probate code; referred to judiciary.

Just before the senate adjourned Secretary Julius Schmahl of the house reported the introduction of a joint memorial to congress requesting a constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States senators by the direct vote of the people.

In the House.

In the house of representatives this morning Representative Roberts of Hennepin county presented a memorial to congress in the form of a bill asking the national congress to pass a constitutional amendment requiring the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. The rules were suspended and the bill passed unanimously.

Mr. Roberts also introduced a memorial to congress asking that that body pass an amendment requesting the legislatures of the various states to confer on congress the right to pass legislation looking toward the repression, government or abolishment of trusts.

Mr. Noyes introduced a bill providing for state labor employment bureaus at St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Stillwater and Grand Rapids, where free information can be secured by those who are in search of employment.

Mr. Hickey of Ramsey introduced a bill, the object of which will be a reduction of interest on deferred payments on school lands. The present law fixes the interest rate at 7 per cent. Mr. Hickey would reduce the interest to 5 per cent.

The house adjourned until 11 o'clock.

[illegible]

In the House.

Representative Deming of Hennepin offered a resolution of condolence with the people of Great Britain on the loss they have sustained by the death of Queen Victoria, reciting her virtues as a woman and ruler and requiring that the flag over the capitol be displayed at half-mast as a token of respect on the part of the state. There was no objection to the resolution and it was passed unanimously. [illegible] public session was very brief and [illegible] tureless.

Mr. Whitford, by request, introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a commission to codify the laws.

Mr. Swanson offered a bill providing for the orgaization of state banks with a capital of $10,000 in towns of 1,000 inhabitants and requiring a capitalization of $15,000 in towns of 1,500.

In the Senate.

The senate spent considerable time in a debate over a request make by Senator McKusick. He wanted to be recorded as having cast his ballot for Moses E. Clapp and Knute Nelson. His request caused half a dozen senators to raise objections on the ground that such a change of record of the senate journal would be a falsification. The chair ruled the change could be made if carried on a motion. The motion was ultimately lost, however, by a vote on roll call of 34 to 18.

Ten bills were given their initial readings. Senator J. D. Jones introduced a bill amending the law governing banks and trust companies, somewhat along the lines suggested by Public Examiner Pope in his annual report. Senator Benedict presented a bill imposing annual fees to go into the public examiner's contingent fund, to be paid by banks and trust companies.

Senator J. H. Smith presented a bill appropriating $75,000 for seed loans at 4 per cent interest, to farmers whose crops during 1900 were a partial of total failure.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 25. — Representative Hurd of Ramsey introduced resolutions in the house providing for the placing in the new capitol of statues of Senator C. K. Davis, H. H. Sibley and Former Senator Ramsey. The resolutions were referred to a committee. Mr. Hurd also introduced a resolution requiring that the state oil inspector make a report of the annual amount of fees collected by his office during the past two years.

A memorial from residents of Polk county asking that a county local option law be passed was received and referred to the committee on temperance.

Mr. Allen introduced a bill excluding cigarettes from the state and prohibiting their sale or use. It was referred to the committee on public health.

The report of the conference committee on the composition of the joint apportionment committee was adopted.

The Sweet kidnapping bill was reported, with a recommendation that it pass and was put on its passage.

The house adjourned until Monday evening.

In the Senate.

In the absence of Lieut. Gov. Smith Senator Stockton presided over the short session of the senate yesterday.

The dispute between the senate and the house was settled by the report of the senate committee on reapportionment recommending the joint committee consist of fourteen members of the senate and seventeen of the house. The report was unanimously adopted.

Senator Gausewitz presented a bill to allow cities to act as trustees in case of bequests for educational purposes. This bill is to allow Owatonna to receive $20,000 for the establishment of a city kindergarten, which money was left to the city by the late H. H. Roseback. The bill was referred to the committee on corporations.

On recommendation of the committee on corporations and motion of Senator Coller the bill permitting A. O. U. W. and M. W. A. lodges to incorporate was favorably taken up and passed.

Senator Schaller wanted a time set for action in regard to approval or disapproval of ex-Gov. Lind's recess appointees. Thursday next was set for hearing in the matter. The senate then adjourned until Monday evening.

AMERICAN DESERTERS.

They Have eBen Committing Depredations in China — Many Lawless Acts.

Tien-tsin, Jan. 26.—The United States transport Sumner, which has arrived at Taku, brought 150 troops to replace Americans who had been invalided.

Two deserters from the American troops with an American flag have recently committed acts of depredation in the surrounding country, and have blackmailed the villagers. Both were captured, but one succeeded in making his escape and is still at large. It is probable that they will beshot.

Three sikhs who were found guilty of similar acts were taken to the scene of their depredations and given fifty lashes each.

Many lawless acts are being committed. A French soldier has been sentenced to a term of five years in prison for drawing his bayonet upon an Australian policeman. Two Frenchmen have been shot and an American has been stabbed in saloon brawls. The French soldiers draw their bayonets upon the slightest provocation.

AMERICANS PROTEST.

La Guayara, Venez., Jan. 26—The situation, so far as it affects the Bermudez Asphalt company, grows more critical every hour. All the negroes and other laborers are menaced and oppressed by the local authorities, or they desert, thus leaving the plant at the asphalt lake without assistance. The American colony in Venezuela continues to protest against the indifference with which American lives and property are regarded.

Rumor in New York That the Terms Have Been Arranged.

New York, Jan. 27.—The Journal of Commerce says: It was reported in Wall street after the close of business that terms had been arranged in the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and St. Paul deal. According to this story the first two railway companies named will issue a 3 1-2 per cent. collateral trust bond and give it in exchange for St. Paul common stock in the proportion somewhere between 175 and 200 in the par of the bond for par of St. Paul.

PLUNDER IN BIBLES.

Chicago Milkman's Hiding Place for Alleged Stolen Jewelry.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—With the plunder of a score of burglaries hidden in hollow Bibles and other books, Charles Ohman, a milkman, was arrested last night. The alleged thefts were committed when Ohman was delivering milk. The books had been reduced to a shell by cutting away the inner part of the leaves, making a hiding place

To Mothers of Large Families.

In this workaday world few women are so placed that physical exertion is not constantly demanded of them in their daily life.

Mrs. Pinkham makes a special appeal to mothers of large families whose work is never done, and many of whom suffer, and suffer for lack of intelligent aid.

To women, young or old, rich or poor, Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., extends her invitation of free advice. Oh, women! do not let your lives be sacrificed when a word from Mrs. Pinkham, at the first approach of weakness, may fill your future years with healthy joy.

MRS. CARRIE BELLEVILLE.

"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was not able to do my housework. I suffered terribly at time of menstruation. Several doctors told me they could do nothing for me. Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine I am now well, and can do the work for eight in the family.

"I would recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers with large families."—MRS. CARRIE BELLEVILLE, Ludington, Mich.

WHERE WE BEAT 'EM.

One Respect in Which American Outclass the British, and in Which They Cannot Hope to Equal Us.

He is from England, and not long from there. He was visiting his friend in Hyde park, and of course he was boasting.

"Oh, yes, my boy, the United States does very well for a new nation," he said, kindly, "You are great in some respects, but look at us. We have our navy, that beats the world; our army, never licked; our great steamship lines, our bank, Lombard street, the financial center of the world, our loyal colonies and all the rest. What can equal them?"

"And we have age, too. Look at our abbeys, and our ancient towns, and our papers of state. Why, man, in what can you boast of beating us?"

His Hyde Park friend studied a moment. Then he replied:

"Down in Texas there is an old chap who was talked to just this way once by a man from your country who went there for his health. And after all the Englishman's boasting was done the man of the cattle country winked at me, rolled his tobacco over in his mouth and spit fourteen feet into the eye of a pig standing that far away.

"'Kin any bloody Englishman on earth do that?' says he. And I ask you: Can he?"

The Englishman suggested brandy and soda in disgust.

A NURSE'S STORY.

A Graduate of Lakeside Hospital, Lake Geneva, Tells an Interesting Experience.

Peshtigo, Wis., Jan. 26, 1901. (Special.)—One of the most popular nurses that ever graduated from the Lakeside Hospital, Lake Geneva, is Miss Lillian Dreese, of this place. Miss Dreese is the Vice Templar of the Independent Order of Good Templars, and organist of the Rebeccas of Peshtigo. During her twelve years' experience as a trained nurse she has had many opportunities for observation and her opinion in all medical health matters is held in very high esteem by the thousands who have learned to know and love her. In speaking of her experience she says:

"During my twelve years as a trained nurse, I have often observed how many different physicians give their patients Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases of Diabetes and Kidney Trouble. About three years ago I myself suffered some months with a weakness and continual congested condition, and I decided to try what the Pills would do for me. I soon found that they built up the affected parts and restored harmony to the entire system, and although I often lose much sleep and rest while attending severe cases, I find that I was never in finer health nor had more endurance than since I have used these marvelous Pills."

Clergymen say they are good. Senators and Congressmen have added their evidence as to the wonderful curative properties of this Medicine, hundreds of physicians recommend them and use them in their daily practice. The most skilled trained nurses advise their use and use them themselves, while tens of thousands of sick and suffering people are being cured every day by Dodd's Kidney Pills. They should cure you. They will cure you. Try them.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

A SPASM OF REFORM.

THE REVIVAL THAT WAS SUGGESTED FOR THE TOWN OF JERICHO.

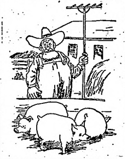
Pap Perkins, the Postmaster, Tells About the Enthusiasm With Which Abijah Holden's Idea Was Greeted and How Lish Billings Doused It With a Wet Blanket.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

It was Abijah Holden who first got the idea, and he sprung it on the postoffice crowd one Saturday night in the most unexpected manner. He'd bin keepin powerful quiet fur a week or two, like a man who's left his jackknife stickin in the barn door and is tryin to remember the fact, and this made the surprise all the greater. The crowd was most ready to go home when he got up and said:

"Feller Citizens of Jericho—I want to see this town boomed as much as any of you. I want to see her git up and hump herself till Boston or Chicago won't be in it, but when it comes to choosin between size and goodness I'm fur goodness. I think it's better fur one's soul and body to live in a small, good town than in a big, bad town. I'm willin to go in and help push Jericho along, as I said, but let's do it on right lines. Let's start her off on a high moral plane and keep her so."

"There's a p'int, and mebbe a mighty strong one, in what Bijah says," remarked Deacon Spooner as the speaker paused to collect his thoughts, "but up to this period his language is sorter ambiguous. He's drivin at sunthin, but what that sunthin is he'll have to explain."



CUT OFF THE TAILS OF THREE OF HIS HOGS.

"It's jest this," resumed Abijah. "I'm in favor of holdin one of the biggest religious revivals in this town this fall that was ever held on the top of this airth. I want it to be kept up till every human bein in the place is good 'nuff to die at a minit's notice. We'll git our moral standard first, and then we'll purceed to boom. When you kin advertise the fact that a town of nigh 2,000 inhabitants hasn't one single sinner in it, what's goin to be the result? Why, gentlemen, the influx, the rush, of preachers alone to such a place will bring about the sale of 2,000 city lots within a year. Widders will come here, orphans will come here, converted sinners and reformed drunkards will come here, and the newspapers will spread it broadcast that Jericho has no need of courts, constables or jails."

"I do decide that Bijah has made a p'int," said the deacon. "In a general way Jericho is a purty good town, but its moral standard kin be boosted up a peg or two, I reckon. I'm in fur the revival."

Admiron Taylor got up and said he also favored it. A town was like a child—start out in the right way with it, and it would prove a joy and a blessin. He hadn't seen a great deal of wickedness around Jericho, and he didn't believe there was much, but what was lurkin around in the fence corners might as well be driv out to make a clean state of it. He didn't believe in mixin booms with religion, but yet if a boom did foller the revival he had six acres of land which he would cut up into town lots and sell for fair prices.

Salathial Thompson follered with a ringin speech. He had bin seein wickedness in Jericho for over 20 years, but not feelin strong 'nuff to cope with it single handed had kept his head shet and let it go on. To his certain knowledge there was liars and thieves and swindlers in the town. There was also drunkenness and profanity and bettin. He had sometimes gone to bed o' nights expectin the fate of Sodom to overtake the place before the sun riz. If a revival would sweep away all this wickedness, and he believed it would, then let 'er come. More goodness meant more churches, and if another meetin house was built he wanted the job and would take it at the lowest reasonable figger.

Solomon Davis follered with a history of Sodom and Gomorrah. He had read up on them towns and got all the particulars. If they'd had a revival, and everybody turned to goodness, they'd not only have bin standin yit, but property along the main streets would have bin wuth $1,000 a foot front. Nobody could say that Jericho was a hundredth part as wicked as Sodom, but she'd got a start and unless checked up it was only a question of time when an airthquake would leave her a heap of ruins. He wouldn't take up the valuable time of the meetin to give instances of wickedness beyond makin it known that durin the past year some Gomorrohite had cut off the tails of three of his hogs and pulled all the tail feathers out of one of his peacocks. Let the revival and the wave of goodness come on. He'd ring the bell for services and sweep out the church and not charge a cent for his services, and when the business boom follered it would find him ready to put down four rods of new sidewalk and take in ten boarders at $5 a week apiece.

There were half a dozen others who made speeches and pledged themselves, and Deacon Spooner tapped on the floor with his cane and said he thanked heaven he had lived to see that night. The enthusiasm was still bilin when Lish Billings strolled in and looked around in an inquirin way. The deacon explained what was up and asked him if he hadn't sunthin to say.

"Waal, not a great deal," replied Lish. "I'd like to ask who's to git up this revival?"

"We'll send for some great preacher," answers Abijah Holden.

"Who's to pay him? Preachers ain't revivalin around for nuthin, though they like to do good."

Everybody looked at everybody, but no one had any more to say.

"And when we got the revival started," continued Lish, "there'd have to be a lot of ownin up to things and askin forgiveness. Who's goin to own up to gittin drunk on hard cider, to jawin his wife, to lickin his children, to pizenin dogs, to cripplin hogs, to stealin fence rails, to a hundred other mean things? Take yer time about it and don't all speak at once, but lemme have the information."

Deacon Spooner opened his mouth as if to say that Lish had made a strong p'int, but closed it again and heaved a sigh and went out. Other sighs was heaved and other folks went out, and in three minits Lish Billings had all the cracker and sugar bar'ls to hisself and was wonderin what had busted up the meetin.

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS.

Political Sanction of What All Agreed to Be a Good Thing.

One of the latest writings of the late Charles Dudley Warner was an essay for The Century, entitled "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Perhaps the most curious and interesting phrase ever put into a public document is "the pursuit of happiness." It is declared to be an inalienable right. It cannot be sold. It cannot be given away. It is doubtful if it could be left by will.

The right of every man to be 6 feet high and of every woman to be 5 feet 4 was regarded as self evident until women asserted their undoubted right to be 6 feet high also, when some confusion was introduced into this interpretation of this rhetorical fragment of the eighteenth century.

But the inalienable right to the pursuit of happiness has never been questioned since it was proclaimed as a new gospel for the new world. The American people accepted it with enthusiasm, as if it had been the discovery of a gold prospector, and started out in the pursuit as if the devil were after them.

If the proclamation had been that happiness is a common right of the race, alienable or otherwise: that all men are or may be happy, history and tradition might have interfered to raise a doubt whether even the new form of government could so change the ethical condition. But the right to make a pursuit of happiness given in a fundamental bill of rights had quite a different aspect. Men had been engaged in many pursuits, most of them disastrous, some of them highly commendable. A sect in Galilee had set up the pursuit of righteousness as the only or the highest object of man's immortal powers. The rewards of it, however, were not always immediate. Here was a political sanction of a pursuit that everybody acknowledged to be of a good thing.

Sneeze Without Winking.

Bobby came home one day covered with dirt and bruises and trundling a broken bicycle.

"What on earth have you been doing, my child?" exclaimed his terrified mother.

"I ran over a big dog and took a fall," explained Bobby.

"Couldn't you see him and give him the road?"

"Yes; I saw him and was turning out, but when I got within about ten feet of him I shut my eyes, and before I got 'em open again I'd run into him."

"For the land's sake, what did you shut your eyes for?"

"Couldn't help it. Had to sneeze. If you think you can hold your eyes open when the sneeze comes, you just try it some day."

If the reader thinks Bobby's excuse was not a valid one, let him try it some day "when the sneeze comes."—Youth's Companion.

South Sea Superstitions.

In the south sea islands the old gods are still very close to present life, despite the vigorous profession of the newer faith which the missionaries have introduced. On village greens the stone churches rise into prominence. The people are unremitting in their attendance upon the services, wearing clean white shirts and gaudy bonnets, according to the sex of the worshipers, and carrying their Bibles and hymnbooks wrapped in spotless handkerchiefs. But in the jungles and on the waters no Samoan quite forgets his ancestral gods, the powers of nature, and in the domain of the hunter and the fisher these old gods reign supreme.

Moralists may not assume to blame them as untutored savages practicing absurd superstitions of an inferior race, for if any moralist will only go a-fishing with people of the infinitely superior Caucasian race he cannot avoid seeing a few practices which may not be superstitions, but which are certainly believed necessary to luck. What the boy does to the worm after it is on the hook and before it goes into the stream is proof that there is kinship in practice between the savage and the cultured sportsman.—Cor. Forest and Stream.

A Careful Speaker.

"What did you expect to prove by that exceedingly long winded argument of yours?" asked the friend.

"I didn't expect to prove anything," answered the orator. "All I hoped to do was to confuse the other fellow so that he couldn't prove that I didn't prove anything."—Answers.

The public is warned against a new $5 counterfeit certificate that has made its appearance. It counterfeits the new issue of silver certificates, is a photo lithographic note looks well, bears treasury number 2,418,606, check letter B, plate number 29, series of 1900, and has the usual signature of J. W. Lyon's register of the treasury, and Elisa H. Roberts, treasurer of the United States. Defects in the bill are white spots on the cheek of the Indian portrait, and lake of life like appearance of the left eye. The paper is also a darker shade of green than is the color of the genuine note.—Ex.

Blame me, if I can understand why so many delinquent subscribers will settle with a collection agency rather than with the publisher of the newspaper, says the Anoka Union. The publisher will send out duns, beg in his paper for them to call and settle and precious little attention do they pay to his demands. Then in desperation he calls the agency to his aid and shortly responses are made, but why I could never tell. Now our delinquent subscribers know the reason why accounts are placed in the hands of collection agencies—that are growing rich, because the average man indebted to a newspaper prefers to settle with them instead of the publisher.

The Republican press has kept remarkably silent editorially in regard to the disgraceful language that passed between Senators Hawley and Chandler on the floor of the Senate recently in which the former denounced the latter as a liar and the latter declared that the former was senile. Had southern Senators been concerned in this discreditable episode every republican newspaper in New England would have gone into hysterics over it, and newspapers of the same faith in every other part of the country would have preached homilies on "plantation" manners. As it is no remonstrance has escaped from these sources, and they have been just as dumb over it as they have been over the lynching in Indiana, Colorado and Kansas.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

We always like to see a farmer or horseman drive up to a hitching post these winter days, says an exchange, jump out of his rig, unfold a big warm blanket and carefully cover his faithful horse. There is a big heart in that man. He'll do to tie to. He is thinking of something else besides himself and he takes as much pleasure in caring for the comfort of his horse as for himself. On the other hand it makes us sad to see a great big man, warmly clad from head to foot, drive a sweating, steaming horse up to the rack, hastily tie him fact, leave him shivering and make for the nearest hot stove. There is something wrong about this fellow. He may be a nice man, may belong to the church, may not swear, smoke nor have any bad habits, but we wouldn't want to be his horse. No sir.

To cure a cough in one day take the Imperial cough syrup. Guaranteed to cure. For sale at the new Drug Store.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent

The Senate committee on Finance, instead of reporting the Revenue Reduction bill this week as expected, seems to have got things awfully tangled up by amendments it has decided to make to the House bill and by what it has refused to do. The brewers are clamoring worse than ever and demanding that promises made to them when they were asked to contribute to the campaign shall be lived up to, and they have got some of the Senators badly frightened.

Democratic Senators are now called upon to decide whether the Ship subsidy bill, which is again the "unfinished business" of the Senate, shall pass or shall fail to reach a vote. It is admitted by friends and foes of the bill that if the democrats choose they can easily prevent its being voted upon. The course of the democrats is not yet certain. There are two sides to the question. Some contend that on general principles it is the duty of the democratic and populist Senators, as representatives of the people, to defeat such a vicious bill, while others are equally confident that as a matter of party policy the democrats ought not to stand in the way of the placing of such a millstone around the neck of the republican party as this subsidy bill would be likely to prove, if allowed to become a law. There is some talk of a caucus to decide what shall be the democratic policy toward this bill.

Gen. Miles can thank his personal friends in the Senate for the discovery in time to defeat it, of a scheme to depose him from the command of the army, under the Army Reorganization bill. That bill as drawn by Adjutant Gen. Corbin, whose hatred for General Miles is widely known, especially provided that the present Adjutant General should be retained and with the same rank, but in providing for the appointment of a lieutenant general who should have command of the army, the appointment was left wide open. The scheme first became known by friends of Gen. Otis and of Gen. Brooke seeking Senatorial support for the nomination of one or the other to be lieutenant general. Fortunately the nomination has to be confirmed by the Senate which would never have consented to such a low down trick being played upon Gen. Miles, even had it not been made impossible by an amendment added to the bill in conference.

—Have you seen the large selection of valentines at the drug store?

The charming "Cranford" folks have been written into a play, and makes their appearance in the February Ladies' Home Journal. Even more dramatic is "The Beautiful Daughter of Aaron Burr," with her romance, her supreme happiness and crushing sorrows all crowded into a few years. "The Clock by which we set all our watches," "The buffaloes of Goodnight Ranch," "A Woman to whom fame came after death," "The life of the English Girl," are features of interest. The last of "The Blue River Stories" is published in the February Journal, and "The Story of a Young Man" is nearing its conclusion, while "The successors of Many the First" increases in humorous interest. "Is the Newspaper office the place for a girl?" Is the theme of Edward Bok's editorial symposium, which is made peculiarly convincing by the opinions of editors and newspaper women. Caroline Leslie Field writes of "The Problem of the Boy"; Helen Watterson Moody, "The trying time between Mother and the Daughter," and "An American Mother," "Why one man succeeds and his brother fails." "A home in a prairie town and a brick and shingle farmhouse" give architectural plans and detail. The usual attention is devoted to fashions, the household arts, and economies and home making. By the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

Finger Marks.

The use of finger impressions to identify people promises to become a wonderful aid in the detection of criminals. The system consists merely in getting an impression in wax of the finger tip. No two finger tips have ever been found alike. In India all public documents must be indorsed in this way, and the law accept the testimony of experts without question. In this way many difficult murder cases have been unravelled.

Some things, as well as persons, need a trustworthy method of identifying them; others are easily recognized by their peculiar characteristics. Under the latter class comes "Golden Grain Belt" beer, for it is so pure and delicious that you could never mistake it for any other brew. It is made from the choicest barley malt and hops, and has great value as a tonic. A case of this beer should be in every home. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

—If you are looking for a good smoke, why call for the "J. B."

Attention Teachers.

Teachers examinations in and for Red Lake county will be held at the high school building in the city of Red Lake Falls, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, February 7, 8 and 9. EPIDEMIC OF GRIP WORST EVER KNOWN

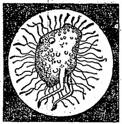
GRIP BACILLUS EVERYWHERE—IN THE AIR WE BREATHE, IN THE WATER WE DRINK, IN THE FOOD WE EAT.

Bacillus of Grip.



Magnified 16,000 times.

Hundreds of car loads of Peruna are shipped in all directions to meet the extraordinary demand of the grip epidemic.

Everybody laying in a stock of this valuable remedy in time to meet the terrible enemy, the Grip.

The extensive facilities of the manufacturers, taxed to their utmost to meet the urgent demand for Peruna.

Almost everybody has the grip. Almost everybody must have Peruna.

Taken at the appearance of the first symptoms of the grip, not only is Peruna a prompt cure for the grip but it prevents those disastrous after effects so characteristic of this dread disease.

Peruna not only cures the grip but prevents it.

Taken in time thousands of lives will be saved in this present epidemic.

Every family should take the precaution to secure a supply of Peruna at once, for the retail and wholesale stock of the remedy may be exhausted by the enormous demand for it.

It is wisdom to have Peruna in the house even before the grip attacks the household.

It has been ascertained by a reporter that the following people of national reputation have given public endorsement and testimonials to Peruna as a remedy for la grippe:

Congressman Howard, of Alabama, says: "I have taken Peruna for the grip and recommend it as an excellent remedy to all fellow-sufferers."

Congressman White, of North Carolina, says: "I find Peruna to be an excellent remedy for the grip. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it."

Miss Francis M. Anderson, of Washington, D. C., daughter of Judge Anderson, of Virginia, says: "I was taken very ill with the grip. I took Peruna and was able to leave my bed in a week."

Mrs. Harriette A. S. Marsh, President of the Woman's Benevolent Association of Chicago, writes: "I suffered with grip seven weeks. Nothing helped me. Tried Peruna and within three weeks I was fully restored. Shall never be without it again."

At the appearance of the first symptoms of grip people should stay indoors and take Peruna in small doses (teaspoonful every hour) until the symptoms disappear. This will prevent a long, disastrous sickness and perhaps fatal results.

PREDICT ERUPTIONS.

Volcanoes Have Their Spasms That Scientists Can Foretell.

Careful study of the behavior of volcanoes has enabled observers in recent years to predict with some degree of accuracy when a renewal of plutonic activity is impending. This was the case last summer, when Mount Etna for a few days attracted attention, after seven years of almost complete quiescence. The last eruption had occurred in 1892, but in the autumn of 1898 blue flames began to emerge from the mouth of the largest crater and a great deal of vapor was emitted from the lesser orifices. It was then announced that Etna seemed to be preparing for an effusion of lava, probably on the south or southwest slopes. The expected eruption did not begin till the morning of July 19, 1899, when great volumes of smoke, with lava and sand, began to issue from the main crater, but after several days the activity subsided and Etna soon resumed its peaceful aspect. The present generation hears little of Santorin, among the Cyclades, in the Egean sea, but the volcano will again become a center of interest if the recent statement is true that Santorin is preparing for another series of the terrific explosions and outbursts that have always marked its active periods. For thirty years Santorin has been content with the continuous mild emission of gases, but according to Comptes Rendus of the French Academy of Sciences the volcano now exhibits much unrest and an active period is predicted. It is near the crescent western shore of Thera that Santorin has reared itself and two other lava islands above the sea. When it finally arouses itself after long periods of quiescence, no valcano excels it in the violence of its outbursts. The eruptions between 1866 and 1870, when, according to Reclus, no less than 50,000 of partial eruptions were counted in five years, drew spectators from all parts of the world, including some men of science, whose observations made a distinct addition to our knowledge of volcanic action. In that period the ashes were sometimes thrown to a height of 4,000 feet and the immense outpouring of scoriae more than doubled the size of the island of Nea Kammeni.—Chicago Chronicle.

HOW TO SPEND MONEY.

Rich Men Are Not the Ones Who Understand Its Use.

Truxton Beale, formerly United States minister to Greece, believes that millionaires need education in regard to the proper manner of spending their money. He says that among the men possessed of millions there exists a fallacy in relation to their wealth, which fallacy was exposed by Adam Smith in the very year in which we started on our national life, and that is that spendthrift expenditure is a good thing for society. This idea pertains to a great extent among the millions as well as among the millionaires. Mr. Beale says: "Despite the fact that every great economist since Adam Smith has demonstrated the contrary, it is a fallacy that has not yet been rooted out of the minds of a large majority of even the educated. Indeed it might be called the pons asinorum of economics. There are so few even of college bred men who have ever given themselves trouble to understand the subject in the abstract, and of those few some are constantly stating propositions that are altogether inconsistent. When the millions as well as the millionaires thoroughly understand that absurd and vulgar expenditure impoverishes society and checks the production, and when they learn that there is no economical justification for the present vast, unproductive expenditure, then public opinion will compel the 'multis' to expend their fortunes in ways that will be more in accordance with simplicity and good taste. The vulgarity of wasting wealth will be all the clearer when its effects upon the public wealth is understood, and no sound public opinion on the subject can be formed until the public understands the purely economic side of the question."

CALLS IN A HURRY.

What Telephones Mean to the Remotely Situated Farmer.

The farmers of Oneida county have a telephone service almost as complete and convenient as that of any small city, says a Utica dispatch to the New York Press. For rural telephone enterprise this county is one of the foremost. The outside world is connected with the local lines, and for its long-distance system the farmers' line has had the praise of electricity experts. The remarkable feature of the development, which has been recent, is that practically every farmer in the county is in reach by telephone with every other. Not all have telephones in their houses, but there is not a neighborhood in the county where every farmer may not, in a few minutes walk to the telephone and communicate with every other farmer in the county, and at the same time he is able to talk with the small villages and the cities as well. The system has proven invaluable. Not only has it increased the social features of the farmhouse life, but by it physicians have been summoned from the cities and help has been secured from neighboring farm houses in emergencies. Two years ago, before the system was as well developed as it is today, a Cassville farmer, who had been attacked by burglars, was also able to give the alarm over his telephone and thereby hastened the capture of the bandits.

Conan Doyle's Appearance.

Conan Doyle looks a typical squire; he is tall, rather fair, with a heavy figure. He talks very slowly and deliberately, but is far cleverer as a listener than a talker. He is one of the few men who have learned the art of sympathetic listening. In a way he is extremely vague. For instance, the visitor may notice him putting a letter in one of his pockets and then searching carefully in the other for it. He is a man who would be always misplacing things for lack of method. But perhaps the thing that strikes you more than anything in Conan Doyle is the great big heart in the man.

TO HER FINAL REST

LOVING SUBJECTS PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO THE QUEEN.

An Imposing Funeral Procession Through the Streets of London—Hundreds of Thousands Line the Route—Impressive Burial Services Held at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Before a Great Crowd—The King, Emperor William and Earl Roberts Monopolize the Attention of the Crowds.

London, Feb. 4. — England has paid the last tribute to the dead queen.

With every circumstance of splendid pomp the body of Queen Victoria was borne through the streets of the capital to the ancient fortress palace of the sovereigns of England.

The day has been filled with the mournful pageantry of royal woe. The gorgeous trappings of military power trailed behind the coffin of the dead queen. Massed bands with muffled drums breathed requiem for the dead. Deep-throated cannon thundered out sonorous grief, and big bells in cathedral domes tolled off the minutes while the cortege passed.

The transit of Victoria's ashes from deathbed to tomb through the streets of London was a thing apart, a spectacle that even yet seems not quite of earth. It is easier to believe it a wonderful dreamland allegory which typified and the submission of emperors and kings to the last great Leveler.

Friday it was a tribute of Neptune; Saturday it was a tribute of Mars. Both could be commanded by the mere sovereignty of clay on which the crown and scepter rested in Saturday's procession. But no government or human authority could have commanded the supreme tribute which Briton and alien alike, the heart of mankind itself, paid to Victoria's memory.

It is not surprising that amid the monopolizing emotion of the day there were only three figures in the funeral procession that attracted the slightest notice of the on-looking masses. They were the king, who was as oblivious of the presence of his myriad subjects as if he were riding in a trance; the German emperor, whose face was the color of the white horse which he rode, and earl Roberts, the stern immovable veteran of many campaigns.

Simplicity and Dignity characterized also the last rite of all in St. George's Chapel. The scene and the atmosphere became strangely medieval when that illustrious congregation had assembled. The ceremony was brief and simple, and when the prayers were said and the king proclaimed according to the olden custom, the dead was left by the assembled representatives of the larger family of man to the last ministrations of her own sons and daughters and of her children's children.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the train from Portsmouth, bearing the remains of the dead queen, arrived at Victoria station.

The coffin was removed to the gun carriage, the pall and the regalia of the British crown were placed on the coffin. The king and the others mounted and the procession started.

The little khaki-colored gun carriage which carried the remains from Victoria to Paddington station was drawn by eight Hanoverian cream-colored horses, which drew the queen at the jubilee.

The Funeral Procession.

The procession, apart from the gun-carriage bearing the coffin and the royal family and official mourners about it, was not noteworthy. Parliament, the judiciary and the commercial bodies were not represented. Royalty, the army and navy monopolized the pageant—three thousand soldiers and sailors, picked companies representing all branches of the service.

Then came Field Marshal Earl Roberts and his staff, and, after him, four massed bands playing funeral marches. Three hundred musicians announced the coming of the body of the queen.

There was a long array of court officials under the leadership of the duke of Norfolk (the earl marshal), all attired quaintly and brilliantly, bearing maces or wands, most of them elderly men, who for years had served the queen.

Most of the spectators expected an imposing catafalque, and the coffin was almost past before they

Recognized Its Presence

by removing their hats. It was a pathetically small oblong block concealed beneath a rich pall of white satin, on the coronets of which gleamed the royal arms. Across the pall the royal standard was draped and a large crown of gold, encrusted with jewels, rested at the head of the coffin, which was at the end of the gun-carriage, just over the gun. On the foot of the coffin were two smaller crowns with a gold jeweled scepter lying between them.

Around the the coffin walked the bearers, non-commissioned officers of the guards and household cavalry, and on either side were the queen's equerries, lords in waiting and physicians.

Immediately after the company about the coffin, three royal mourners rode abreast. King Edward VII. was the center figure. A black chapeau, with a plume of white feathers was on his head, and a long black cloak was buttoned around him and hung down over the big, black horse. Beside King Edward rode Emperor William. On the king's left rode his brother, the duke of Connaught. In the second rank behind rode two more sovereigns, the kings of Greece and Portugal. Then followed of members of royal families, numbering about forty in all and riding three abreast.

The funeral procession occupied two hours in passing from Victoria station to Paddington, a distance of three miles. At Paddington the funeral party boarded trains for Windsor. Here, as elsewhere, the streets were jammed with people. The coffin was taken from the train and placed on a gun carriage and the procession proceeded to St. George's chapel. The simple services were conducted by the Bishop of Winchester and the dean of Windsor. The venerable Archbishop of Canterbury read the collect and pronounced the benediction.

After the burial service was finished the herald, king-at-arms proclaimed King Edward, who was standing beside his mother's coffin, at the foot of the altar steps, "Edward VII., King of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, and Sovereign of the most noble Order of the Garter."

Memorial Services Held.

Memorial services, pulpit references and touching allusions were heard again yesterday throughout the United Kingdom, while innumerable telegrams have been received saying how Saturday was kept. Everywhere throughout the land the day's labors were abandoned for religious services. Throughout India the natives have given unmistakable proofs of their veneration of the queen and their sorrow in her death.

TRIBUTES TO THE QUEEN.

Solemn Memorial Services Held in Washington.

Washington, Feb. 4.—In the presence of a distinguished assemblage, including the president of the United States and his entire cabinet and other officials and diplomats, impressive tribute was rendered Saturday to England's dead queen. The British ambassador, Lord Pauncefote, had been directed by the London foreign office to bestow this last mark of respect. Bishop Satterlee delivered an address on the queen.

In many cities of the country memorial services were held in honor of the queen.

FAMINE IN CHINA.

Millions of People Are Suffering for Want of Food.

Pekin, Feb. 4.—Reports received here from Singan-fu all agree that famine in the province of Shansi is one of the worst in the history of China. All information on the subject is necessarily from Chinese sources and is fragmentary, but the stories are all to the same effect, picturing a condition of affairs that is calculated to arouse the sympathy of the world for the stricken people. It is estimated that two-thirds of the people are without sufficient food or the means of obtaining it. The weather is bitterly cold and this adds to the misery of starvation. There is little fuel in either province, and the people are tearing out the woodwork of their houses to obtain fuel to keep themselves warm. Oxen, horses, dogs and other animals used by the farmers to aid in their work in ordinary times have been practically all sacrificed to satisfy hunger. For three years the crops have been failures in both provinces. There was more or less famine in previous seasons and the people were in poverty when the winter began. Their condition has since been growing steadily worse. Letters state that canibalism is practiced now to a considerable extent.

STUCK IN THE SNOW

HOWLING BLIZZARD INTERFERES WITH RAILROAD TRAFFIC.

Storm Sweeps the Country From Nebraska to Michigan; Increasing in Intensity as It Proceeds Eastward—Many Trains Snowbound in Kansas—Chicago Piled High With Snow, Almost Completely Blocking Street Car Traffic—Worst in Many Years.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—From Nebraska to Michigan a howling blizzard prevailed last night. The storm began in Nebraska Friday night and has increased in intensity as it proceeded eastward.

Reports from many points in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Southern Wisconsin, Indiana, Northern Illinois, Ohio and Michigan tell of one of the severest snowstorms in several years. Street car traffic is seriously interfered with and trains are delayed. In Kansas many trains are snowbound.

Six inches of snow on the level and drifts in many cases in the outlying districts piled as high as second-story windows was the condition Chicago was in last night. The snow began to fall early in the day and by the middle of the afternoon a regular blizzard was raging, with the wind blowing a gale from the west. Toward night the wind died down somewhat, and as the temperature began to rise the snow turned into sleet.

The street car lines, with the exception of the elevated roads, were the worst sufferers. Many of the surface lines were compelled to abandon their schedules entirely until the worst of the storm had passed, when they were able to clear the tracks and resume traffic.

Blizzard in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Feb. 4.—A blizzard from the Northwest has been raging in this city and still continues. Street cars are having a hard time and only a few cars are running on each line. The snow is drifting badly and the less important lines may be abandoned any time. The steam railways are hampered somewhat; also, the trains from Chicago being reported half an hour late. A special from Beloit says a foot of snow has fallen there and the blizzard continues.

TRAINS SNOWBOUND.

Kansas Has the Worst Snowstorm for Several Years.

Atchison, Kan., Feb. 4. — The worst snow storm for several years prevailed in Northern Kansas and Southern Nebraska Saturday night and Sunday. Three hundred miles on the Central branch of the Missouri Pacific, traversing Northern Kansas, are tied up and not a train came in off the road yesterday. Passenger trains are snowbound at Cawker City, Greenleaf and Whiting, and several freights are stuck in the snow at different points. Snowplows are working westward from Atchison and eastward from Downs. All trains into Atchison are delayed. Atchison street car lines are tied up. Snow drifts six feet deep are reported in many places along the Central branch. From various towns in Northern Kansas and Southern Nebraska the snow is reported from one to eighteen inches deep on the level. The stom began Friday night.

SHOT BY IRATE HUSBAND.

Clergyman Alleged to Have Assaulted a Married Woman.

New York, Feb. 4.—Rev. John Kelly, secretary to Rt. Rev. Bishop Stark, pastor of Trinity Episcopal mission in Arlington, N. J., was shot and seriously wounded by Thomas G. Barker, on the Arlington streets. Mr. Kelly had just left the house of John S. Sands, where he had his meals, when Barker, who was at the door, opened fire. One bullet went through the right side of the face, destroying the sight of the right eye. Another bullet shattered the fingers of the right hand and another passed through the clergyman's hat. Another went wide of its mark. The shooting is said to be the result of a disclosure made by Mr. Barker's wife, although Mr. Kelly denies the accusation made against him. Barker, after the shooting, surrendered to the police and was locked up. According to a story told by Barker to several friends after the shooting, his wife told him that the illness from which she has suffered for nearly a year and which caused the Barkers to break up their home and go to boarding was due to an assault committed on her at her home by Rev. Mr. Kelly. The assault, it was said, was committed after a hard struggle during which Mrs. Barker became unconscious.

Passengers on Army Transports Must Give Names of Relatives.

Washington, Feb. 4. — The war department has devised a means of facilitating the identification of passengers who die on army transport. A general order just issued provides that the register of passengers on transports shall show, besides the names of the passengers, the names and addresses of the relatives whom it is desired shall be informed in the event of death.

Boers Respected Victoria.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Philip Louter Wessels, one of the three Boer envoys now in this country to enlist sympathy and aid for the struggling republics, in an address at McVicker's theater declared that the Boers cherished the memory of Queen Victoria; that she would have tried to end the South African war had she lived, and that her death was hastened by that war.

Hoffman's New Opera House.

Hoffman, Minn., Feb. 4. — The new opera house at this place was opened Friday night with a grand ball. This hall, which is 34x80 feet on the floor, is the largest in Grant county.

At Detroit, Mich., fire completely gutted the building occupied by the Dreskell-Jupp Paper company, and before the firemen gained control it spread to the plant of the Free Press Printing company, which suffered damage to the extent of $60,000. The loss is about $200,000.

EDITOR M'BRIDE DEAD.

Man Who Gained Notoriety at Mitchell Dies in Poverty and Alone.

Mitchell, S. D., Feb. 3.—Robert H. McBride, once famous as a war correspondent and newspaper man, dropped dead here yesterday afternoon. He married a Mrs. Dousman, who was worth a million. She introduced him into the best society of New York, and he fell into habits which led to a divorce. He blamed John D. Lawler, a banker at Mitchell and brother-in-law of his wife, and devoted his paper, the Mail, to abuse of Lawler, driving him to his grave. Citizens wrecked the Mail office. McBride sued for $25,000 and got $800. He died in poverty and alone.

ON A FORGERY CHARGE.

Sam Lenhart Is Bound Over to the Grand Jury at Albert Lea.

Albert Lea, Minn., Feb. 3. — Sam Lenhart, who arrived here under the name of J. C. Collins and offered an alleged check in payment for a hotel bill for himself and a woman who was with him, and later, it is charged, forged the name of G. S. Buck to a telegram ordering a Minneapolis bank to wire money to his (Collins) order, was up for hearing and was held to the grand jury. No bail being furnished, he was committed to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury, which meets in May. There is another charge against the prisoner.

Location Not Yet Determined for Coon Creek Power.

Anoka, Minn., Feb. 3.—F. G. Ames of the Twin City Rapid Transit company has found that the maximum horse power used in Anoka is 778 and the minimum 448. This includes the Lincoln mill, which part of the time uses water, and the starch factories, which run about four months in the year. The location of the dam has yet to be decided. One location is at the Coon creek rapids, the other at Fridley, five miles below. At Fridley there is a greater head of water, but at Coon creek the high banks save an enormous sum for flowage rights.

DEATH OF A TOWN.

Unpaid Bills for Waterworks All That's Left of Merritt.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 3. — The last building of the first village on the Mesaba range is being removed. At one time Merritt had 1,500 people; next week there will not be one board upon another to mark its site. All there is left is the village debt for a waterworks plant put in seven or eight years ago. Merritt was at the late Cincinnati and Kanawha mines, but these did not amount to much and the rival village of Biwabik, a mile away, drew all the business. Most of the houses were moved some time ago, but the Svea hotel remained until now.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Hole in the Ground All That Is Left Where Nitro-glycerine Magazine Stood.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4. — By an explosion of 760 quarts of nitro-glycerine at the magazine of the Gas Belt Torpedo company, five miles northeast of Alexandria, Perry Fort, a carrier for the company, with his team of horses, the wagon and the magazine was blown to atoms, not a vestige of either having been found after the accident. Fort started from Knightstown Saturday night with 725 pounds of explosive in his wagon, hauled the dangerous load over rough roads and arrived at Alexandrie at 1:30 a. m. He passed through the city and had evidently reached the magazine, in which forty quarts of nitro-glycerine were stored when the explosion occurred. A hole fifteen feet deep and forty feet wide was left where the magazine formerly stood. Windows were generally shattered in Alexandria and the report was distinctly heard at Kokomo, Muncie, Marion and Ellwood.

The report has frightened Mrs. Nation and her sister reformers, but they declare they will continue the work of destroying "murder shops." They met at Mrs. Nation's rooms and held a session of prayer. Mrs. Nation braved the storm yesterday and made three temperance speeches.

WITH Doings In the State Legislature. THE LAWMAKERS

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 29. — The house reconvened last evening after a four days' recess and remained in session just twenty minutes. The only bill of importance introduced was one asking an appropriation of $495 to pay Capt. John C. Devereux for services rendered the state in 1861. Capt. Devereux was employed by Gen. J. B. Sanborn, adjutant general of the state at the beginning of the civil war, to drill and instruct the officers and men of the volunteer troops. Capt. Devereux has never received compensation for his services.

In the Senate.

Ten minutes was sufficient for all the business the senate had before it last night after adjournment from Thursday. The committee on education and the judiciary committee each reported a number of bills for passage. An executive communication containing notice of the governor's appointment of Maj. Libbey as adjutant general, A. E. Nelson as state librarian and the reappointment of the four members of the state normal board was read. Action was deferred one day, according to rule.

In the House.

St. Paul, Jan. 30. — Representative Peder Hendricks, Kittson county, introduced a bill in the house providing for doing away with capital punishment and fixing life imprisonment as the penalty for murder in the first degree.

A bill introduced by Representative Morley authorizes the establishment of free kindergartens in school districts managed by boards of education, to be paid for in the same manner as the other grades, except that the boards are empowered to accept bequests, donations and gifts to aid in the work. Children between the ages of four and six are eligible for admission.

A bit of granger legislation that provoked a laugh among the city members was introduced by Representative Schwarg in the form of a bill to prevent domestic animals running at large in the public streets of any unincorporated village.

The house session was short and very little business was transacted.

In the Senate.

The long-talked-of bill for the creation of the office of state fire warden was introduced in the senate by Senator Potter and referred to the committee on insurance. The bill provides for the state fire marshal's office to be located in St. Paul. His salary is fixed at $2,500, and that of a deputy at $1,500 per year.

Senator Johnson's bill calling for friends who take insane patients from hospitals to pay the expense of their return, if necessary, was formally passed. He also presented a bill to permit St. Peter hospital to expend any unexpended balance in its treasury for building improvements.

Lieut. Gov. L. A. Smith announced the following additional members to the senate reapportionment committee: Senators Sweningsen, Schellbach, Dickey, McGill, E. E. Smith, J. D. Jones and Young.

A number of appointments by Gov. Van Sant were formally confirmed. Senator McCarthy's bill to permit independent school districts to issue bonds to build school houses was passed and the senate adjourned.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Jan. 31. — Senator Chilton presented a bill denying the right to marry any man of woman under forty-five years of age who is an epileptic, feeble-minded or sufferer from insanity. Violators of the act are made liable to a fine of not exceeding $1,000 or five years' imprisonment or both. The bill further provides that all applicants for marriage licenses must present certificates signed by some physician with a special view as to whether or not insanity has ever beez in the family of the applicant.

Senator Daly presented a bill for the assessing and taxing of grain in elevators, which went to the committee on taxes.

A joint resolution which has been passed by the house was adopted by the senate on motion of Senator Potter, authorizing the Minnesota representatives in congress to promote the interests of the Grout bill.

Senator Jepson introduced a bill, which was referred to the judiciary committee, to prohibit the use of typewriters for the purpose of making official records for the state or counties.

Senator Everett's bill placing paupers in unorganized districts of the state under the general laws governing paupers was passed.

In the House.

The house was in session less than an hour, but during that time several bills were presented. One of them, fathered by Representative Leybourn, provides for an increase in the general school tax from 1.23 mills to 1.53, the .30 to go to the support of the five state normal schools. Mr. Laybourn estimates that this will mean an income of $175,000 a year, available for normal purposes.

Representative Schwarg introduced another anti-cigarette bill, making the selling or giving away of cigarettes or cigarette papers within the state an offense punishable by not less than $50 fine.

Speaker Dowling presented a bill fixing the pay of county commissioners in counties of from 20,000 to 25,000 inhabitants at $5 a day, and Representative Umland followed it up with another raising the pay of county surveyors in counties of more than 150,000 to $2,000 a year.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—In the senate there was a battle of words which lasted over an hour in regard to the approval or disapproval of some of the appointees of Gov. Lind.

Objections were made to four appointees on the general ground of inability. Senator Parker objected to Gustav Wahlund of Spring Lake of the board of corrections and charities. The objection was sustained by a party vote of 37 to 17.

Senator Shell objected to John E. King of Adrian on the board of equalization, and was sustained by a vote of 33 to 19.

Senator J. D. Jones objected to A. H. Hendrickson of Eagle Bend on the same board, and was sustained by a vote of 42 to 10.

Senator Reeves at first entered an objection to Leslie Welter of Clay county on the state reformatory board, but afterward withdrew it.

The rest of the Lind appointees were then confirmed.

Several bills of importance were introduced and referred to different committees, among them being the following: By Senator Horton, to create a state examining board for practitioners of osteopathy, five members to serve one to five years; by committee on drainage, to establish state drainage commission of the governor, auditor and secretary of state, and to appropriate $100,000; by Senator Johnson, a memorial to congress to establish a national park at the site of Fort Ridgely.

In the House.

Representative Herbert introduced a bill prohibiting employers from assessing employes for insurance of any kind unless a written agreement between employer and employed to that effect is made at the time of employment.

Representative Dunn presented a bill providing for the deeding to the state by the city of St. Paul of the land now used as a state fish hatchery, and authorizing the state game and fish commission to enlarge and equip the station.

Representative Sweet of Hennepin county introduced a bill providing for an amendment to the state constitution to be submitted to the people at the next election. The amendment provides that the term of probate judges may be fixed at the option of the various counties.

A memorial to congress asking that a national park be established at Fort Ridgely was referred to the committee on general legislation.

The senate resolution petitioning the Minnesota senators and representatives at Washington to vote for the Grout bill, was passed—103 to 6—under a suspension of the rules.

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—By a vote of sixty-six to forty-four the house yesterday afternoon confirmed M. R. Mahood's title to the seat which he has occupied for four weeks under protest of H. E. Blair, Republican, of Le Sueur county. Forty-four Republicans voted with the Democrats for the retention of Mr. Mahood.

The final disposition of the case which has been before the committee on elections for nearly three weeks occupied the attention of the house from 11 a. m. until 5 last evening. The case came before the house as a special order after the receipt Thursday of majority and minority reports from the committee on elections, divided strictly on party lines. The Republican majority maintained that Mr. Mahood received his majority of six vites from illegal voters. The minority claimed it could not prove that the sixteen Democrats whose votes were admittedly illegally cast voted for Mahood, and that his certificate of election should be held to constitute a clear title to the seat. It was pointed out by Republicans who favored Mahood that while irregularities in election methods prevailed in Mr. Mahood's district, that there was no evidence that he was in any way responsible.

In the Senate.

In the senate several new bills were presented. The judiciary committee presented a substitute for Senator Underleak's tax commission measure. The new bill calls for but three members of the commission, to be appointed by the governor, attorney general and state auditor. The commission must report on a complete new tax code by March 1, 1902. The salaries of the commission are fixed at $3,000 each per annum. The sum of $3,000 is allowed for commission expenses.

Senator Nixon introduced a measure to permit county commissioners to contribute half the cost of public memorial monuments not to exceed $1,500. The bill was referred to the committee on military affairs.

The committee on temperance reported in favor of passing the bill abolishing wine rooms and booths in saloons, with the amendment that that saloons be permitted to retain screens at their entrances.

The senate then adjourned until Saturday morning.

Miss Stone lived near Decatur City. She died last Tuesday under very suspicious circumstances at Dr. Crowford's sanitarium at Lamoni. Her relatives knew nothing about her illness and believed she was visiting at Kellerton. A coroner's investigation resulted in the arrest of Hammond and Crowford. Hammond was engaged to Miss Stone.

Gardner, register of the land office at this city, has been fully exonerated from the charges of irregularity made against the office and the charges have been quashed. A Lost Line.

"It may have been unprofessional conduct," said the civil engineer, "but I acted on the spur of the moment, and I hardly think that there was any harm done. I was out in the country one day on an important piece of business, and as I was about to leave for the depot to catch a train for the city two old farmers came to me with a line fence dispute that they wanted me to settle for them. I had barely time to catch my train, and I told them that I did not care to bother with it. It was only a matter of six inches or so that was in dispute, and I advised them to split it up between them. But they wouldn't listen to my advice, and one of them declared that if I didn't find the line for them he wouldn't let his son drive me to the station as he had promised. As I had no other way of reaching the depot I unpacked my instruments with a sigh and a mental resolve to end the thing as soon as possible.

"'Wul,' drawled both of the old men as I took my eye away from the instrument, 'what's the line?'

"'Gone,' said I solemnly.

"'What?' they both shouted.

"'You can see for yourselves, gentlemen,' said I, making way for them.

"'By gosh, I can't see it!' said one of them as he squinted through the glass.

"'I'll be darned if I kin either,' said the other one as he, too, squinted through the glass.

"'It seems to have disappeared, gentlemen,' said I. 'Such cases are extremely rare, but they are known to happen.'

"When I left, they were accusing each other of having stolen the line."—Detroit Free Press.

The Boatman's Turn.

A boatman in the north of England having been engaged to row a reverend gentleman over a rough part of a river, was very much annoyed at the manner he was addressed by the clergyman, the conversation commencing thus:

Clergyman—My dear man, have you ever studied "geology?"

Boatman—No, sor: Aa hevn't.

Clergyman—Well, my friend, that's part of a life lost, but you will probably know a little "theology?"

Boatman (turning quite irritable)—No: Aa knaw nowt aboot that either.

Clergyman—Well, that's another part of a life lost, my man.

Nothing more was said, as the water was turning very boisterous and they were in great danger, when suddenly the boat gave a lurch and was capsized.

The boatman, being an expert swimmer, took the situation quite coolly, while his companion, who knew nothing of the art of swimming, was struggling for life. The boatman, who was making good progress toward terra firma, accosted the clergyman with the following:

"Aa say, mister, do ye know onnything aboot 'swimology?'"

"No, my man: I don't."

"Wey, what a pity," said the boatman: "there's a whole life lost."—Pearson's.

Mistaken For Shafts.

A story is told of a pair of feet that must have been objects of great regard in their day.

One day a party of men, including Jackson, the man of big feet, were preparing to attend a political meeting. It was soon discovered that there was no way of conveying Jackson, as all the vehicles were full.

"Let me ride that horse over there?" asked Jackson.

"There isn't a man in the world that can ride that animal. He'll work to a cart or a plow, but no one can stay on his back."

"I'll try him, anyway." And the determined man instructed several men to catch and hold the horse.

The animal plunged and kicked, but finally Jackson secured a seat in the saddle.

Every one expected to see him dashed to the ground, but the horse looked round, saw the man's feet and walked peacefully away. He thought he was between a pair of shafts.—London Standard.

His Birthday.

Although unrivaled in the art of cross examination, on one occasion Lord Russell was distinctly beaten by a witness.

"Yes, sir. Now speak up and be exact."

"And be exact! Well, of all the"—

"The court does not desire to hear any comments of yours. Tell the court your age."

"Well," said the man, "I celebrated my twelfth birthday last week."

"Don't trifle with the court and remember you are on oath."

"It's quite true. I was born on Feb. 29, in leap year, and my birthday only comes once in four years."

A MUTUAL SURPRISE.

The Meeting Between an Ambitious Hunter and His First Grizzly.

In "Sketches of Life In the Golden State" Colonel Albert S. Evans tells an amusing anecdote of an ambitious hunter who met his first grizzly bear—in procession. The incident occurred in the woods near the site of the present town of Monterey.

The hunter sat down to rest in the shade of a tree and unwittingly went to sleep. When he woke, it was near sunset, and he sat up, rubbing his eyes and contemplating a return to his hotel several miles distant.

Just then a rustling and cracking noise from a clump of chaparral about 100 yards away attracted his attention. Out walked a grizzly bear, a monarch of his kind. He yawned, licked his jaws and then advanced toward the tree where our hunter sat, but evidently was unconscious of his presence.

His grizzly majesty had proceeded about 20 paces when a female bear followed him, and an instant later a third grizzly followed her at a slow, shambling pace.

The hunter sat spellbound with terror as the procession came toward him until the forward grizzly was within 30 yards. Then, scarcely realizing what he did, he sprang to his feet and uttered a frenzied yell—yell upon yell!

The effect was magical. The foremost bear sprang into the air, turned sharply about, knocked the female down, rolled over her, gathered himself up and bolted "like 40 cartloads of rock going down a shoot," straight for the chaparral again, the other two bears close at his heels and never turning to see what had frightened them.

The hunter, seeing the enemy retreating, sprang to his feet and fled at top speed for the hotel, leaving hat and gun behind. The truth of his wild and startling tale was proved the next day by the numerous bear tracks of different sizes found in the marshy ground near by. But the three bears had gone off beyond pursuit.

SINKING SHIPS.

They Don't Linger In Midocean, but Go to the Bottom.

What becomes of the ships that sink at sea? Do they go all the way to the bottom or do they meet somewhere under the surface a certain pressure that buoys them up and holds them in equilibrium? Somebody, we forget who it is, has given rein to his gruesome fancy and pictured all the ships that have been lost in midocean as wandering about like so many ghosts half way between the surface and the bottom.

There is no foundation whatever for such a notion, though many persons have it. Any object that will sink beneath the surface of the sea will go all the way to the bottom. The pressure encountered on the way down, which is simply enormous in the deeper parts, has nothing to do with the object's sinking, for it is exerted on the object as well as on the water, thus equalizing the conditions.

The reason why the object sinks to the bottom is that water is not compressible: at least it is so little so that its density at the bottom of the sea is only a trifle greater than it is at the surface. Scientists tell us that the water at the bottom is just about as much denser than the water at the surface as sea water is denser than fresh water.

This slight difference in density, therefore, does not and cannot stop the downward course of a sinking ship or any object that is heavy enough to sink rapidly beneath the surface. Pressure, as we have said, is not a factor in the case at all.—Chicago Record.

A Bone "Library."

There is a lending library of human bones in London. It is intended for the use of medical students, and the bones are lent out in exactly the same manner as books from a circulating library. The entire collection is valued at £5,000 and contains besides human bones the skeletons of horses, dogs, cats, oxen and sheep—all animals that the veterinary surgeon is likely to be called upon to treat. The present market price of a human skeleton is from £6 to £20, according to its condition. A skull may be worth anything from 5s. to £1. For a payment of 6d. a student can borrow any part of the skeleton that he desires to study, and may retain it for one week. A complete skeleton can be borrowed from the library for the sum of 15s. down and a deposit of £5.—London Answers.

Her Proposals.

Talking of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Lord Houghton said: "Miss Coutts likes me because I never proposed to her. Almost all the young men of good family did. Those who did their duty by their family always did. Mrs. Browne (Miss Coutts' companion) used to see it coming and took herself out of the way for ten minutes, but she only went into the next room and left the door open, and then the proposal took place, and immediately it was done Miss Coutts coughed, and Mrs. Browne came in again."—Augustus J. "The Devil's Turnip Patch."

On the top of Bald Eagle mountain, just where the old turnpike breaks over the brow down into Black Hole valley, is a queer field of rock, which years ago was christened "The Devil's Turnip Patch." The rocks, which are of a reddish sandstone, have a striking peculiarity of all standing on end, thus forming a jagged, irregular surface, that won for it its queer name from the early settlers.

In bygone days, when the stages wheeled their way up from Northumberland to Williamsport, the four in hands traversed the old pike that skirts the turnip patch, and the strange garden of rocks was a constant source of wonderment to the traveler. Added to its interest as a natural curiosity is a hidden stream of water somewhere beneath the standing stones, the noisy flowing of which forms a romantic song beneath one's feet. Nobody knows where the source of this stream is, nor can anybody find where it empties itself into Black Hole valley.

The rock field covers an area of two or three acres, with its widest part to the north, then narrowing down V shaped to the south, where the angle is lost in a fringe of stunted hemlocks and elders. Theorists have figured on the cause of this mountain freak, but the theory obtaining most credence is that it is a legacy of the glacial age, the rocks being a collection pushed into their present vertical position by the moving ice.—Philadelphia Record.

Squelched a French Dude.

A young woman of smart wit and striking beauty presided at one of the stalls at a Paris charity bazaar. Among the small crowd which pressed round the fair vender was a young man of much assurance, who gazed upon the girl with freedom and affected to admire the various fancy articles exposed for sale, but bought nothing.

"What will you please to buy?" asked mademoiselle, with an exquisite smile.

"Oh," replied the young dandy, with a languishing look, "what I most wish to buy is unhappily not for sale."

"Tell me what you wish?" she responded.

"Oh, no; I dare not declare my wishes."

"Nevertheless let me know what you wish to buy," persisted the fair saleswoman.

"Well, then, since you demand it, I should like a ringlet of your glossy black hair."

She manifested no embarrassment at the bold request, but with a pair of scissors immediately clipped off one of her beautiful locks and handed it to the astonished youth, remarking that the price was only $100.

Her audacious admirer was thunderstruck with the demand, but dared not demur, as by this time a group had collected and were listening to the conversation. So he took the hair, paid over the money and left the hall.

Value of Telephone Numbers.

"Telephone numbers have an actual money value," said an officer of the American Bell Telephone company. "The assertion has a strange sound, but if you think for a moment of the advantage a business house derives from having its location well known the thing seems only natural.

"In the course of time people's minds begin to associate a firm with its telephone number, and if when they start to call up an old friend they find him masquerading under a new number it is as much of a shock as if they had called at a house with which they were in the habit of doing business and found it had moved away. It all comes under the legal head of 'good will,' a very elusive commodity, but one which has its market value.

"So much is this fact appreciated by some of our old patrons that they are willing to pay heavy mileage if they move away from the neighborhood of their exchange in order to retain their old telephone address. Many important houses have followed the northward trend of business in the last few years, and there are several cases of a firm's office address being in the uptown district, while its telephone number remains so and so Cortlandt or Broad. The firm's line to the exchange may be several miles long."—New York Mail and Express.

Flags of all Indiana regiments that fought under Gen. Grant in the war of the rebellion are to be sent to the tomb of the great commander in Riverside park. At an experiment in St. Joseph, Mo., a cat was apparently killed by a shock of electricity carefully administered. Two hours after the heart had ceased to beat the current was reversed and the second shock restored the heart beats, faintly at first, but growing stronger until the cat was finally released as playful and frisky as ever.

The Women's University club of New York is the latest organization among college graduates. The alumnae of the various colleges have planned an organization with the object of building a clubhouse such as those enjoyed by men. Seven hundred women graduates were present at a meeting held, and the success of the scheme seems assured.

Experiments are being carried out in the Austrian army with a new portable oven for field and transport purposes. The oven at present in use is a very unwieldy and heavy article and has to be transported in sections. The new oven, however, may be carried intact upon a cart, and, if necessary, can be utilized for baking purposes while on the march.

Wu Ting-Fang, the Chinese envoy to this country, uses expressive English. "Level-headed," that adjective which lives a life of unceasing activity, falls from his lips as naturally as if he had been born within a mile of the Boston Frog Pond or of the Mississippi river. Possibly the phrase seems the easier to him because he illustrates the quality which it represents.

The reichstag bill providing for a third supplementary credit on account of the China expedition fixes the salary of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee at 150,000 marks ($37,500) annually, with large extras. The division commanders will receive 65,000 marks ($16,250) and extras, and lower officers will be paid proportionately. These are five times the rate of the salaries paid at home.

Macaroni seed from Russia is now on the way to the United States, and is expected by the agricultural department to prove the beginning of a new industry. Experiments already made go to show that in some parts of the country these wheats may be grown to better advantage than anywhere else in the world. The first thing, however, must be the erection of macaroni factories to handle the crop; and it is expected that several will be built in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Seventeen fishing boats, one of which is said to have been built between 1740 and 1750, form the odd little fishing village of Carracross, on the west coast of Ireland. The only building in the place which is not constructed of an old boat is the priest's house, and this is built almost entirely of the driftwood which the gulf stream piles upon the rock coast. There is not a tree of sufficient size to give building timber within eight miles of Carracross; and, though there is plenty of building stone, it is never used for anything except building fences around potato patches.

If every woman could (as she should) under ordinary circumstances undertake the care of the sick in her own home this would but accentuate the value and raise the status of the "born nurses," who, never happy, save in the special exercise of their gift, would then quite suffice for hospital cases and the grand occasions of major operations. The sight of the cap and veil of the hired trained nurse when imported into a household with women members scarcely raises one's admiration for the family government, especially when, as too often happens, the case is of the most ordinary description.

English shoe manufacturers who are beginning to suffer from American competition allege that, although the British workman's daily wages are only about half as large as those of the American operative, the "labor cost" of a pair of shoes is fully 25 per cent more in England than in the United States. Most of the responsibility for this fact is laid upon the British union of boot and shoe operatives, which, it is said, forbids its members to turn out more than a certain amount of work. Possibly this union has found the solution to the labor problem; but the manufacturers doubt it, and base their doubt upon the experience of the race—that men who are afraid of doing too much eventually find it hard to get anything to do.

Recently the huge fresh-water reservoirs at the Mare Island navy yard have undergone their biennial cleaning out, with the usual accompaniment of considerable malaria in the yard as a direct consequence of bringing to light a large amount of mud which has slowly drifted into these tanks from the roofs and other sources in the yard. The attempt to find water by artesian boring has been given up as a failure, and the water supply is made up from the reservoir system and considerable water from the Vallejo water system.

Some estimation of the disorganized and miserable state of the Belgian government railways may be gathered from the fact that recently while a train was traveling at a moderate speed one of the carriages dropped to pieces. The passengers were shaken up, and one man had his legs cut off.

All the princes of the Caucasus claim direct descent from King David, according to the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, and some of them base their descent from Noah, or the landing of the ark at Ararat, which is near by.

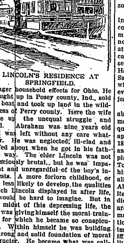
(From Portrait Taken in 1858.)

Lincoln's Early Life

Abraham Lincoln was born in Hardin county, Ky., on Feb. 12, 1809. He was the son of Thomas and Nancy Hanks Lincoln and descended from Samuel Lincoln of Norwich, England, who emigrated to Hingham, Mass., in 1638. Some of the descendants moved to what is now Berks county, Pa., and subsequently to Virginia. Abraham L. Lincoln, father of Thomas, followed Daniel Boone to Kentucky, where he was killed by the Indians while clearing his farm in Jefferson county. Thomas Lincoln was shiftless. He subsisted in a precarious way by doing odd jobs of carpentry; but he married Nancy Hanks and took her to a wretched cabin in Hardin county and tried to make a living at farming. In this hovel the future president was born, and came up at haphazard until he was seven years old. By walking four miles to school he contrived to get a very little of such rudimentary education as the backwoods afforded; but his schooling did not include more than a year of desultory instruction, and he had no home encouragement. At this formative period, Lincoln owed nothing to home training or home atmosphere. His father was a shiftless creature with very ordinary intellectual gifts, and his mother, a frail woman, was broken by the ceaseless and hopeless struggle to keep body and soul together.

In 1816 Thomas Lincoln pulled up stakes and started with his family and meager household effects for Ohio. He brought up in Posey county, Ind., sold his boat and took up land in the wilderness of Perry county. Here the wife gave up the unequal struggle and died. Abraham was nine years old and was left without any care whatever. He was neglected, ill-clad and cuffed about when he got in his father's way. The elder Lincoln was not consciously brutal, but he was impatient and unregardful of the boy's interests. A more forlorn childhood, or one less likely to develop the qualities which Lincoln displayed in after life, it would be hard to imagine. But in the midst of this depressing life, the boy was giving himself the moral training for which he became so conspicuous. Within himself he was building a strong and solid foundation of moral character. He became what was called a "serious boy." This seriousness gave him an air of maturity and was quite as much the cause as the effect of his pondering upon such grave problems of life as his undeveloped mind could grasp. His education was limited, but he was of a studious turn, and pored over the few books which fell in his way.



LINCOLN'S RESIDENCE AT SPRINGFIELD.

When Abraham was about twelve years of age a new element entered into his life. His father took for a second wife a woman with whom it is said he was in love before he married Nancy Hanks. This woman had energy and soon wrought a revolution in the domestic economy of the Lincolns. She cleaned and clothed Abraham and his sister, and, better still, took a real motherly interest in them. She was especially fond of the boy, and seemed to discern in him qualities above the average. Probably she pitied the forlornness of the silent, awkward lad. At all events she was kind to him and won the heart unused to kindness. She encouraged him in his studies and gave him the warmth of sympathy which expanded his nature and for the first time made him feel that he was a human being and that somebody shared of his hopes and aspirations. Lincoln always retained a loving remembrance of this woman, and in after life he referred to her as "saintly."

Abraham grew with amazing rapidity, and before his seventeenth birthday was a strapping lad six feet four inches tall. He was strong and sinewy, with enormous hands and feet. He was described as having "disproportionate length of legs and arms, and over all a rather small head; his skin was yellow and shriveled, and his complexion swarthy. He wore coarse, home made clothes, and a coonskin cap; his trousers, owing to his rapid growth were nearly a foot too short." He attended school irregularly until he was 17 years old. At that age he quit school for good and all, but his studious habits remained with him and to them he owed an education self-acquired.

After leaving school Lincoln earned money by working at odd jobs, and at the same time acquired a more or less deserved name for laziness. But what boy that had spindled up to six feet four inches in seventeen years would not be lazy at times? Even at that time he was noted for his propensities for story telling. He did not love work perhaps, but he loved reading and study. "He would lie under a tree or in the loft of the house, and at night sit in the firelight to read, cipher and scribble on the wooden fire shovel." He read everything he could get hold of. He had a retentive memory and a taste for speaking in public. He familiarized himself with grammar by the study of a borrowed book, and his first dip into the law was through reading the statutes of Indiana borrowed from a constable. The year he was 16 years old he worked on a ferry boat on the Ohio river for $6 a month. A couple of years later he went down the Ohio and Mississippi as first mate of a flat boat. This trip gave him some knowledge of the outside world and awakened in him a desire to do something for himself.

But the Lincolns had remained in Indiana as long as the restless Thomas could stand it, so in 1830 the family migrated to Illinois, settling at a point near Decatur. Shortly after arriving at the destination, young Lincoln came of age and launched out for himself. In 1832 he went into the Black Hawk war in a company enlisted at Sangamon. He served with credit, but without particular distinction, and ever afterward was disposed to speak jestingly of his military experience.

Young Lincoln established considerable popularity soon after reaching his majority. His physical strength, quaint humor and inimitable stories appealed to the Westerners, and in 1832 he was a candidate for the state assembly. But he was not elected. His platform was straight Whig doctrine. To quote his own words in declaring himself a candidate: "I presume you all know who I am; I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a candidate for the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like the old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank; I am in favor of internal improvement and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."

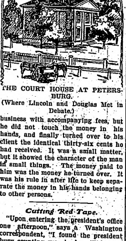
Having been defeated in his canvass, Lincoln embarked in a disastrous mercantile enterprise at New Salem with one Thomas Berry. His partner fled and Lincoln assumed the debts of the firm, the last of which he paid off in 1849. In 1833 he was appointed postmaster at Salem, and served three years. The salary was almost nothing. The mails came but once a week and as Lincoln could not afford to hire a room he carried the letters around in his hat and delivered them. In 1834 Lincoln was an acknowledged Whig leader and was elected to the legislature, where he first met Stephen A. Douglas, the "Little Giant," who was to become his competitor for the senate and for the presidency.

A Wrestling Match.

A story is related of Lincoln when he was a clerk in the store of Denton Orfutt, at New Salem. Orfutt had a great opinion of Lincoln's mental ability, but a positive admiration for his feats of strength, and never tired of dilating upon the latter. It seems that a somewhat notorious gang of terrors lived in a neighboring settlement. They prided themselves on their ability to wrestle and fight and put every newcomer to the test. They soon heard of Lincoln and were anxious to try his mettle. Lincoln was not a brawler and did not court contests of that character except as a means to an end; but Orfutt entered readily into the spirit of the thing and bragged so much about what Lincoln could do with the terrors that affairs reached a crisis and he had to yield to public clamor. A match was arranged with a chosen champion of the gang by the name of Armstrong. The latter is described as a perfect specimen of physical manhood, powerful and agile and versed in all the tricks of the wrestler. When the match came off, all business was suspended, and the partisans wagered their small possessions freely. The contest was a draw, as the men were so evenly matched that neither could throw the other. But when Armstrong found that he could not throw Abe he resorted to foul tactics. This angered Abe, who abhorred dishonesty in sports as in everything else, and he seized Armstrong by the neck and shook him until the breath almost left his body. Abe was not so expert a wrestler as Armstrong, but in strength the latter was an infant in the former's hands.

Scrupulous Honesty.

When Lincoln was a struggling young lawyer, whose office furniture consisted, as he said, of "a chair, a three-legged table and a rat hole," he collected thirty-six cents for a client. Several weeks passed. Lincoln was hard up, and only through the kindness of a friend was he clothed and fed. Like other young lawyers he had hope from day to day of additional business with accompanying fees, but he did not touch the money in his hands, and finally turned over to his client the identical thirty-six cents he had received. It was a small matter, but it showed the character of the man of small things. The money paid to him was the money he turned over. It was his rule in after life to keep separate the money in his hands belonging to other persons.



THE COURT HOUSE AT PETERSBURG.
(Where Lincoln and Douglas Met in Debate.)

Cutting Red Tape.

"Upon entering the president's office one afternoon," says a Washington correspondent, "I found the president busy counting greenbacks. 'This, sir,' he said, 'is something out of my usual line; but a president of the United States has a multiplicity of duties not specified in the constitution or acts of Congress. This money belongs to a poor negro who is a porter in the treasury department, at present very bad with the smallpox. He is now in the hospital and could not draw his pay because he could not sign his name. I have been at considerable trouble to overcome the difficulty and get it for him and have at length succeeded in cutting red tape. I am now dividing the money and putting by a portion, labeled, in an envelope with my own hands, according to his wish.'"

Good Advice.

To a man who offered him a case of doubtful merit, Lawyer Lincoln wrote: "Yes, there is no reasonable doubt but that I can gain your case for you. I can set a whole neighborhood at loggerheads; I can distress a widowed mother and her six fatherless children, and thereby get for you $600, which rightfully belongs, it appears to me, as much to them as it does to you. I shall not take your case, but I will give you a little advice for nothing. You seem a sprightly, energetic man. I would advise you to try your hand at making $600 some other way."

SOME VAGARIES OF THE DAY

INTERFERING WITH A THEORY

Mrs. Graham is a lady of the old school. She obeyed her parents when she was young and afterward successfully brought up six children of her own who came when they were called and otherwise betrayed an active belief in the theory that the maternal word was law and the end of all things.

Therefore, Mrs. Graham took it hard when her third daughter, Susan, became a convert to the new theories on the proper way of disciplining juveniles and developing their intellects. Susan's 9-year-old daughter, Adaline, was going to grow to maturity without the humiliation of corporal punishment, without the breaking of her proud spirit, without the crushing of her originality into conventional molds. At least, that is how Susan explained her theories to her mother when Mrs. Graham remonstrated at Adaline's elevating her muddy boots to a resting place on a new $10 Persian sofa pillow adorning her grandmother's davenport. Mrs. Graham had suggested the old-fashioned application of the back of a hairbrush as suitable to the case, but Susan had cast up her hands in horror.

"I never punish Adaline, mother!" she remonstrated. "Whipping is barbarous! I point out the error of her ways, recognizing she is a human being with a brain capable of being convinced. Then she does not repeat the offense, neither does she lose her respect for me nor for herself."

"I wouldn't interfere with Adaline's self-respect for the world, Susan," said her mother, crisply, "but seeing you are going to put those beliefs into practice during your visit I hope you won't mind if I lay away my expensive cushions and dress the brocade furniture in hollands."

At dinner that night Adaline began on her third helping of pudding before her grandmother, who had been squirming, finally opened her mouth. "She'll be sick," she said to her daughter.

Susan looked mildly surprised. "If Adaline wants a dozen servings of pudding, mother," she said gently, "she is to have them. If she is sick she will see the foolishness of greediness, and not do it again. I never interfere."

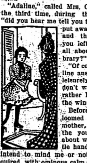
Mrs. Graham shut her lips tightly. "There's a bottle of painkiller in the medicine chest," she remarked inconsequentially. "And the hot water bag is hanging on the hook. I dislike to be disturbed after I have once got to sleep."

Adaline looked at her grandmother contemptuously. "Hm," she said between spoonfuls, "when I have aches I holler. I make everyone come and sit around me to wait on me. Mamma says I am not to be repressed. It would interfere with my pro-prog-progression."

Mrs. Graham gasped and her hands twitched. Her daughter was placid and beaming. "Dear Adaline," she said, smoothly, "understands so cleverly my attempts at doing my duty by her. It is so comforting."

Mrs. Graham is a delicate and prim lady, so possibly she did not snort as she arose, but it sounded much that way. And in her eye there was a light at which in years gone by Susan had quaked. It was just as well she did not see it now. The light lingered steadily till the day came when Susan went to visit an old schoolmate and left Adaline in her grandmother's charge, then it glowed like an arc light.

"Adaline," called Mrs. Graham, for the third time, during the morning, "did you hear me tell you to come and put away your dolls and their clothes you left scattered all about the library?"



"Of course," Adaline answered, very leisurely. "But I don't want to. I'd rather look out of the window."

Before Adaline loomed her grandmother, who turned the young person about with no gentle hand. "Do you intend to mind me or not?" she inquired, with ominous calm.

Adaline's bullet eyes opened in genuine surprise. "Why, can't you help?" she asked. "I said I didn't want to. And when I don't want to do a thing I am never made to. It would be bad for my high spirits, mamma says."

The battle light in Mrs. Graham's eyes doubled in intensity. "Come here, Adaline," she said, and Adaline, still curious, went. She made the acquaintance of the back of the hairbrush, wielded with all the expertness of a hand long skilled in its application. There was plenty of science about the experience, but it did not appeal to Adaline. Her remonstrances had not the remotest effect on Mrs. Graham, who, when she finished, looked remarkably at peace and happy.

"Please pick up your doll things, Adaline," she repeated.

And the haste with which Adaline minded the request would have startled her mother out of a year's growth. It is still a mystery to Susan why her child was so strangely meek, humble and obedient during the rest of her visit at her grandmother's. But Mrs. Graham and Adaline both kept the secret.

TREES OF THE PHILIPPINES

The forestry bureau at Manila, which is in charge of Capt. Ahern, U. S. A., is an inheritance from the Spanish government, says Science. It was established some 35 years ago and through its officers and employes supervises the government forest property, which is estimated to comprise between 20,000,000 and 40,000,000 acres. The Philippines are known to possess over 400 species of trees, and a more careful survey will bring the number nearly to 500. Of these at least 50 are valuable, the Yangylang tree being considered among the most important. This furnishes an oil which forms the base of many renowned perfumes. On the island of Romblon a mass of cocoa palms, the result of planting under a former governor, covers the slopes from sea to mountain top, and furnishes a yearly revenue of from $1 to $2 per tree.

WHERE WOMEN RETAIN THEIR NAMES

Elizabeth Cady Stanton declares that a woman should keep her family name through life and not have it merged in that of her husband. Mrs. Stanton would be delighted with the custom pertaining in the Channel Islands, those remnants of England's French empire lying off the coast of France. In the Channel Islands the woman does not change her name on marriage; no matter how often she changes partners, she carries her maiden name with her to the grave.

Loss to Artistic World.

The destruction by fire of the chateau of Beloeil is a great loss to the artistic world. This ancient chateau called up a host of memories of past glory and grandeur, and the loss of its rare collection of historic relics is irreparable. Beloeil was not only one of the finest castles in Belgium or Europe, but was a veritable museum of paintings, arms, objects of art, manuscripts and rare books; its library was of immense value. It was the Versailles of Belgium. Here old Field Marshal Claude Lamoral, Prince de Ligne, died, after having been at all the courts and in all the camps of Europe.—Chicago News.

Passion for Litigation.

A recent illustration of the passion for litigation is furnished by a citizen of New York, who was a guest at one of the Mills hotels there, and whose undershirt was lost in the wash. What was deemed compensation for the lost garment was offered him, but he preferred to carry the case to the courts, where he sued Mr. Mills to recover 75 cents. He was nonsuited, and then he carried the case up to the higher courts, and now the appellate term of the supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court. It has cost the litigious plaintiff the price of several dozen undershirts.

Great Britain's Tardiness.

Great Britain, after many years of negotiation about the matter, has finally agreed to permit Russia to send a consul to Bombay. Hitherto the issue of an exequatur to a consular representative of Russia in India has been declined, the British government having refused to admit that the commercial interests of Russia in her dependency were of sufficient importance to warrant a departure of that character.

THE WOMAN FROM THE FARM

She is the quaintest little old body in the world. Her glistening white hair is always done in little sausage curls and she wears crisp gowns of black silk with real lace about the throat and wrists. Her little shriveled, knotted hands are laden with diamonds and pearls and her tiny feet are hidden in satin slippers of the softest kid. Her rooms, looking out over a park, are like dreams come true. They are furnished in pale, sweet colors and the rose bowls are crowded with flowers the year around. When she goes to air she has a dark brougham, with her own monogram on the panels, and a coachman and horses warranted to be perfectly reliable and not afraid of the cars, writes "The Girl Philosopher" in the Chicago Daily News.

She herself sometimes declares that all this luxury seems like a passing dream. In her heart she believes that it is awesomely extravagant to wear silk gowns for everyday, and she thinks that tatting is quite as good a finish for neck and sleeves as this real lace that can never be washed with honest yellow soap and water. "But I've got to live up to my son William's idees," she says with a comical sigh. "Though sometimes I do jest long for a dinner of corned beef and cabbage instead of one of these here course things where I get hungry while they're changin' plates."

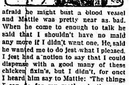
Then for a little while she is silent. Perhaps she is thinking of the time when those little knotted hands were red and hard from toil and those little feet were always a-weary from constant trudging on the farm. Then she bursts into another peal of laughter. "But the most ridiculous thing William and Mattie has tried yet was to say I must have a maid all to myself—not a hired girl, but a real maid to fuss around and do up my hair and lace my shoes and all them kind of things.

"So they got me one. She was a gay piece, with one of those pesky noses that I never could abide, still I guess she meant all right. But the first day she most set me plumb crazy! I jest couldn't think of enough things to keep her goin'. Finally I says: 'Maria, I'll make a bargain with you. I'll let you alone if you'll let me alone. You can have every afternoon and evening out if you'll let me do up my own hair and lace my own shoes. You can set in your little room to the back of my bedroom when you ain't out, and then if I should want anything I'll send for you.'

"Well, Maria was agreed to this, and we got along first class. Every onct in awhile William or Mattie ud ask me if I enjoyed my maid and I allus said yes, for it wasn't no untruth, for after Maria left me to my own devices she was a real comfort. Then one day William and Mattie saw my maid traipsing around when they thought she was on duty. They begun to make inquiries and then the whole story come out.

"Do you know, I jest felt like I had been caught stealing? But I wouldn't let them blame Maria, for she'd jest done exactly what I told her to do. I paid her to let me alone—and she done it. But when William and Mattie caught me I acted jest that sheepish. Finally I up and told them the whole thing and how I had jest kept a maid to please them.

"Then William laughed till I was afraid he might bust a blood vessel and Mattie was pretty near as bad. When he come to enough to talk he said that I shouldn't have no maid any more if I didn't want one. He said he wanted me to do jest what I pleased. I jest had a notion to say that I could dispense with a good many of these chicken fixin's, but I didn't, for once I heard him say to Mattie: 'The things I can do for my mother is the most comfort I get out of my money.' William's as good a son as ever was on this earth, so I jest try to please him by goin' round all togged up and livin' up to his ideas as well as I can. But I would relish some corn beef and cabbage, biled up together!"



LIKE RAISING DEAD.

A Gruesome Experiment in a Hospital in Denmark.

Dr. Soren Christiansen of Missoula, Mont., was in Missoula recently on his way home after a two months' visit in Denmark. Dr. Christiansen was present at a remarkable attempt to bring back to life a man who had died in a hospital at Naestved, Denmark, two weeks ago. "The experiment was most unusually successful, as resuscitation was effected several hours after the man was pronounced dead." Dr. Maag, who was in charge, was unable to maintain [illegible] sion that [illegible] from typhoid fever and Dr. Maag decided to try an experiment. Respiration had ceased completely and the body was cold. Direct massage of the heart was resorted to. The chest was cut open directly over the heart, and through the incision the physician passed his hand and seized the heart. He commenced a series of compressions, and in a short time the heart commenced to work of its own accord. The action of the heart gradually became stronger, but the man had not commenced to breathe. Only after the heart had been acting half an hour did the first gasp for air come. The patient was then assisted in this for about an hour until finally he was able to breathe quite freely. At the same time his cheeks began to assume a natural color. He lay in this condition for another half hour, but without regaining consciousness or appearing to feel the effects of the incision. Then there was a reaction and respiration ceased, although the heart continued to act eight hours longer. A second effort was made to induce heart action, but without result.—Minneapolis Times.

The Power of the Press.

Is a common expression, but few realize its actual power. Great as is the influence of the press, it cannot begin to equal the power of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters over disease. The Bitters strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, and cures dyspepsia, indigestion and constipation. It will tone up the nerves, stimulate inactive kidneys, and as an appetizer, it is unequaled. If you want to get well, and keep well, use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Necessary to Proper Courting.

A Glasgow servant girl went home a few evenings ago with her head wrapped up in a shawl.

Her young mistress asked her what ailed her, and was told that she was suffering from a bad attack of toothache, brought on by sitting in the park.

"But you ought not to sit on such a cold chilly night as this," said the mistress. "You should walk at a smart pace."

The girl looked at her a minute, as though pitying her ignorance, and then answered:

"You canna coort right walking; you maun sit doon."—London Spare Moments.

PRESIDENT OF PRESIDENTS.

A Distinguished Lady Indeed, Is Mrs. Mary E. Poole, of Whiting, Ind.

Whiting, Ind., Feb. 4, 1901.—(Special.)—The Presidents of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic have an association composed exclusively of the Presidents of the different State Associations. The Presidents' Association chooses a President, and, to this very high and distinguished position Mrs. Mary E. Poole of this place has been elected. Mrs. Poole is thoroughly deserving of this great honor. Her devotion to the interests of the Association is very marked, and her experience with the old soldiers of the G. A. R. is wide. Mrs. Poole is never slow to take advantage of anything that may benefit the veterans, and her zeal has resulted in much that is good to these grand old men. She writes of her experience: "Honor to whom honor is due, and having seen the numerous cures effected through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I gladly endorse them as being particularly effective to cure that dreaded disease of so many of our old soldiers, Bright's Disease and Kidney Disorders of different kinds. Kidney Disease soon poisons the entire system, and as a result the vital organs are attacked, and I have found that no remedy so surely, completely and quickly finds the weak spot and heals it as Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have used them myself in slight attacks of biliousness and indigestion, and usually find that from three to four pills do the work."

Such evidence from a lady of so much distinction and experience should convince any sufferer from Kidney Trouble that Dodd's Kidney Pills is the remedy that never fails. 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he can't supply you send to the Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Unlettered Politeness.

He was a poor but honest workingman, on his way home in a Broadway car. As the car proceeded down town it was filled with passengers, and soon the aisle was crowded, some swinging on the straps. The laborer got up from his seat, touched his hat, and motioned to a well-dressed lady to take it.

"Don't let me deprive you of your seat, my poor man," she said.

He touched his hat again, and replied:

"Oh, take it; that's all right. No depravity at all, woman, no depravity at all."

And he wondered why everybody smiled.—Louisville Commercial.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

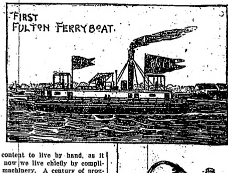
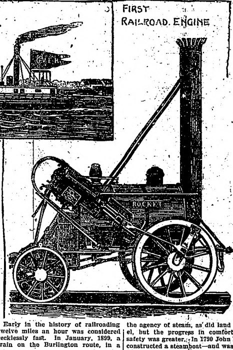
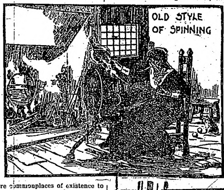
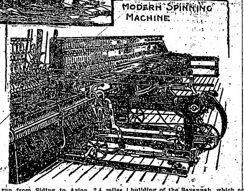
Epoch of Mechanism

Altered Condition of Life For All Mankind in the Century 1800-1900.









The nineteenth was a most materialistic century, an age of mechanism. We have progressed wonderfully in our capacity for luxury, extravagance, comfort. A hundred years ago our forbears were content to live by hand, as it were; now we live chiefly by complicated machinery. A century of progress has created demands which forced the dormant inventive skill of the world to put forth its best efforts. The world has made more progress in material things in the last 100 years than it did in all the centuries preceding. Civilized man's mode of existence has been totally altered by his inventions.

The world has gone patent mad. In the United States alone there were 623,535 patents granted in the sixty-two years from 1837 to 1898. During its existence the patent office has received more than $40,000,000 in fees. On carriages and wagons more than 20,000 patents have been granted; on stoves and furnaces, 18,000; on lamps, gas fittings, harvesters, boots and shoes and receptacles for storing, 10,000 each. The total of patents for the civilized world is easily twice that of the United States. Thanks to these hundreds of thousands of contrivances, what were luxuries to our forbears of 1800 are commonplaces of existence to all classes, rich and poor, in 1900.

With the invention of the steam engine the world shrunk at a bound to a twentieth of its former size. Its vast distances ceased to be formidable. Where the lumbering stage coach or the plodding caravan took weeks the flying express covers the distance in a few hours. The trip across this continent used to be a matter of life and death. Now it is a matter of $100 and take your ease as you go. Without the railroad a close-knit nation thousands of miles broad, such as this country, would have been an impossibility. In 1825 the first steam railroad was opened between Stockton and Darlington, England. A year later a similar experiment was tried at Quincy, Mass., where the engine hauled stone for a distance of four miles. The first passenger road in this country was the Baltimore & Ohio, opened in 1830, with a mileage of fourteen miles. Today there are 210,906 miles of railroad in this country; 163,216 in Europe; 26,834 in South America; 31,102 in Asia; 9,978 in Africa and 14,384 in Australia.

Early in the history of railroading twelve miles an hour was considered recklessly fast. In January, 1899, a train on the Burlington route, in a run from Siding to Arion, 2.4 miles, did the distance in one minute and twenty seconds, or at the rate of 108 miles an hour. The Empire State express made a record of 112 miles an hour in May, 1893.

Marine travel did not make so wonderful an advance in speed, through the agency of steam, as did land travel, but the progress in comfort and safety was greater. In 1790 John Fitch constructed a steamboat—and was considered a raving lunatic. This opinion was confirmed when his experiment proved a failure. Seventeen years later Robert Fulton, another so-called visionary, backed by Joel Barlow and Robert T. Livingston, built the steamboat Clermont. She was soon dubbed "Fulton's Folly" and when she started for Albany on Aug. 11, 1807, all New York was out to witness her failure. She went to Albany in the astonishing time of thirty-two hours, returning in two hours less. Now when a gigantic ocean liner, with lifeboats as large as the Clermont, crosses the Atlantic in less than six days, we read the news in a bored sort of way, displeased that steamers should be so slow. Fulton's experiment led, years later, to the building of the Savannah, which actually crossed the Atlantic, to the great astonishment of the entire world.

ABOUT CONVICTS.

Kindness Works Very Well on Those Released from Prison.

Maud Ballington Booth tells in Success how seventy-five per cent of the discharged convicts who have come under her notice have proved themselves trustworthy. Her words are highly interesting: "The drink evil is, of course, the primary cause of most crime. Crime follows drink as a tiger does blood, and we find that most convicts' families are left destitute, and we have to help them along, too. It is they who furnish most of the heart-breaking pathos of criminal life. Many sad stories could be told of the family left behind the man who goes to prison. But there are many happy stories of the reformed convict restored to wife and children through Hope Hall. We confine our work to no creed or sect, but Protestant, Catholic, Jew and infidel are alike welcome to our 'homes,' the only condition being that they must conform to the rules, and prove sincere in their reformation. At first the most difficult part of our work was to procure employment for released convicts. With all our assurances men would not entrust the man with a criminal record with their business. The reformed convict was looked upon as an impossibility, but these poor fellows had won my confidence, and I pleaded with business men to give them small chance to live. With success the prejudice gradually disappeared, and now in Chicago, where we receive twelve men per week from the prisons, we have more positions than we have men. I have some fine letters from business men concerning the trustworthiness and reliability of 'my boys.'"

Women as Bird Doctors.

One of the latest schemes of a clever woman forced to earn her own living is establishing herself as a bird doctor. Canaries are her specialty and she has established a hospital where she attends to the ills of these pets. Broken limbs, disordered digestive apparatus, catarrhs and fevers are treated by the woman with benefit to the birds and profit to herself. Other song birds and house pets, and even the repulsive parrot, are treated for their ailments by this bird doctor, who is said to be the only woman in the world making a specialty of this business. So well established is her fame in this direction that she makes visits to Philadelphia, Boston and other cities when called, and has established a regular clientele there, as well as here, among dealers who make the handling of birds an incident to their other business, as is the case at some of the department stores.—New York Times.

Thomas Jefferson's Sons-in-Law.

Both of the sons-in-law of Thomas Jefferson were members of congress from Virginia while he was president. Thomas Mann Randolph, who married his daughter, Martha, was Governor of Virginia from 1819 to 1822, and a member of the House of Representatives from 1803 to 1807. John W. Eppes, who married his only other daughter, Mary, familiarly called "Polly," was a representative from Virginia from 1803 to 1811, and from 1813 to 1815. In 1817 he was elected to the United States senate, but after two years of service resigned on account of his health. Thomas Mann Randolph impoverished himself in trying to save Mr. Jefferson's property.—Chicago Record.

Writing Scripture on a Postal Card.

Commissioner Rogers decided yesterday, says the Baltimore Sun, that P. R. Buckwald, who wrote a portion of the Tenth Commandment on a postal card, which he sent to Gustav Schmiedecker, had committed an offense under the statute prohibiting any writing on a postal card reflecting upon the character or conduct of another. In view of the circumstances of the case, however, the commissioner did not hold Buckwald for court. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife" was written by Buckwald on the postal card he mailed to Schmiedecker.

SHOWED HIM A MINE.

Trading Rat Left Gold in Place of Silver Spoon.

The action of a rat led N. R. Ingoldsby to the discovery of a rich gold mine in Arizona. He named the property the Rat Hole mine. Mr. Ingoldsby had been spending several months near Mammoth, on the San Pedro river, in Arizona. His purpose was to enjoy the hunting and make a collection of the animals and minerals of the Southwest. He pitched his tent in the canyon of the San Pedro, in the Santa Catarina mountains. He had no neighbors, and was for a long time unable to account for the disappearance of small articles that he left lying about his camp. At last he noticed that when anything was taken something was left in its place. This was usually a bit of wood or stone. The culprit he found to be a large rodent of the species known as the trading rat. The habits of the animal made an interesting study for Mr. Ingoldsby, and he often lay awake at night to watch for his visitor. A silver spoon was missing one morning, but in its place was a piece of quartz carrying free gold. This still more excited Mr. Ingoldsby's curiosity, and after several attempts he succeeded in following the animal to its home. Near by was the ledge from which the gold bearing quartz had been taken. Mr. Ingoldsby made an examination thorough enough to prove that his discovery was of considerable value.

Shakespeare's Limits of Travel.

Although no positive proof exist that Shakespeare ever saw any country other than his own, the possibility—perhaps, even the probability—that he did so is pointed out in an article by Jacob Riis in the Century. One of the illustrations of this article on the stronghold of Kronborg is a facsimile of a page from the town records of Elsinore, chronicling a visit from certain English actors, who then (1585) or later were the poet's colleagues. The Century secured special permission from the Danish government to photograph the record

CUTTING TEETH.

Sixth to Sixteenth Month Critical Time for Babies.

The time of the first dentition, which lasts usually from the infant's sixth or eighth month to the sixteenth, is one of the critical periods of life, yet its dangers have been greatly exaggerated. Formerly it was custom to refer every imaginable disease affecting a baby during eruption of its teeth to this process as the cause. Now medical belief is perhaps inclining too far the other way and some doctors refuse to credit teething with producing any other than merely local troubles. The process of cutting teeth is undoubtedly a normal one, and in a healthy infant is usually accomplished without any great difficulty or disturbance; but in puny and sickly children it is sometimes laborious and the cause of much distress. Among the many affections formerly regarded as provoked by teething the most common are diarrhoea, cough and convulsions; but probably the last named is the only one caused directly by this process. When a tooth comes through with difficulty the child's nervous system is worn upon by the local irritation, and it may become more and more irritable, until finally an explosion occurs and the child has convulsions. This is, however, a rare occurrence, and it is probable that the nervous constitution of such children is already weak, and needs only some slight irritation, whether from the teeth, the stomach, or the skin, to become convulsively excited. The diarrhoea and the cough are no doubt both due to indigestion, caused by nervous irritation. Local disorders of teething are more common. They consist for the most part in inflammation of the gums, which are red, swollen and hot, and in the drooling of a ropy saliva. In order to prevent inflammation the mouth should be kept perfectly clean, being washed out often with a solution of borax or boric acid, fifteen or twenty grains to the ounce. The baby's desire to bite should be gratified by providing it with a hard rubber, ivory or silver object on which to exercise its jaws. The general health should be carefully watched. Any tendency to diarrhoea or especially to constipation should be corrected, and the child should be kept in the air as much as possible. If the nervous symptoms are threatening, sedatives are needed, and it may be necessary to lance the gums. It should be remembered that a teething infant may have an illness quite independent of the teething process, and hence one should never neglect to call a doctor under the theory that its troubles are all due to the teething, and consequently are of little moment.—Youth's Companion.

DEER IN CONNECTICUT.

Their Number Probably Greater Now Than 150 Years Ago.

It seems to be a fact, proved by almost daily observation now, that the deer are returning to Connecticut, and in good numbers, too. Reports are heard almost daily of one or more of these graceful animals being seen in one or another part of the good old state, under circumstances which fix it that they are new arrivals. There are probably more deer in Connecticut today than at any previous time within the last 150 years, says the Hartford Times. They are seen on railroad tracks in fields and gardens and even feeding with the domestic cattle. Where they all come from and what is drawing them here seem not to be very clear. They are not only seen in most unexpected places, but appear to be singularly free from fear of human beings. They are seen, too, in nearly all parts of the state. A few days ago a young lady down the river below Middletown succeeded in photographing one of them by a snap shot. At almost any time within the last 100 years down to 1900 if a hunter wished to shoot a deer he made a long trip to find his game—going either to the Adirondacks or the far backwoods of Maine. Their appearance in such numbers might be accounted for by the disappearance of the wolves that formerly destroyed them; but the wolves have been gone in almost all parts of New England, for a long time, and their disappearance cannot now be relied upon to account for the deer. Whatever may turn out to be the cause of their sudden and rapid increase in numbers here in old Connecticut, it is a pleasant thing to see them returning to this neighborhood. What a pleasant addition to the neighborhood of our forest patches their graceful presence would make if their seeming trust in human kind is permitted to take root and stay.

Fear Cow May Explode.

Some men were recently blasting on Andrew McGuire's farm near here, says a Saugerties (N. Y.) special to Chicago Chronicle, and when they went to dinner they left some dynamite cartridges in the grass. The grass was particularly tender, and McGuire's cow later ate it with a relish. She also ate the cartridges; at least, they had disappeared. Every time the cow chews her cud now the farm hands tremble, and when McGuire last night went to milk the cow in a distant lot, where he keeps her isolated, he almost had convulsions. He was stealthily nearing the animal, trembling like a man on the firing line, when the cow suddenly moved and kicked up her heels. McGuire fell upon his face, expecting to see the cow disappear into the air, with the farm following her remains, but nothing happened. Veterinary surgeons have been consulted, but none could tell McGuire how long it takes a cow to digest dynamite.

To Disperse London Fog.

The Rev. J. M. Bacon, F. R. S., proposes to make a balloon ascent during one of the thick, impenetrable fogs which will visit London during the winter months. He proposes to ascend to the higher limits of the fog and to explore scientifically its constitution. He also proposes to discharge small cartridges of guncotton at great heights, in order to ascertain whether the concussion will dislodge or disperse the fog in any way. He has carried out several experiments with similar cartridges for acoustical purposes at varying altitudes.

"I am so nervous and wretched." "I feel as if I should fly." How familiar these expressions are! Little things annoy you and make you irritable. You can't sleep, you are unfit for ordinary duties, and are subject to dizziness.

I was not able to do anything. Had sharp pains all through my body. Before I had taken half a bottle of your medicine, I found myself improving. I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, and felt so well that I did not need to take any more. I am like a new person, and your medicine shall always have my praise."—MRS. W. P. DIAMONDS IN THE TEETH.

First They Were Placed There as a Fad for Actresses and Actor-Pugilists, but They Are Useful, Too.

Diamonds are now placed in teeth—false teeth, that is—for a use. They furnish an excellent cutting surface. They may be so set that they can never be seen by the world at large, unless one laugh heartily, or so that they show every time the mouth is opened. That is a matter of choice. But nothing yet found makes the cutting surface that they do for false teeth, though it costs money to use them.

Diamond-studded teeth became a fad with actresses some few years ago. One young woman held her place on the stage because she had a sparkling laugh that was due to the presence in one of her teeth of a diamond. One of the reformed pugilists who now haunt the boards wears a diamond in a front tooth.

Found in Turkey's Crop.

A few months ago a lady visitor at the farm of a citizen up Ashford way, while scattering corn for the chickens and young turkeys, lost from her finger a valuable diamond ring. A faithful search for the gem proved of no avail, and it was naturally concluded that the ring had been swallowed by some one of the fowls in his eagerness to partake of the corn.

A day or so before Thanksgiving, one of the turkeys of the flock fed by the lady when the gem was lost was killed that it might adorn the festive Thanksgiving board. By a peculiar coincidence the same lady was again visiting at the house. The crop of the turkey was unusually large and distended, and when opened was found to contain a handful of corn, two suspender buttons somewhat the worse for wear, half a dozen shingle nails, two poker chips, a piece of second-hand corn plaster, two cancelled postage stamps, seven toothpicks, and a partly-digested spool of thread.—Willimantic Weekly Journal.

Treating the Sandwich Man.

Three soldiers wearing the blue and yellow of the United States cavalry did a good turn the other day to a thinly-clad, shivering "sandwich" man, who was standing in front of Trinity church. The soldiers were making a hilarious way to South Ferry. Every block or so they stopped and took observations through a big black bottle. The sandwich man's teeth chattered, and he looked at the bottle greedily. One of the soldiers noticed the mute appeal. "Have a drink, old party?" he said, passing the bottle over. The sandwich man grabbed it in two purple hands, and before the cavalryman could stop him he had drank at least half a pint of the cheap whisky. Then he wiped his lips on his coat sleeve and returned the bottle. The cavalryman's eyes bulged with wonder.

"If I had a thirst like that," he said, "I'd never do another day's work."—New York Mail and Express.

It is impossible to give my little girl a box of candy. When you put such an article into her small hands, it is bestowed upon the entire household. She trots up stairs and down stairs, into parlors and kitchen, and for every piece of candy she eats every one else in the house must eat one, too. If she carries a box of goodies around in the same beautiful fashion when she grows up, she will be a missionary.—Russel Sewall, in Christian Endeavor World.

When it is necessary to keep a meal hot for a belated comer, do not set the plate holding the food in a hot oven, thus coloring the china as well as drying the food; instead place the plate upon the fire over a pan of boiling water, covering the plate with a pan that will just fit over the edge of the plate, says Table Talk. The food will keep hot and there will be enough steam from the boiling water in the lower pan to keep the plate moist and prevent the contents becoming dried.

Breakman Killed.

A sad accident occurred at Thief River Falls Monday noon which caused the instant death of Louis Hale, a Great Northern breakman, and badly injured another breakman named J. W. Barden. It appears from reports that the train crew had to switch some empty cars over the spur track down to the saw mill. Both breakman were on top of a car when the rails under the heavy weight spread, which caused the first car to jump the track and fall over on its side. Barden jumped and escaped with a sprained ankle and probably a slight fracture of the bone, but poor Hale was less fortunate. He also started to jump and in doing so fell directly under the car which had left the track and was tumbling over, and was instantly crushed to death. The deceased leaves a wife and three children who reside at Crookston.

Senator Turner, of Washington, in a speech against the Ship Subsidy bill, characterized it as vicious in its principle and absurd in its extravagance; one quarter government paternalism and three quarters a lawless, piratical raid upon the public treasury, its principal purpose being to enrich a few private individuals, by giving $270,000,000 of public money to one favored industry. Mr. Turner called particular attention to the fact that instead of operating for twenty years, as generally supposed, at a cost of $180,000,000, the bill, if it became a law, would operate for thirty years and cost $270,000,000.

The St. Hilaire run is not a swift one, but that is the fault of the time table and no one should lay it up against the train men. All the same they are telling a good one on Conductor Lockman in that connection. An old lady and a boy got on the train the other day to come to Crookston. After reaching St. Hilaire from Thief River the train had to go Red Lake Falls and double back, and while it was doing this the two waited at St. Hilaire. After getting headed this way the conductor went after the tickets, and the old lady handed out a half fare ticket for the boy. The conductor asked if the boy was not over 10 years old. The old lady, who was quite equal to the occasion, said: "He wasn't when we started, but it looks as if he would have a mustache before we reach Crookston. —Crookston Times.

There were 194 deaths from grip and pneumonia in Chicago last week and a prominent physician in speaking of the epidemic says, "the man who tries to stay on his feet and fight the disease makes a mistake. A rest of several days under a doctor's care is the only sure cure. It generally affects the air passage in the throat and chest, but it frequently goes to other parts of the body. It sometimes descends into the bowels. Persons who are suffering from any other disease are likely to catch influenza and suffer with it more than others. Every paper you glance at chronicles deaths from the grip while there is rarely one from small pox or diptheria.

Cass Lake is sadly in need of a few more dogs. On looking over the town we are inclined to the belief that there are not more than 1200 of the canine species, of all descriptions, and as we have at least 2000 people there is not a dog for each person. Will not some of our obliging towns furnish us enough to make up the deficiency? Be generous friends, and come to our relief in time of need.—Cass Lake Times.

Winter Made Butter

You cannot produce first-class winter butter unless you churn often. To churn every other day is better than once in three days, while to put it off till every fourth day is execrable practice. And yet a vast amount of butter manufactured on the latter plan is marketed every winter, much to the disgrace of the dairy trade.

It is found particularly in country stores where it has been exchanged by small dairymen at a second rate price for groceries. The tradesmen ship it in lots to the city market where all the way through whether it ends in the larder of a baker or on the table of the poor working man it is classed as inferior and sells for a low price. And yet the original material from which this butter was made was as good as that which is employed in turning out the twenty-five and thirty cent article. The inferiority of quality and subsequent loss to dairymen follows because they ignore the right principles of butter making. Suppose that a farmer after raising a fine crop of potatoes and digging them, should allow the tubers to lie a day or two in the sun before storing them in the root cellar? Could he expect to sell the green, bitter vegetables for full market quotations? Most certainly not, and even the most obtuse are thoroughly well aware of this fact, And yet, those who use common sense in this respect, with inconceivable folly will spoil good cream and butter by wanton neglect as outlined above. It is pretty costly neglect too, as it forfeit from eight to ten cents on every pound of inferior butter. This could all be obviated by churning cream when it is fresh and pure, i. e., slightly matured but not bitter, and manufacturing it into butter according to modern principles. Cream should all be secured from the milk in at least twenty-four hours and then the cream should be matured and churned within the next twenty-four. This can be done usually by keeping it at a temperature of between 60 and 70 degrees. It is where cream is kept at near 40 degrees, and for several days, that it develops that bitter flavor ruinous to butter quality. —Journal of Agriculture.

Some in Every Town.

Gossip is the most demoralizing thing that can strike a town and make the place a by word and blot on the face of the earth, lowers the moral standard of every person in it, and is only indulged in by people of low, degraded minds and unsavory reputation who, on looking back over their own lives, try to bring everyone to their own level. The world is not all bad; there is lots of good in it, and men and women who have good motives, even if they are not just your way; and should anyone even so far forget himself as to try to injure his fellow moral—stop suddenly, go buy a good book, educate your mind and try to elevate and make a place for yourself, honored and respected, instead of trying to pull everyone down in the slime beside you.—West Concord Enterprise.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

It will probably be a surprise to many farmers to hear that a good deal of grain is unfit for seed this year on account of the dampness which rendered so much of it worthless for almost any purpose, excepting as feed for hogs. A foresight however, will avoid a great deal of disappointment. Those having grain which has been damp ever since threshing or at least during mild weather should test it at once and if it proves to be unfit for seed they have a better chance now to have good seed than they will have a few months hence. This testing may be accomplished by filling a box about 10x12 inches in size partly with moist soil, which should be divided into as many sections with shingles, as there are kinds of grain that you wish to test. Now, count 100 grains of each kind, put into a box sufficiently covered with soil, keep in a warm place for a week or ten days and after that period you will know the approximate percentage of healthy grain in your seed.—Dakota Farmer.

No New Thing.

Few people know that slot machines were invented centuries before our time. Twenty-two centuries ago "Hero," the Grecian machanic, prefected a slot machine which stood in the court of one of the temples of Alexander, and was used by worshipers who dropped a coin in the slot to get water with which to wash their hands.

Progress has been made along the lines of greater perfection and purity rather than in novelty, for instance, beer as a drink is not new, but "Golden Grain Belt" beer is a comparatively recent perfection, for it stands for purity and perfection of brew. It is produced from the best barley malt, flavored with prime hops to make a nourishing, and healthful drink. If you need toning up don't fail to have a case in your home. Order from your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson Crookston.

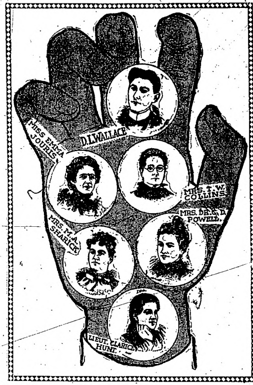
CAUGHT BY THE GRIP.

Released by Pe-ru-na---Congressman Howard's Recovery---Congressman Geo. H. White's Case



La Grippe is epidemic catarrh.—It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper. The masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful Grip had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

Pe-ru-na For Grip.

Mrs. Dr. C. D. Powell, President of Epworth League, also President of Loyal Temperance Legion, writes from Chehalis, Wash.:

"I have used several remedies in cases of severe colds and la grippe, but none I consider of more value than Peruna."—Mrs. Dr. C. D. Powell.

After-Effects of La Grippe.

Miss Emma Jouris, President Golden Rod Sewing Circle, writes from 40 Burling street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"This spring I suffered severely from the after-effects of la grippe. As the doctors did not seem to help me I bought a bottle of Peruna."—Miss Emma Jouris.

Congressman Howard's Letter.

Fort Payne, Ala.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen---"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."---M. W. Howard, Member of Congress.

La Grippe Leaves the System in a Deplorable Condition.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barbers' Union, writes from 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—L. D. Wallace.

Grippe Causes Deafness.

Mrs. M. A. Sharick, chaplain G. A. R. Woman's Relief Corps, writes from Fremont, Wash.:

"When la grippe was the prevailing illness in this Western country I was laid up, the whole winter, I partially lost my hearing, and had a very bad case of catarrh of the head and throat. I read of Peruna, tried it and had my hearing restored and catarrh cured. I cannot speak too well of Peruna."—Mrs. M. A. Sharick.

La Grippe Cured in Its First Stage.

Lieutenant Clarice Hunt, of the Salt Lake City Barracks of the Salvation Army, writes from Ogden, Utah:

Two months ago I was suffering with so severe a cold that I could hardly speak.

"Our captain advised me to try Peruna, and procured a bottle for me, and truly it worked wonders. Within two weeks I was entirely well."—Clarice Hunt.

Congressman White's Letter.

Tarboro, N. C.

Gentlemen--"I am more than satisfied with Peruna and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."--Geo. H. White, Member of Congress.

Remained in Feeble Health After Cured of La Grippe.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer Independent Order of Good Templars, of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctor called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned. Peruna cured me."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, O., for a free book on catarrh.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Worthless Fertilizer Folks.

The North Carolina College of Agriculture has sent out a warning advising farmers not to buy the fertilizer formulas that are being extensively advertised and sold. It says that in the first place most of the formulas are of no value, and in the second place that the agricultural colleges are always ready to supply the very best formulas free. It then publishes a formula that had been purchased of one of these agents for $5. It says:

One ton of the "fertilizer" would be made up as follows:

558 lbs.	Stable manure.
8 lbs.	Potash.
4 lbs.	Nitrate of soda.
4 lbs.	"Copperas."
12 lbs.	Muriate of ammonia.
5 lbs.	"Phosphate acid."
98 lbs.	Warm water.
81 lbs.	Lime.
927 lbs.	New dirt.
243 lbs.	Ashes.
60 lbs.	Salt.
2,000 lbs.	Total.

Some of these ingredients call for special mention:

The substance acid phosphate, or superphosphate, is in common use for fertilizing purposes, and phosphoric acid is also known to the chemist, but there is no such substance as "phosphate acid," and consequently, it is impossible for the farmer to purchase it.

Muriate of ammonia is not used for fertilizing purposes and is not licensed for sale in the state for such purposes. The only portion of it which is of value to plants is nitrogen, and it can be obtained more cheaply in the form of sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, or organic substances. The directions for making "Home Fertilizer" are to mix the chemicals with warm water. Under these circumstances the ammonia will be set free by the potash and be lost.

Copperas has been used upon experimental plots and found to be of no value in promoting plant growth.

Nitrate of Soda is valuable to plants when enough is used. In the "Home Fertilizer" only four pounds per ton of compost are used, and this quantity is too small to be of any value. The nitrogen in four pounds of nitrate of soda would be furnished by about three dead cats and three dead cats to the acre would not help the plants very much.

Commercial potash is a mixture of potassium carbonate, caustic potash and caustic soda. It is not used for fertilizing purposes and is not licensed for sale for such purposes. It is objectionable because, on account of its caustic properties, it would tend to set ammonia free, and because the fertilizing element which it furnishes can be obtained more cheaply from the potash salts which are found upon the market. The actual potash in four pounds of commercial potash could be obtained from one bushel of ashes.

Lime is of value on some soils, but when used it is best to apply it directly to the soil at the rate of one ton or more per acre. In the compost heap it sometimes aids and sometimes checks fermentation. Its value in the compost heap is questionable, and it is not recommended for such use by the leading authorities.

Salt does not furnish any element which is needed by the plant, and it is of no value in the compost heap. Many years ago it was used in the compost heap with lime, but it is no longer used in that way, as it is considered to be of no benefit.

Nearly one-half of a ton of "Home Fertilizer" is new dirt. The only object in using new dirt in a compost heap is to catch any ammonia which might otherwise be lost. For this purpose small quantities are sufficient. When large quantities of new dirt are used the fertilizing strength of the compost is weakened and a large amount of unnecessary labor in handling is involved.

The Agricultural Resources of Alaska.

In his report of work done by agents of the Department in Alaska, the Secretary of Agriculture, states that headquarters have been established in a building erected for the purpose in Sitka. A station has been located at Kenai, Cooks Inlet, and reservations of land for experimental work, have been made on the Yukon. The experiments thus far made have consisted largely in growing different varieties of cereals, forage plants, flax, and vegetables. Experiments in making and storing silage and in making hay from native grasses have been tried to a limited extent. The correction of the acidity of new land with lime has been successfully tried. Sufficient evidence has been obtained to show definitely that a considerable variety of vegetables can be successfully grown in different parts of Alaska. It has also been shown that in southeastern Alaska and in Cooks Inlet oats, barley, buckwheat and spring wheat will mature with careful culture and that the failure of many attempts to grow crops in Alaska has been due to the natural acidity of the soil and the lack of drainage. When these difficulties are removed by proper treatment the land is fertile and productive. Prof. Georgeson, who has investigated the Yukon valley, is very favorably impressed with its agricultural possibilities. He found large areas of excellent agricultural land and in the Dawson Chamber of Commerce he found fine specimens of wheat, barley and oats raised last year. In July at the time he visited the valley, he did not find any snow even on the highest mountains. Previous to his visit the thermometer had twice recorded a temperature of 96 degrees. In answer to criticisms that have been made of the work of the Department in Alaska, the secretary says: The problem which the department has undertaken to work out is to determine whether a sufficient agriculture and horticulture can be developed in Alaska to form an important subsidiary industry to aid in the permanent development of mining, fisheries and lumbering which will undoubtedly be the leading industries of this region. If all the food supplies of the population engaged in these industries must be transported from the United States and Canada, it is evident that the development of Alaska will be much slower and uncertain than if a considerable portion of these supplies can be produced in the territory.

Horticultural Observations.

The question of what crops to grow in the orchard is constantly being discussed, but the tendency of the discussions is to recommend that no exhaustive crop be grown there. Blue grass and other sod grasses should be avoided, as they deprive the roots of the trees not only of food, but of necessary moisture. This is a great factor in a dry season. We believe that the trend of public opinion is in the right direction.

* * *

The farmers that did not clean up their orchards in the fall before the snow came should see to it that the work is not neglected in the spring. It should be begun as soon as the snow is off the ground. All the dead leaves and old twigs and other burnable rubbish should be raked up and burned. The clumps of grass in the fence corners should be disposed of in the same manner. This is for the sake of destroying not only the eggs of insects but also the spores of destructive fungi, which live over on the fallen leaves and twigs. The latest investigations show that many of our worst fungous pests are carried over from year to year on the rubbish under the trees. This to some degree accounts for the non-success of spraying sometimes reported. With a thorough cleaning up of the orchard the spraying is generally effective. We say "generally," for the best medicines will sometimes fail to accomplish the end sought.

* * *

The raising of long keeping varieties of apples is one of the surest ways of making money out of fruit. We have watched the course of the apple industry for many years and have observed that the supply of winter apples is never too large. During many years the call for this kind of fruit has been great at all of the great fruit distributing centers. The foreign trade will pay more for long keeping varieties of winter apples, even if of poor quality (such as the Ben Davis) than they will pay for the very finest quality of summer and fall apples. The reason is that if the summer and fall varieties are shipped abroad at all they must compete with the summer and fall varieties grown in those countries, while the later keepers, being sent abroad after the first of January, have the market to themselves. As a safe investment the orchard of winter apples should commend itself to every apple orchardist.

Treatment of Bovine Distemper.

Bulletin 95 of the Virginia Experiment station says:

The treatment of bovine distemper may be divided into hygienic and medicinal. The hygienic treatment consists in allowing the animal plenty of fresh air, at the same time, however, severe weather or strong drafts should be avoided. The animal should have plenty of good, nutritious and easily digested food.

The medicinal treatment is principally symptomatic. Laxatives, diuretics, anti-pyretics, alternatives and tonics are advocated.

It is well to open the bowels at the onset of the disease with one pound of common salts (magnesium sulphate). If the extremities are swollen, a dose of two ounces of nitrate of potash, given as a drench twice a day, often relieves the trouble, and at the same time helps to lower the temperature. Where the temperature is very high and does not seem to be affected by the nitrate of potash, quinine may be given in drachm doses two or three times a day, dissolved in a little alcohol and given as a drench. When the animal is run down, sulphate of iron, two drachms, powdered nux vomica, one drachm, and powdered gentian, two drachms, given in a little cornmeal night and morning, tend to build the animal up.

If the breathing is difficult, frequent inhalations of steam containing a little turpentine or tar as a rule work very nicely. When the nervous symptoms are severe, bromide of potash, four drachms, and tincture of cannabis indica, one ounce, given every three hours, often quiet the animal. A two-drachm dose of iodide of potash, night and morning, given either by itself or with the preceding powder, has an excellent alternative effect. When the disease is complicated by pneumonia, it is well to blister the chest with a cantharides blister. The pulse should be watched very closely and if it becomes weak, one-grain doses of sulphate of strychnine should be administered hypodermically. Steam should be applied frequently. It may be well to add, in conclusion, that the hygienic treatment is generally all that is necessary in the mild forms of bovine distemper, and that the more severe symptoms should be treated as they arise.

Interesting Facts on Potatoes.

The experiment station Record quotes from some experiments of Prof. E. S. Goff as follows: When potatoes are placed for a few minutes in brine the lightest or those of poorest quality and most deficient in starch rise to the top. By this method it is an easy matter with the aid of a hydrometer to determine the amount of starch and hence the quality of the potatoes. The author planted the light, the medium and the heavy potatoes as indicated by the brine test for two years in succession, and, unlike European investigators, noted no improvement in the quality of the crops as a result of this selection. He found that tubers growing nearest the surface were of lowest specific gravity or poorest quality, and that the specific gravity increased with the depth at which the potato grew. This he ascribes to the cooler temperature at which the tuber grew found at greater depths. He also found that potatoes grown in level culture, with the consequent lower temperature within the soil, had a greater specific gravity than those grown in hills.

YOU'RE WEAK Instead of Strong!

Make Yourself a New Man!

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA BLOOD AND NERVE REMEDY.

Will Give You the Strength and Vigor of Perfect Manhood. Renews, Vitalizes and Invigorates Weak Men.

Old before his time! A broken-down, miserable wreck—weak, nervous, discouraged!

The world to him seems a place of mist, peopled with ghostly beings, whose flitting to and fro about their daily tasks serves but to irritate him. He sneers at healthy amusements, and finds no comfort or pleasure in life.

He is sick and he does not know it. He drags about, and therefore thinks he is well. He is despondent and peevish, and weak, and he does not know that there are merely signals—some from the stomach crying for aid—others from the nerves beseeching strength—still others from the great life-current—the blood—moaning that it is so impeded and clogged with impurities that it cannot move.

He, and all others like him, will find immediate relief in Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This is just what it was intended for. It never fails to make weak men strong and vigorous, puts new life, vim, strength, power and energy into them.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is New Life, Hope and Strength for Weak Men.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, electrician for the Thompson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:—"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not (at regularly) and got only a few hour sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed. I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the One Great Restorative Which Cures.

Dr. GREENE, 85 West 14th St., New York City, is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He has remedies for all forms of disease, and offers to give free consultation and advice, personally or by letter. You can tell or write your troubles to Dr. Greene, for all communications are confidential, and letters are answered in plain sealed envelopes.

IT'S WAR, NOT PEACE

GREAT BRITAIN'S POLICY CONTEMPLATES NO COMPROMISE.

Troops and Not Peace Commissioners Are Going to South Africa—Government Emphatically Denies the Rumor That Gen. Wood Would Be Sent Out as a Peace Commissioner — Gen. Botha Attacks Gen. Smith-Dorrien's Camp and Is Repulsed — British Movement Eastward Causes a Panic Among Boers.

London, Feb. 11.—Rumors that Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood would be sent to South Africa as a peace commissioner was yesterday officially denied. Lord Raglan, under secretary of state for war, made the following statement:

"The report as to a peace commission is false from beginning to end. The policy of the government is the very opposite of what would prompt such a step. Troops, not peace commissioners, are going to South Africa."

A dispatch from Gen. Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Feb. 9, says that Gen. Louis Botha, with 7,000 men, moved eastward on the British occupation of Ermelo, taking a peace delegate who had been sentenced, and other prisoners with him. All reports show that the Boers were exceedingly bitter. Louis Botha, with 2,000 men, attacked Gen. Smith Dorrien's camp at Bothwell at 3 a. m. Feb. 6. They were repulsed after a severe fight. Gen. Spruult was killed and Gen. Randemeyer severely wounded. Two field cornets were killed. Twenty dead were left. For the British casualties were twenty-four killed and fifty-three wounded. The British movement eastward is reported to have caused a panic among the Boers. Gen. Dewet is apparently crossing the line south of Jagerfontein, moving west. In Cape Colony Calvinia has been occupied by Col. De Lisle, who entered Feb. 6, the enemy retiring toward Kenhart. Col. Haig is driving the midland commandoes northward past Aberdeen.

MEXICO NEEDS A GOLD LOAN.

Reported That Banker Creel Is Seeking $50,000,000 From Capitalists of New York.

Mexico City, Feb. 11. — A report is current here in financial circles that Banker Creel's visit to New York is to negotiate a $50,000,000 gold loan, which would enable local banks to resume the free discounting of paper and give relief from the monetary stringency. Money would thus be kept on deposit in the banks as a means of creating confidence.

Death in a Mill.

Stanley, Wis., Feb. 11.—The fifteen-year-old son of Peter Brill was caught in the main shaft of F. S. Grubb's flour mill at this place and lived less than an hour. His clothing caught in the coupling as he was oiling the shaft.

The incident growing out of Minister Wu's criticism of Gen. Otis in his letter to the Society of the Genesee is probably closed satisfactorily. Minister Wu has disavowed to the state department any intention of criticising the government of the United States.

ROBBERS MAKE BIG HAUL.

Get Away With an Express Safe Containing $40,000.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 11.—Prompt and active work by the authorities at Manila, Iowa, yesterday resulted in the arrest of three men who are suspected of having been implicated in the theft of a United States express safe, said to have contained $40,000.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul train, on which the safe was taken from Sioux City, arrived at Manila at 8:05 p. m. Saturday night. The Omaha train was late and James Sturtevant of Sioux City, the express messenger, did not hurry unloading the goods and packages from his car. The express safe, with other articles, was unloaded and placed on a truck on the depot platform, and then Sturtevant and the baggageman went to the other end of the platform to get another truck load. When Sturtevant returned he noticed that the articles on the truck were disarranged and a glance showed that the iron box was gone. There was great excitement and no time was lost in spreading the alarm. City Marshal Ferrell hastily assembled a posse and vigorous work began. Snow lay thick upon the ground and it did not take long to discover the tracks of two persons who evidently had been carrying some heavy object directly from the truck as it stood upon the depot platform. They carried the safe a distance of about two blocks and then loaded it into a wagon, which had been left there in waiting. The wagon was driven about a mile and a half into the country and there the safe was forced open and the contents were abstracted. The men then went their way on a new track. It was not difficult to trace them, however, and yesterday morning three arrests were made. Their names are John Jackson, John Stovalt and Charles Hayes. All are men who live at Manila and are well known. Their reputations heretofore have not been bad. They stoutly protest their innocence, but the authorities believe the evidence against at least two of them will prove conclusive.

The safe which was stolen contained in the neighborhood of $40,000; $12,000 in cash and the remainder in drafts, checks and valuables. None of the valuables or money has been recovered.

NONE CAN EXPLAIN STABBING.

Many Witnesses Called at Minneapolis in Trial of F. H. Hamilton on Murder Charge.

Minneapolis, Feb. 11. — Sensational evidence was given Saturday in the case of Frank H. Hamilton, accused of the murder of Leonard R. Day. A number of witnesses to the quarrel in the billiard room of the West hotel which culminated in the death of Day were called. None said he saw a knife in the hands of the accused man or saw him stab his antagonist. One man, who separated the combatants, told of a mysterious knife wound in his hand sustained while he was attempting to restore peace.

The trial began with the formal presentation of the case to the jury by County Attorney Boardman. Mr. Boardman outlined what he expected to prove with reference to the prisoner's connection with the death of Day by stabbing in the billiard room of the West hotel at an early hour of the morning of Nov. 25 last. The County Attorney made the sensational statement that Hamilton, before friends and attorneys had been able to reach him and advise silence, had made a confession of the crime to a police officer and had claimed that it was done in self-defense. The court room was packed with a curious crowd. A number of the relatives of the dead man were present, and for the first time appeared Miss Caroline Slagle, the "woman in the case."

The Wacouta will be outfitted for a five months' trip, though the present calculations contemplate only an absence of four months. As near as can be ascertained now the Wacouta will go to Bermuda, Naples and the Mediterranean.

Over 1,500 Japanese have been let out, and there are at the present time very few Chinese on any of the divisions. The Japanese in the shops destroyed more raw material and did poorer work than any force ever employed there.

JOINTS MUST CLOSE

TOPEKA CITIZENS IN MASS MEETING ISSUE ULTIMATUM.

Jointists Given Until Noon Friday to Close Their Places — If They Don't a Thousand Armed Men Will Remove Them by Force—Lively Times Are Expected and Bloodshed May Result — Nearly All Prominent Business Men in the Move—Mob of One Thousand Wrecks Two Saloons at Holton, Kan.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 11.—Three thousand male citizens of Topeka, in mass meeting here yesterday, decided that the numerous joints of the city must close. They issued an ultimatum giving the jointists until Friday next at 12 o'clock, noon, to quit business. If this is not done warning was given that a thousand armed men would immediately move on the joints and remove them by force.

Yesterday's action is the result of the crusade started in Topeka less than ten days ago by Mrs. Carrie Nation. The meeting was a remarkable one in every respect. It was called by a committee of the law enforcement league, and was attended by nearly all the prominent business men of the city. There was a feeling of intense earnestness pervading the meeting. Conservative men who have hitherto advocated moderation in the dealings with the lawless element, insisted in unmistakable terms that the time had come when patience had ceased to be a virtue and that the people of Topeka should take the law in their own hands. Twelve hundred men signed their names to cards pledging themselves to be ready at a moment's notice to join the army which has been recruited to stamp out the joints by the time the limit set by the ultimatum expires. There seems to be no question that the next few days in Topeka will see interesting developments, possibly bloodshed.

Great Mob Raids Saloons.

The Carrie Nation crusade has reached Holton, twenty-eight miles north of this city, and as a result of a raid in that town two saloons were smashed and their liquid contents destroyed. The Holton raid, however, differed from the ones led by Mrs. Nation in other Kansas towns. Instead of one woman or a few women armed with hatchets, 1,000 citizens, men and women, banded together and made the attack in force. The crusaders started out shortly after dark. Preparations had been made during the afternoon and the raiders were well armed with axes, hatchets, crowbars and clubs. There was not a semblance of lawlessness at any time during the progress of the smashing. Lawyers, newspaper men and business men helped to swell the crowd, which was composed of some of the best people of Holton.

MANY WERE INJURED.

Motor Car Crashes Into a Sleighing Party.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 11. — A westbound motor crashed into a sleighing party of twenty-two persons at the corner of Scoville avenue and Kennard street, and eleven were more or less injured, but none fatally. The party had been to a dance in the country and were returning to their homes. The motor car was running at a high rate of speed and it struck the sleigh as it was half-way across the track. A number of those in the sleigh saw the car in time to jump and escaped injury.

WOMAN WINS AT MONTE CARLO.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 11. — Mrs. Edith Evelyn Smith, chatelaine of "Shore Acres" at Narragansett Pier, who is now cruising in European waters, is, according to letters received by her relatives, said to have during her recent visit to Monte Carlo succeeded in winning at the tables there 250,000 francs, or $50,000.

DIED AS PARDON WAS SIGNED.

Soon after the paper was signed and prepared for transmission to the Jackson prison the governor received a message announcing the death of the prisoner.

Rebel Indians Defeated.

Mexico City, Feb. 11. — The federal troops in Yucatan have had another battle with rebel Indians who were strongly intrenched but the Indians were unable to withstand the charge made on their position and fled in all directions. Portugal Will Help England.

MRS. MAYBRICK FREE

REPORT SAYS SHE WILL BE RELEASED TO-DAY.

Woman Who Has So Long Been Imprisoned on the Charge of Having Poisoned Her Husband Is at Last to Taste Freedom — Ambassador Choate Refuses to Deny or Confirm the Report—Due to King Edward's Influence—Token of Appreciation of American Sympathy.

London, Feb. 11.—At 10 o'clock this morning the gates of Aylesbury prison will swing open and Mrs. Florence Elizabeth Maybrick, the American woman whose case has stirred two continents for years, will walk out a free woman.

The news that King Edward VII. had granted the appeals made by those who have been staunch friends of this woman during her long trial and her term of penal servitude became noised about last night—too late, however for the glad tidings to get much beyond her circle of friends.

The greatest praise is heard upon all sides for the act of King Edward. It is understood that in thus granting clemency to Mrs. Maybrick the king wishes to emphasize the character of his regard for America, and in the judgment of most Americans he could not better inaugurate this than with this striking example of mercy.

Many of Mrs. Maybrick's friends and admirers will be at Aylesbury prison at the morning hour when her release is expected, to welcome her again into the air and sunlight of freedom. What her plans for the future may be are not known, but it is believed that she will start for America at once.

TORTURED BY ROBBERS.

Farmer Compelled to Disclose the Hiding Place of His Money.

Mansfield, Ohio, Feb. 11.—One of the most dastardly robberies ever perpetrated in this part of the country was committed near McKay, a hamlet in Ashland county, about midnight Saturday night. Six masked robbers broke into the residence of John Duncan, a wealthy farmer, bound and gagged Mr. Duncan and the four other members of the family, and, after ransacking the house, demanded of the farmer that he disclose to them where his money and other valuables were secreted, and on his refusing to do so they applied matches to his feet, torturing him and the others until the location of the money was disclosed. The thieves evidently knew that Mr. Duncan had considerable money at home, as he was suspicious of banks. They secured $450, four watches and other valuables, after which four of the robbers, leaving their victims still helpless, stole a team of horses and bobsled and made their escape. The other robbers went toward Loudonville. The Mansfield police have been notified and every effort is being put forth to find the guilty parties.

Besides the loss on the Valentine-Schroeder building the damage is largely by water and smoke and is estimated at about $65,000.

They are held pending investigation.

DEMANDS UPON CUBA

PRESIDENT'S PLAN TO AVOID AN EXTRA SESSION.

Senator Platt of Connecticut Will Try to Get Congress to Pass a Joint Resolution Which Shall Cover Five Demands Upon the New Cuban Government—Resolution Will Be Tacked on to the Army Appropriation Bill—Extra Session Inevitable Unless Congress Takes Some Action.

Washington, Feb. 10.—In order to solve the Cuban problem without calling an extra session the president has consented to allow Senator Platt of Connecticut to try and get congress to pass a joint resolution which shall cover five demands of the United States on the new Cuban government. They are:

First—Guarantee of protection of life and property of Spaniards resident in the island.

Second—Pledge not to recognize the bonded debt which Spain tried to fasten on the island.

Third—Reimbursement of the United States of a part of the cost of the Spanish war.

Fourth—A coaling station and naval base.

Fifth—Control by the United States of foreign treaties.

It is proposed to attach the resolution to the army appropriation bill as an amendment and let both pass or fail, as Democratic opposition decrees.

Persons in positions to be well informed as to the president's purposes believe that an extra session will be inevitable unless congress shall take some action with respect to Cuba and its relation to this country. With that matter disposed of there is good reason to believe that an extra session will be avoided. A strong effort will be made to render an extra session unnecessary, and with this feeling the president is in full accord.

They have announced that they will meet Mrs. Nation at the train with a brass band and escort her through the principal streets of the city. The temperance workers of the city will resist such action, and it is expected there will be a riot if such a thing is attempted. Mrs. Nation will, it is rumored, be placed under bonds to keep the peace as soon as she reaches the city.

She had repeatedly warned Mr. Behler not to sell to her husband, who was in jail at the time.

QUEEN IS MARRIED

ROYAL WEDDING MADE A HUGE FAMILY AFFAIR.

All Holland Rejoices With the Young Queen in Her Happiness—With Simple Ceremonies Wilhelmina Is Joined in Wedlock to Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin — Populace Behaves Like a Multitude of Happy Children — Duke Is Proclaimed a Prince — Queen Yields Obedience as Wife but Not as Queen.

The Hague, Feb. 9.—Queen Wilhelmina's marriage to Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who yesterday became Prince Heinrich of the Netherlands, was a huge family affair. All Holland that could came to The Hague to participate. Those who remained at their homes in other cities and villages of the kingdom celebrated with parades, decorations and banquets.

Never was there seen a more beautiful and happy wedding. The popular belief is that it is a love match, like that of Victoria and Albert, and this gives a romantic coloring to the event which is generally lacking in royal marriages.

The ceremonies were the same simple and unritualistic rites of the Reformed church by which the humblest of Queen Wilhelmina's subjects are married. The whole spirit of the affair was plain and democratic. The venerable pastor administered to the bride and groom a caution that their high positions would not shield them from the common sufferings and sorrows of humanity.

Very Winning Bride.

Queen Wilhelmina made a very winning and human bride. She blushed and became confused over the ceremonial with the ring, as all brides are supposed to do, while her happiness and pride over the enthusiasm of her people were plainly deeper than a mere matter of form.

Prince Heinrich was an awkward but stalwart and manly figure. Either he was forgetful or badly trained in his part, for the pastor had to give him two or three hints as to how to carry himself. The scene as the royal couple stood with clasped hands before the chaplain in a circle of brilliantly arrayed personages, including their relatives and people composing the highest families of Holland and the neighboring German principalities was wonderfully gorgeous.

Last night the populace was like a multitude of happy children. Thousands swarmed through the principal streets, which were nearly impassable, blowing horns, singing the national hymn, following the bands and smashing hats and lanterns. There was considerable inspired by the wine, but no offensive drunkenness. A noteworthy feature of the holiday season is the entire absence of extortion on the part of the hotels and shopkeepers, and the warm hearted hospitality with which all strangers are received is equally observable.

The queen and prince consort stole a march on their friends when they arrived at the railway station with a party of guests at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and boarded a special train waiting there to take them to Loo palace. The people waiting in the streets and about the palace in The Hague were disappointed to see the royal escort gallop back alone.

The civil ceremony in the palace of justice was very brief. The bride and groom, the queen mother and the mother of the groom and six witnesses inscribed their names upon the official document. The minister of justice first asked the mothers, according to the usual form, if they had any objections to the marriabe, and they answered in the negative amid general smiling. In asking the bride and groom if they were willing faithfully to fulfill all the Duties of the Marriage State.

the minister of justice said: "The question is most important, not only to you, but to our beloved country." The queen and her betrothed answered in the affirmative, whereupon the minister of justice said: "I now declare you married according to law, and I wish you all possible happiness."

The queen and Prince Heinrich have bound themselves by the contract, in accordance with the statutes, to recognize the husband as the head of the matrimonial union, to provide for and educate the children of the union. The husband assumes the responsibility of representing the wife in all civil actions and of administering her property, except as he is restricted by the marriage contract, by the terms of which he renounces any right to sell or mortgage her landed property. The wife promises to obey the husband, but by a special recent act of the Dutch parliament, she is exempted from the usual promise "to dwell with him wherever he deems it best to live."

It is further provided that the queen shall yield obedience to the husband as wife, but not as queen, and the husband relinquishes the right to administer the wife's property.

Mr. Wilcox informed the committee that he will have his answer to the charges ready to-day, and an adjournment was taken until then.

A Caroline Islands Legend.

The Caroline Islands group includes besides coral islands five mountainous islands of basaltic formation, beautiful and fertile with rivers and springs.

Among the many queer legends of these children of the Pacific there is none more highly improbable than their theory as to the origin of these islands and their inhabitants. They think they themselves were very strong in the water—in fact, they lived in it.

The story goes that a woman and her children were floating around on the reef when a man appeared from the west with a basket of soil on his shoulders. He had started out to make an island with a mountain on it. One of the children cried out to him, "Give us a little soil to make a place for our mother to rest, for she is very weak and cannot swim." He took out a handful of the earth and threw it down, making an island. As the man was going on his way over the water the son slyly made a hole in the basket, so as he proceeded on his way he left a trail of land behind. Suddenly he became conscious that the basket seemed light, and, looking around, he saw the land. In his anger he turned about and trod upon it, and thus the islands were formed.

Insisted on a Change.

The spick and span young officer who calmly takes command over veterans grown "gray in battle and victory" is sometimes an amusing person, particularly if a sense of his own importance is unduly developed.

On one occasion word was received in various South African camps that on such and such a morning every man in Officer ——'s army must change his shirt.

The Imperial Light horse, who formed part of the command, had only one shirt apiece, and that was on their backs. So a messenger was dispatched to explain. But the honorable and gallant officer, fresh from Sandhurst, knew his business.

"If the men of the Imperial Light horse have not got a second shirt," said he firmly, "let them change shirts with each other. My orders are imperative."

And There He Was.

"Yes," he said, "I think a man owes it to himself to choose a wife who can do housework, if necessary. Of course I wouldn't want my wife to work in the kitchen, but she ought to be able to do so. One never can tell what may happen. Girls sometimes leave suddenly, and fortunes are occasionally swept away. In my opinion, a girl does herself just as much honor in learning to do housework as in learning to play the piano or in studying 'Omar Khayyam,' and"—

"Oh, Mr. Spoodlekins," she cried, "excuse me for interrupting you, but such a funny thing happened this afternoon. I dropped the dishcloth and said to myself, 'There, I know somebody will come this evening!' And here you are!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

Rarity of a Dread of Death.

Sir Lyon Playfair, who represented the University of Edinburgh for 17 years, naturally came in contact with the most eminent men of England, and he put this question to most of them, "Did you in your extensive practice ever know a patient who was afraid to die?" With two exceptions, it seems, they answered "No." One of these exceptions was Sir Benjamin Brodie, who said he had seen one case. The other was Sir Robert Christison, who had seen one case, that of a girl of bad character who had a sudden accident.—Health.

The Bishop Knew Him.

A story current about the bishop of London represents him as a bored listener to a windy speech. Turning to a fellow sufferer, he said, "Do you know that speaker?"

"No," was the answer.

"I do," said the bishop. "He speaks under many aliases, but his name is Theomas Rot."—London News.

Where the Danger Was.

A little beyond a certain Scotch village the main road has a marked declivity, and this added to a sharp turn at the bottom decided the authorities to erect a danger board. The job was intrusted to an old worthy, who duly fixed up the warning at the foot of the hill.

"What's wrang with the bottom of the brae, ye thundering idiot?" exclaimed a village dignitary angrily.

"Man, there's everything wrang," came the curt reply. "Is it no there where a' the accidents take place?"

HER SUMMONS CAME.

A SIGN IN WHICH MRS. GALLUP READ HER DEATH WARRANT.

She Dropped the Dishcloth and After That Fatal Warning Spent the Balance of the Evening In Telling Mr. Gallup How She Thought He Ought to Run the Funeral.

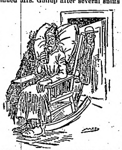
[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

As Mr. Gallup lighted his tin lantern after supper and started out to buy half a pound of Rio coffee for breakfast and call at the postoffice Mrs. Gallup was in excellent spirits and had most of the dishes ready for washing. He was absent 32 minutes, and when he arrived home he found her huddled up in the big rocking chair, with a pillow behind her head and the camphor bottle in her hand. She took three long sniffs at the bottle and gave three long drawn sighs as he entered, but it was labor thrown away. Mr. Gallup blew out his lantern and hung it up behind the cellar door, and, having deposited the coffee on a shelf in the pantry, he removed and hung up his coat and hat, sat down and took off his shoes and then, taking a circular from his pocket and putting on his glasses with great deliberation, began to read. It was a circular regarding a new discovery in the cure of consumption, and he had not yet finished with the first testimonial when Mrs. Gallup sobbed four times in succession and faintly asked:

"Samuel Gallup, do you know that your dyin wife is present in the room?"

He made no reply. That testimonial from one who had been cured after his coffin had been purchased made him hold his breath as he read.

"Yes; she is present," dolefully continued Mrs. Gallup after several sniffs at the bottle, "and she wants to hev a few last words with you. When you started over town, I was singin 'Barbara Allen' and thinkin my days might be long in this land. Not five minits later the summons come. I had just started to wash the dishes, and I had that cracked blue platter in my hand, but I hadn't gin it over two wipes when the dishcloth fell to the floor with a great spat. You are hearin what I say, ain't you, Samuel?"



HUDDLED UP IN THE BIG ROCKING CHAIR.

Mr. Gallup wasn't. He was devouring the second testimonial, which gave the case of a woman who had been given up by over 50 doctors, and yet two bottles furnished her with a new pair of lungs.

"When that dishcloth fell, I knew that my time had come. That's the way Mrs. Grover and Mrs. Taylor went. Their dishcloths fell, and in 24 hours they was in heaven. I shall be up there by tomorrer night, Samuel, while you'll be free to stay out all night to hear the political news. I'd hev died before you come back home, only I wanted to talk with you a leetle about the funeral. Let's see. If I die tonight, you'll hold the funeral day after tomorrer, won't you, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon?"

Mr. Gallup was listening to a noise outside. He heard something to remind him of a hen trying to crow, and he wondered if it could be that so long after dark.

"If you want it a day sooner, you can hev it," continued Mrs. Gallup after sobs and gasps and sniffs at the bottle, "but you must look out or the nayburs will talk. Better hev it day after tomorrer, and I hope, for your sake, it won't be a rainy day. I've sometimes thought I'd like a big funeral when I went, with over 40 wagons in the purcession and the church bell a-tollin and the dogs a-howlin, but I've given that up. No, Samuel, you needn't make any spread over me. I'm one of the kind that kin go to heaven without any hurrah and fireworks. If there is ten wagons in the purcession, I shall be satisfied. Don't you think ten ought to be 'nuff for a person like me?"

It wasn't a direct question, but had it been Mr. Gallup would not have answered. He was devouring the third testimonial and making up his mind to try a bottle on the sly.

"Ten wagons in the purcession, Samuel, and the bells needn't toll nor nuthin else happen. If anybody is diggin taters or makin soft soap or dyein carpet rags, they needn't stop on my account. If 25 people come to the house, that will be 'nuff. We've got 'leven chairs altogether, countin them with broken backs, and Mrs. Walters will lend you the rest. You'll hev our own preacher, of course, but he needn't go on for an hour or two and tell how good I was and how much you'll miss me. If he says that my toll is o'er, and that you won't never find a more savin wife, that'll be about 'nuff. Shall you do any cryin at the funeral, Samuel?"

No answer.

"I'd do a leetle bit if I was you—jest a leetle. If you don't, folks will talk about it same as they did about Jim Dewitt. He never cried at all, and to this day folks say he didn't use Hanner right. I don't ask you to break down and sob and git up an excitement, but you kin gasp a few times and wipe your eyes and blow your nose. I'm sorry you'll hev to take that long ride to the graveyard, as you could be playin checkers or suthin, but I don't see how you are to git out of it. However, you won't never hev to go up there ag'in. When you git ready to buy me a gravestun, you kin send it up by a man. I s'pose you'll buy a stun of some sort, won't you?"

Mr. Gallup didn't hear. In the fourth testimonial a man declared that he had been saved after one whole lung and three-quarters of the other were gone, and it was a sketch to thrill the reader clear down to his toes.

"Of course I don't keer about no gravestun for myself," said Mrs. Gallup as she tried to wipe away her tears with the glass stopper of the bottle, "but if you don't put one up the nayburs will call you stingy. Get a cheap one, however. If you kin git one fur $10 and trade a lot of carpet rags in, I'd do it. I used to think I wanted a whole lot of readin on my gravestun, but I've changed my mind. Jest put on that Susan Gallup expired in the forty-ninth year of her age of gineral disability and that she has found rest where asthma, boils, backaches and rheumatiz cease from troublin. You needn't say a word about makin 40 yards of rag carpet and a bar'l of soft soap last year while enjoyin sore eyes and a boil on my arm or that I allus kept catnip, smartweed and peppermint herbs in the house and was a nurse to all the nayburs. No, Samuel, you needn't—say a word—about them things. Make it—a cheap—gravestun, and you needn't—never go up there—and—and"—

And when Mr. Gallup had finished the testimonials and fully determined to buy at least three bottles and hide them in the wood shed he rose up, yawned and stretched and looked around to find Mrs. Gallup asleep and the camphor wasted on the floor.

We Want Correspondents

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

The Porter's Lucky Day.

"We were traveling from El Paso to the coast," said the advance man of a theatrical combination, "and the porter had tucked us snugly in our berths, when we were awakened to the consciousness that our train was 'held up.' The robbers marched us out of the car and made us deliver. Fortunately not one of us had more than a few dollars in cash. But the man who held up the car porter gave a yelp of delight: 'See what I've found! Put 'em back! Start the train!'

"In the careless porter's vest pocket he had discovered a roll of bills as big as the pocket would hold. It looked as if there must have been several hundred dollars. We all knew of the profitable rapaciousness of the Pullman car porter, but never dreamed that his accumulations were so large. Yet the friendly human spark of forgiveness and sympathy was in our hearts for the poor fellow losing so much at one fell swoop. We were gathered in the smoking compartment and had a consolation purse under advisement for the darky, when he came along himself:

"'Mah Lawd, dat was the luckiest sperience I done ever had,' he said, chuckling all over.

"'Lucky!'

"We were astonished. A poor servant robbed of hundreds chuckling with glee!

"'Deed, yes, gem'men! Dey never look but jis' in only one of my pockets!'"—New York Times.

FASTEST BOAT EVER BUILT.

Launched at Nyack (N. Y.) Ship Yard —Is Expected to Make Over Forty Miles an Hour.

Charles R. Flint's Arrow, under contract to be the fastest ship ever designed, was launched the other day at the ship yard in Nyack, N. Y. It has been built under a guarantee by its designer of 42 miles an hour, and it is expected that under pressure it will be able to make 50. It has been generally given out that the boat was constructed as a yacht for Mr. Flint's personal use, but rumors have been persistent that it was built under contract with one of the South American governments for service as a torpedo boat.

The plans, so far as they have been made public, show the vessel fully equipped for torpedo service.

The Arrow will go in tow to Newark, N. J., where shafting and engines will be put in. The yacht's destination after it has been fitted out at Newark has not been pronounced.

She Has Nine Lives.

The announcement of the illness of the empress of China need occasion her friends no alarm, says the Pittsburgh Times, since a woman who has been so often assassinated, poisoned and burned will easily be able to pull through an ordinary illness.

Chinese Bicyclists.

Chinese bicycle riders are frequently seen in the streets of Hong-Kong and Shanghai carrying an open umbrella and a fan, and in some instances with the handle bars removed.

PLAYING ON SYMPATHY.

The Mean Trick of a Mercenary Youth Who Was Looking for the Coin.

He wore a heavy blue reefer and carried a coarse burlap bag that was much the worse from wear. After depositing the bag under the feet of those on the platform he calmly sucked the yellow end of an unlighted cigarette butt. Something in the bag moved and the conductor was curious, says the Chicago Daily News.

"Rabbits?"

"Naw! A cat."

"Going to take it off somewhere and lose it?"

"Yes, the river is a good dump as any. Down will go the bag and the old tomcat will make a hole in the soft mud."

The blond and brunette sitting near the door had heard it all. Big tear drops came rolling down their cheeks.

"W-what y-you going to d-drown the poor c-cat for?" stammered the blond, and then she just broke down and sobbed loud enough for all to hear.

"Well, it's this way, miss," said the youth in the reefer: "Mrs. Finnegin comes down to our flat and says: 'Jimmy, do you want to make a quarter?' 'Sure!' says I. 'Do you want another ton of coal basketed up to your flat!' 'Naw, Jimmy,' says she, 'I want you to drown a cat.' 'What?' says I, dropping me codfish and looking surprised. 'Yes,' says she. 'I want you to take our old Tommy down to the river. He's got in the habit of jumping on the table and drinking the baby's milk and the old man won't stand it.' Well, miss, I never took no sport in drowning cats, but quarters are scarce, and that's how it happens."

The brunette said something in the blond's ear. There was a hasty unclasping of pocketbooks and two green notes reached the youth in the reefer.

"Now give us the poor cat," said the blond. "We will give him a good home."

"Sure!"

The youth in the reefer shifted the bag in and then hopped off at the next corner.

"Oh!" cried the brunette, as she opened the bag and peeped in cautiously.

"What kind of a cat is it?" asked the blond.

In response the brunette shook the bag and the contents hopped across the car. It was a crippled chicken.

"Oh, that young villain has deceived us. That is the cat we paid to save. Come, get off!"

"One moment!" said the conductor; "you will have to take the chicken and bag with you."

The last the laughing passengers saw of the embarrassed girls they were heading for a vacant lot.

Comforts of Life in Kalamazoo.

"Yes," said the man who was sitting out in front of a log house, "there is some malaria around here."

"Do you suffer much from it?"

"I don't suffer as much as I useter. When I'm havin' a chill I think about how good an' warm I'll be when the fever comes, an' when I have the fever I think about how cool the chill will be, an' that way I manage to get right smart o' comfort."—Kalamazoo Gazette.

The Exceptions.

"I suppose," said the visitor to the penitentiary, "that prisoners are always anxious to have their terms expire?"

"Some of them ain't," replied the guard.

"Remarkable! Which are they?"

"The ones that have life sentences."

[SEAL.]

DISTRICT COURT,

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
County of Red Lake—ss.

I, Adam Zeh, Auditor of said County, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of real estate taxes delinquent on the first Monday in January, A. D. 1901, hereto attached, was this day received from the Clerk of the District Court in and for said County of Red Lake.

Witness my hand and official seal this 4th day of February, A. D. 1901.
ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor, Red Lake County, Minn.

Steamed Nut Pudding.

To half a cup of granulated sugar add one gill of melted butter. When well blended, add two beaten eggs and one cup of milk. Mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cups of flour and add to the other ingredients. Sprinkle a saltspoonful of salt over 1½ cups of any kind of nut meats broken into bits and add them to the mixture. Butter a mold or pudding dish, turn the mixture in and steam three hours. Serve with wine sauce.

Popcorn Candy.

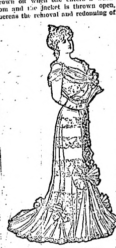
Having popped the corn nicely, salt it and sift it through the fingers, that the extra salt and the unpopped corn may escape. Have ready some candy, made by cooking together one pound of molasses, one-half pound brown sugar, one tablespoonful of vinegar and from 1½ to 2 ounces of fresh butter. When this is all but ready, stir into it as much of the popcorn as it will take up; then turn it out on to buttered or oiled dishes or shape it into balls.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

IN EVENING GOWNS, LUXURIOUS WRAPS AND SMALL ACCESSORIES.

Girl's Ball Gown—Three-quarter Sealskin Coat and Eton Jacket In Broadtail—Crepe de Chine Popular. A Glow of Gold.

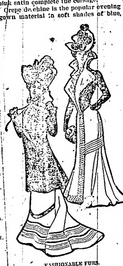
The popularity of the plain short coat in the midst of so much that is ornate and heavily garnished is in part accounted for by the fact that it accommodates the fur collarettes and boas nicely, and these are quickly thrown off when one enters a warm room and the jacket is thrown open, whereas the removal and redonning of a large fur trimmed wrap are affairs of which one thinks twice. However, the truly luxurious woman must have her heavy furs, and a better example of all that is delicious in this line would be far to seek than a three-quarter sealskin coat of today; for instance, one with the new rolled collar, lined with sable, immense soft revers of sable, scalloped bell shaped sleeves and handsome large tortoise shell buttons. Less imposing but equally stylish is an Eton jacket of black broadtail with great revers and collar of white broadtail and broadtail muff to match.



DEBUTANTE'S BALL GOWN.

It is to evening styles that the magic fashion draws us most irresistibly just at this season, for among all vanity's visions are no greater dreams of delight than the confections for the fair young girls whose debut society is now celebrating. One of these appears in the cut—a fascinating first ball gown of net with choux of illusion and pale pink wild roses with dark glossy foliage and garlands of flowers serving as epaulets, while the actual sleeves are in one with the draped bertha. A girdle and ribbon of pale pink satin complete the corsage.

Crepe de chine is the popular evening gown material in soft shades of blue, pink, cream, etc., and very charming is a confection of pale blue crape and silver embroidery.



FASHIONABLE FURS.

Although it smacks of repetition to mention gold, such mention is imperative, for gold continues to be the glory of the toilet.

One seam in front and one in the middle of the back mark the newest skirt model.

A welcome revival reported is that of "pinked out" taffeta ruchings among stylish trimmings for gowns in gauze fabrics.

Vegetables Rechauffes.

Cold vegetables, such as peas, beans, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, etc., can all be warmed up and served a la maitre d'hotel by tossing them in butter over a moderate fire, with a sprinkling of chopped parsley, pepper and salt and the squeeze of a lemon. Boiled potatoes are best served cut in slices and fried as pommes de terre sautees.

Scalloped Turkey.

One of the ways to manage the "left over" portions of the noble bird now in season is as follows: In a buttered baking dish, lined with crumbs, put alternate layers of half inch bits of cold turkey, stuffing and gravy (or white sauce and crumbs, if there be no stuffing and gravy), cover with crumbs and bake 15 minutes.

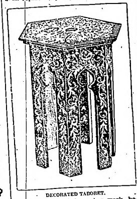
ART OF PYROGRAPHY

A VERSATILE DECORATION CAPABLE OF MANY APPLICATIONS.

The Necessary Instruments, Including Platinum Points, and How to Use Them—Preliminary Practice. Taboret In Poker Work.

The variety of uses to which pyrography may be applied is endless. It lends itself especially to the broad treatment of large surfaces, but it can also be used in the adornment of the most dainty articles by delicate lines and soft shadings, says a Good Housekeeping writer in preface to the following practical instructions:

The iron style of earlier days has been replaced by a point of platinum.



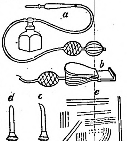
DECORATED TABORET.

Platinum is used for poker work, because it is the only metal that will absorb the gas of the naphtha by which the supply of heat is sustained. The complete outfit consists of platinum points, a cork covered handle, a length of rubber tubing, a naphtha bottle provided with connections for tubing, a spirit lamp and a rubber bulb with tubing attached. It is also necessary to have some alcohol and naphtha. Be sure to have the naphtha bottle tightly corked and never open it in a room where there is a light or the smallest spark of fire, as it is very inflammable. The alcohol also should be handled with care. To do a variety of poker work an outfit of several points is necessary, but it is well for the beginner to have at least two, as illustrated in Figs. c and d. The first of these, c, is the more important, as with it both outlining and shading can be done, but the second is better for backgrounds.

Before attempting a design the beginner should practice on a smooth pine board or a piece of whitewood, which is better, as the finer grain makes practice easier. To light the point put some cotton wool in the naphtha bottle and fill the bottle about one-third full of naphtha. Connect the bottle with the cork handle and the bulb by the rubber tubing, hold the point in the flame of the spirit lamp until it is thoroughly heated and blow gently by pressing the bulb until the point becomes redhot. The point may now be withdrawn from the flame, and its heat can be kept up and regulated by the pressure on the bulb, which forces the vapor of the naphtha through the tubing into the point, where it burns. The lamp may now be extinguished. The object of the cotton wool in the bottle is to give more evaporating surface. Fig. a shows the apparatus. Sometimes a foot bellows (Fig. b) is used instead of the hand bellows. This is less tiresome and gives the operator both hands for work.

Now grasp the cork handle, not too near the hot point, and try to make true, even lines on the pine board. This at first is very difficult, for an instant's delay in the touch of the point will make a hole or deep dot in the wood, and the line will resemble a smudge. To overcome this first trouble bring the point upon the board with a sweep of the hand and lift it off in the same way. Keep this sweep as even and light as possible until you have a firm, clean line. The beginner will succeed more easily if the point is not too hot.

Try different lines as you would learn to shade with a lead pencil.



INSTRUMENTS USED IN THE ART.

Make parallel lines, long and short, broad and narrow, even and graded, straight and curved, as shown in Fig. e.

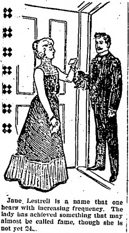
Designs are to be used in the following manner: Draw them on the wood and burn in firmly and lightly. A quick mode is to trace the design on a piece of tracing paper and then transfer it to the wood by means of impression paper, then burn as described.

Opera cloaks are now almost smothered in chiffon, lisse or mousseline de sole. Ermine and sable mink are the most fashionable furs, and mink is quite charming on strawberry and pastel blues or heliotrope.

A CAREER ...BY... ACCIDENT

By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1900,
By CHARLES W. HOOKE.



Jane Lestrell is a name that one hears with increasing frequency. The lady has achieved something that may almost be called fame, though she is not yet 24.

I happen to know that her success is due to a singular chance, and as the revelation of this fact may please the envious and will not worry Jane in the least it is here set forth.

At the age of 20, when Jane found that she would have to make a living, she turned naturally to literature. So many people do! Jane had written (uncompleted) romances in blank books with black covers and had once sold a poem to a comic weekly for the generous sum of $2. She felt that she had the gift.

It chanced that she enjoyed the acquaintance of an estimable old maid—Miss Prudence Whistler—who earned $20 a week as a reader of manuscripts for a publishing firm, and with this lady she found a haven when dependence upon her dead father's relatives became no longer tolerable.

Miss Whistler occupied quaint apartments in a building that harbored a salesroom for secondhand pianos on the ground floor and a strange collection of artistic people—most of them damaged by wear, like the pianos—in the rooms above.

Her friend was away all the day, and Jane sat alone with the muses. Permit me to say, out of the fullness of my heart, that these mythical ladies are very distressing company. Moreover, Prudence Whistler's little parlor was furnished in a style to wear upon the spirits of youth. The chairs and the sofa had come from the ancestral home. They were stiff and straight and upholstered in haircloth. The center table was a strange thing, long and black. Jane thought it must have served an undertaker as a rest for coffins. The pictures were not bad, being mostly details reproduced from famous paintings—faces and figures expressing woe.

The condition of Jane's nerves after a month in this place was such that if any one who suddenly dropped a feather pillow behind her she would have jumped right up through the ceiling into the studio of Diomed Guerin, the animal painter.

It may be that this state of the nervous system is favorable to literary work; I have heard that theory advocated. On the other hand, there is unquestionably a fatality in first stories similar to the so called "beginner's luck" that lures men into the vice of gambling. Let philosophy wrestle with the explanation while history records the fact that Miss Lestrell sold her first story without any trouble at all and received $25 for it.

"Don't lose your head, my dear," said the experienced Miss Whistler. "It may be 97 years before you sell another one."

Jane did not put any faith in this gloomy prophecy, and she went to work upon her second romance with high hope and fierce determination. But she was nervous, as I have already remarked, and her condition was aggravated by the performances of a gentleman named Franz Reinhardt, whose studio of music was directly beneath Miss Whistler's abode.

The tenants in this building knew little of one another, yet there was a rather definite rumor that Reinhardt was an excellent musician in exceptionally hard luck. It was said that he accepted pupils at the absurd rate of 50 cents an hour, and that most of them never paid him.

Jane, who was very fond of music, believed, during the first days of her residence there, that she should enjoy hearing Reinhardt and his pupils sing. There was a register in the wall—a relic of the days when the building had been a private residence heated by a furnace—and it admitted sounds from the studio of music with remarkable distinctness. They did not annoy Jane in the least until she began to be bothered with that second story, and then she suddenly awoke to the fact that Reinhardt sang only one song—"Palm Branches"—and drilled all his pupils—men, women and children—in one single vocal exercise.

Every morning at 9 precisely he would put himself into condition for the day's labors by singing "Palm Branches" four times, using the Italian words, which he pronounced with a strong German accent. "Palm Branches" is a beautiful hymn of praise, but enough of it is enough. It became so familiar in Miss Whistler's apartment that the lady's canary bird used to sing it. The top of the long black table echoed it like a sounding board, and the legs of the haircloth chairs danced solemnly in perfect time.

It rang in Jane's head until she simply had to sing it. There was no other way to get it out of her mind. In the earlier days she would hum it gently. Later, when the habit had grown upon her, she found no relief except by singing it right out at the top of her voice. At first she was afraid that Mr. Reinhardt would hear her and take offense, but afterward she was afraid that he wouldn't.

She found herself imitating his vocal methods. It was mimicry, and it was very rude, but she absolutely could not help it. When the professor was drilling that song into one of his pupils and Jane was struggling with her story, she would find nothing in her mind at last but "Palm Branches," and only by singing it once, good and strong, could she get into condition to resume her work.

It was nearly as bad with the vocal exercise. In fact, after a time it was in one respect worse, for she began to associate it with a particular individual of whom she knew nothing except that he had a voice like 50 mad bulls. He was a diligent person, with plenty of leisure, for he came almost every afternoon and usually remained about two hours. He devoted himself entirely to the vocal exercise, and he always made precisely the same mistake in it.

That is very harrowing to the nerves of the listener. One must have an iron constitution to stand it.

"If he makes that mistake again today," Jane would say to herself, "I shall certainly go down stairs and beat his brains out. No, no; he can't have any! He's done it again for the forty millionth time! Oh, you idiot!"

Then she would sing the exercise herself, sometimes with her head out of the window, for politeness' sake, sometimes defiantly, desperately. And one day, when the story was particularly annoying and the roaring basso more stupid than usual, she went in a frenzy directly to the register and yelled that vocal exercise into it until the antique, dilapidated furnace far down in the cellar rang like the cymbals in a band.

This really frightened her, not only because it was so very rude, but because it was the final convincing proof that she was going mad. For a month she had suspected it. There could no longer be any doubt. She walked to the black table and tore up all that she had written on her story that day; then she lay down on the fur rug in front of the grate fire and began to cry in a very childish and enjoyable fashion.

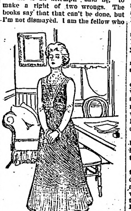
She was interrupted by a knock at the door. Such an event was practically unprecedented. In her surprise Jane forgot all about the worries of a literary life and the inconveniences of going crazy. She jumped up from the rug and ran to the looking glass, where she performed those feats of prestidigitation common to her sex under such circumstances. Then she opened the door and beheld a slender and graceful young man, bright eyed and magnetic. He was dressed with elegance and good taste, and his manner appealed at once to Jane, who had an especial liking for earnest, hearty, energetic people.

"I beg your pardon," said he. "May I venture to present my card and ask for just one minute of your time?"

"Won't you come in, Mr. Norton?" said the girl, glancing at the card. "I am Jane Lestrell."

He saluted the mention of her name very gracefully as he stepped into the room.

"This is an attempt," said he, "to make a right of two wrongs. The books say that that can't be done, but I'm not dismayed. I am the fellow who sings so atrociously in Mr. Reinhardt's studio down stairs. Sings? Let me say bellows and be truthful about it. I can't sing any more than a cow, and I know it."



SHE FOUND HERSELF IMITATING HIS VOCAL METHODS

"I think you have a great voice," said Jane. "I can hardly believe"—

"That I'm not as big as an elephant? I don't wonder you're surprised. But really, I don't pretend to sing; I come here to help out my friend, Mr. Reinhardt. He's a splendid fellow, and he is very poor. I'm sure he's an excellent teacher of singing, but he doesn't have a bit of luck. None of his pupils can sing. I'm the only one that can even make much of a noise. Now, it's really necessary for a teacher to have some pupils that can become known and attract others. Of course I can never do that, but I can pay for my lessons, which is more than most of them can do. You'll pardon me for mentioning it, but I'm quite well off, and Reinhardt won't take a cent from me except in this way. He's such a good fellow! If you knew him, you'd forgive me for annoying you the way I have with my awful howling. And—and that's what I came up here to say."

"Mr. Norton," said Jane, with her face as red as fire, "did you hear me just now?"

"Why, yes," said he. "We heard you singing the exercise. We've heard you before, and you sing it beautifully. Mr. Reinhardt says that you have a voice like all the nightingales in paradise—that's the way he puts it, and the tears come into his eyes every time he mentions you. He says that you could make your everlasting fortune in concert or opera and win a fame that would reach around the world three times and tie in a double bowknot. That was the way he expressed it, very respectfully, but with his peculiar enthusiasm. I wish you could take a course with him."

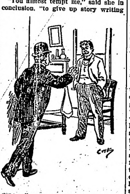
"I am taking a course with him," responded Jane. "I sing 'Palm Branches' 25 times a day, and I go through that exercise in my sleep—I really do. I wake myself up with it. And now I'm going to say something perfectly absurd, but it's true. My voice has improved! I really have learned Mr. Reinhardt's method without in the least meaning to do so, and I know that I sing a good deal better for it."

"If I should tell him that," said Norton, "he would die of joy."

"Then please don't tell him," she rejoined. "It's hardly honest to get instruction in that way, and I'm quite ashamed of it. But I'm much more ashamed of having been so childish as to let you and him know that the music annoyed me. I have been so very, very nervous"—

And she told him all about her entry into literature and its painful results.

"You almost tempt me," said she in conclusion, "to give up story writing and try to do something with my voice. I have been told once or twice that I sing quite well."



"FRANZ," SAID HE, "SHE'S COMING DOWN."

"Well!" echoed Norton. "Why, Reinhardt swears that the cherubim and seraphim aren't fit to hum an accompaniment when you are singing! Won't you please come down and sing for him just once? I tell you in the calmest possible manner that Reinhardt would be willing to be burned alive the next minute if you would sing the half of one song for him—the shortest one ever written."

"I suppose that is the way he expressed it," said Jane, with a smile. "I begin to perceive where this extravagant language originates. I don't believe that Mr. Reinhardt is so enthusiastic."

Norton laid his hand upon his heart solemnly, while his fine, dark eyes shone with earnestness.

"If you will think of the most terrible and binding pledge ever uttered by man or woman since the world began," said he, "I will vow to you by it that Reinhardt"—

"I will take your simple word," said she, laughing, "and I will sing for Mr. Reinhardt within ten minutes. Will you please prepare him for the ordeal?"

Norton made a graceful exit, and the next moment he burst into his friend's studio.

"Franz," said he, "she's coming down. In one minute you will see what nature was trying to do when she made all the other beautiful women that ever walked the earth. They were mere experiments, Franz, and Miss Lestrell is the first perfect and complete success."

"I am glad she will come," said the blond young German gravely. "She has a good voice, as it sounds through the floor."

Probably Reinhardt's absence of enthusiasm, after Norton's superabundance, piqued Jane somewhat. She is an obstinate girl, with a touch of vanity in her composition. Whatever the cause, she determined to make Reinhardt understand that she really had a voice. So she went to his studio three times a week for many months and worked like a little slave, subsisting meanwhile on the proceeds of a story or two and her own grit.

The result is well known in musical circles. Jane is a full fledged prima donna, and Reinhardt is the rage as a teacher. And, incidentally, Mr. Willis Norton has found out what love is—the one thing in this universe that is too big even for his powers of exaggeration. At present his fate is uncertain, but if protestations of devotion can win a woman Norton cannot possibly lose.

A CASE FOR AN EXPERT

By Peter McArthur.

Copyright, 1900, by Peter McArthur.

"Hello!" exclaimed Dr. Bascomb as he entered his office, where Jack Kenly was walking back and forth while waiting for him. "What is the matter? You look worried."

"I am worried," said Kenly as he shook hands. "Have you seen Nellie lately?"

"Not since a week ago Thursday, just before you started on your trip to Cincinnati. Is there anything the matter with her?"

"I can't say for certain, but I am afraid there is. She says herself that she is quite well, but she is so silent and irritable that I am afraid her nerves are out of order."

"Well, I'll drop around and see her some time during the day," said the doctor.

"No; I don't think you had better do that," said the young husband. "She protests that there is nothing the matter, and if you made a professional call it might make her angry and increase her nervousness. But, say, can't you come round and have dinner with us and have a smoke with me afterward? And perhaps you could diagnose her case without her suspecting anything, and then you could prescribe something that would help her."

"All right," said the doctor. "Call for me on your way home, and I'll go along."

Having relieved his mind by making this arrangement, Kenly went to his office and during the afternoon telegraphed to his wife that Dr. Bascomb would be with them to dinner. This was not unusual, for he and the bachelor doctor were old college chums and still retained much of the friendship of their student days. As young Mrs. Kenly had made it a point to make herself agreeable to her husband's old friends, so that he would never feel that he had given up too much of his old life when he married, and as she had developed a warm personal friendship for the young doctor, he usually spent at least one evening a week at their house. So there was nothing in the doctor's visit to excite her suspicion.

While Kenly and the doctor were strolling to the house Kenly talked of his wife's ailment, of which he had thoroughly convinced himself. Like many healthy people, he had an almost morbid dread of illness, and his talk had the effect of making Dr. Bascomb very alert for subtle symptoms, for nervous disorders are so elusive.

To their surprise Mrs. Kenly greeted them at the door with her accustomed liveliness, and when dinner was served was the life of the little party, just as she had always been in the past. Indeed her liveliness seemed greater than usual, for her husband was somewhat silent because he was worried and thought that his friend could diagnose the case better if he kept in the background. The doctor, being professionally alert, ascribed her brightness to the elation that so frequently follows dejection and was working up quite a serious case. After dinner Kenly made the excuse that he had no good cigars in the house and went out to buy some so as to leave the doctor and his wife together.

"How are you feeling these days?" inquired the doctor when they were alone, in a tone that he tried hard to make unprofessional.

"Why, I never felt better in my life."

"That's good. You never even have the blues, do you?"

"Of course, I have the blues sometimes. Who doesn't?"

"Um-m! Never see sparks of fire before your eyes when you turn your head suddenly, do you?"

"See here. Are you putting me through a medical examination? Do you want to feel my pulse and see my tongue?"

"Well, that would do no harm," said the doctor, seizing her wrist and taking out his watch. She snatched her hand away almost angrily.

"No, I am not going to let you feel my pulse, and if you are not careful you may feel my tongue instead of seeing it."

The doctor gravely meditated on these symptoms of irritability, and, noticing his silence, Mrs. Kenly looked at him with some alarm.

"Why, you don't think there is anything the matter with me, do you?"

"Oh, no," said the doctor with professional diplomacy, not wishing to excite his patient; "but you know I always look after the health of my friends even when they are not asking me to."

"But I don't see why you should be paying attention to mine just now when I am simply brutally healthy. Has Jack been talking to you? I remember he said something about my not looking well when he got back." And a momentary frown wrinkled her brow. But the arrival of Jack prevented further talk on the subject of health, and the two men retired to the library to smoke.

"Well?" asked the anxious husband after they had lit their cigars.

"Oh, there is nothing serious," said the young doctor, with a wise look. "Her nerves are certainly strung to high pitch, and I should say that her liver is affected somewhat. She probably worried at being left alone while you were away, and that wore on her."

"But what do you suggest?" asked the husband. "Are you going to prescribe for her?"

"Not medicines. She doesn't realize that there is anything the matter with her, and if I ordered drugs it would only tend to make her worse, for, after all, there is something in the contention of the mental scientists that people are sick when they think they are. It is particularly true of people of a nervous temperament. On the other hand, the fact that she does not realize her condition is dangerous, for she might go on thinking herself quite well until something really serious developed."

"But what can we do?" asked Kenly, now thoroughly alarmed.

"Well, I think a change of scene and lively company, with complete rest, would fix her up all right in a few weeks, and that would be a cure she could take without knowing anything about it except that she was having a good time."

"But I am afraid I can't get away with her just now."

"Of course you can't, but she could go to the seaside somewhere near by, and you could spend your Sundays with her, or she could go to the mountains."

"That's so. I'll suggest it to her tonight, for she seems to be in a better mood than she has been of late."

"Yes," said the doctor, "that is one of the strongest signs of her disordered condition. She seesaws from dejection to elation, and tonight she is up. The necessity of playing the hostess lifted her, and, like all people whose nerves are affected, she drew too heavily on her resources, and for that reason was unnaturally bright."

By the time the conversation had ended Kenly was thoroughly alarmed, and he noted with fear the liveliness of his wife when they returned to the parlor and she played and sang for them. Not wishing to let her exhaust herself the doctor left early.

They were silent for a few minutes after his departure, and Kenly noticed that the animation died from his wife's face and that she had returned to the mood that had alarmed him. But that only spurred him on to do what he considered his duty.

"I have been thinking, my dear," he began, "that you should really go away somewhere for a rest. Lots of people are going away for their holidays just now, and though I can't go yet, I could arrange to spend my Sundays with you."

"A rest!" she exclaimed with unsuspected energy. "Who told you I was tired?"

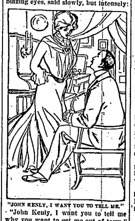
"Oh, I don't exactly mean a rest, but a holiday, a good time."

"I must say you are getting very thoughtful—of late."

He affected not to notice the ironical intonation of her remark and proceeded:

"Then you will go, won't you? Which would you prefer, the seaside or the mountains?"

Instead of replying she walked up to him and, looking into his face with blazing eyes, said slowly, but intensely:



"JOHN KENLY, I WANT YOU TO TELL ME."

"John Kenly, I want you to tell me why you want to get me out of town."

"Want you to go out of town? You wrong me, my dear. I shall be very lonely without you and will be sorry to have you go away, but I really think you should go."

"Why should I go? I haven't asked for a holiday, and I know we can't afford the expense, and I don't need to go."

Suddenly an idea occurred to her.

"Was it you that put Dr. Bascomb up to trying to scare me about my health? I know it was, and he and you have some scheme in mind and want to get rid of me for awhile."

"Oh, my dear, you do not mean that."

"I mean every word of it, and, what is more, I mean to stay right here until you go for your holidays, and then I'll go with you—to watch you."

"Hush, dear, and we will drop the matter for the present."

"Yes, and for the future too," she replied, for she had a temper of her own that was quite sufficient for all requirements.

Kenly was afraid that he would aggravate the trouble if he continued the argument until she became more exhausted than she was, so he let the matter drop, resolving at the same time to ask Dr. Bascomb if it would not be better to gently break to her the news of her condition and get her to allow herself to be properly treated. In the morning her eyes were red with silent weeping, but she did not choose to take her husband into favor again, so he went gloomily to his office.

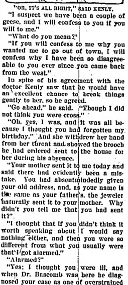
On his way home he called on Dr. Bascomb and told of the failure of his prescription.

"Ah!" said the doctor. "That is serious, and now we must break the matter to her. You had better go home and avoid the subject, and I will drop in during the evening, and we will talk things over quietly. My being there will save her a fright, for I can assure her that there is nothing really serious the matter yet."

The plan was agreed to and Kenly went home. His wife met him at the door in an alarming state of excitement. She was half laughing and half crying, and all the while she kept her hand pressed to her throat.

"Why, what is the matter?" he asked, with ill concealed anxiety.

By way of reply she slipped her disengaged arm around him and laughed up at him as she said:



"OH, IT'S ALL RIGHT," SAID KENLY.

"I suspect we have been a couple of geese, and I will confess to you if you will to me."

"What do you mean?"

"If you will confess to me why you wanted me to go out of town, I will confess why I have been so disagreeable to you ever since you came back from the west."

In spite of his agreement with the doctor Kenly saw that he would have an excellent chance to break things gently to her, so he agreed.

"Go ahead," he said. "Though I did not think you were cross."

"Oh, yes, I was, and it was all because I thought you had forgotten my birthday." And she withdrew her hand from her throat and showed the brooch he had ordered sent to the house for her during his absence.

"Your mother sent it to me today and said there had evidently been a mistake. You had absentmindedly given your old address, and, as your name is the same as your father's, the jeweler naturally sent it to your mother. Why didn't you tell me that you had sent it?"

"I thought that if you didn't think it worth speaking about I would say nothing either, and then you were so different from what you usually were that I got alarmed."

"Alarmed?"

"Yes; I thought you were ill, and when Dr. Bascomb was here he diagnosed your case as one of overstrained nerves and liver complaint, and that was why I wanted you to go out of town, so as to get a change and a rest. We thought it would only make you worse to alarm you by saying anything about your condition, but when you objected so positively we decided to tell you, and Dr. Bascomb is coming around to see you tonight."

It may sound undignified, but Mrs Kenly simply shrieked with laughter. At last she gasped:

"So—so I have liver complaint, have I, and nerves? Oh, wait until I see him! Why, I was only cool to you and cross because I thought you had forgotten my birthday. But it seems it wasn't enough that we should make fools of ourselves. He had to come in and do the thing scientifically. Oh!"

When Dr. Bascomb came, he found his prospective patient and her foolish looking husband sitting on a sofa in a way that suggested the honeymoon.

"Oh, it is all right," said Kenly. "I have been a doddering idiot, and you"—But his wife's laughter drowned all further remarks.

"I never knew that family rows were now considered pathologically, doctor. I have a number of friends that are ailing in that way, and I shall take pleasure in recommending you."

The doctor looked from one to the other in helpless amazement. They both seemed to have gone crazy.

"It was just this way," said Kenly. "I was having a row with my wife and didn't know it, and all the symptoms we observed were nothing more or less than ordinary temper."

Then they told him the whole story, and now all Mrs. Kenly's friends think it was just lovely of Dr. Bascomb to send her such a beautiful pair of vases. But they don't know the story she has kept a secret.

WHAT IS OVARITIS?

A dull, throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with an occasional shooting pain, indicates inflammation.

On examination it will be found that the region of pain shows some swelling. This is the first stage of ovaritis, inflammation of the ovary. If the roof of your house leaks, my sister, you have it fixed at once; why not pay the same respect to your own body?

Sore Hands

Cuticura
SOAP
TOILET

Red, Rough Hands, Itching, Burning Palms, and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Cured by Cuticura

I WAS troubled with hands so sore that when I put them in water the pain would near set me crazy, the skin would peel off, and the flesh would get hard and break, then the blood would flow from at least fifty places on each hand. Words never can tell the suffering I endured for three years.

I tried at least eight doctors, but my hands were worse than when I commenced doctoring. I tried every old Granny remedy that was ever thought of without one cent's worth of good and could not even get relief.

I would feel so badly mornings when I got up, to think that I had to go to work and stand pain for eight or nine hours, that I often felt like giving up my job, which was in the bottling works of Mr. E. L. Kerns, the leading bottler of Trenton, N. J., who will vouch for the truth of my sufferings.

Before I could start to work, I would have to wrap each finger on both hands, and then wear gloves, which I hated to do, for when I came to take them off, it would take two hours and the flesh would break and bleed. Some of my friends who had seen my hands would say, "If they had such hands they would have them amputated"; others would say "they would never work," and more would turn away in disgust. But thanks to Cuticura, the greatest of skin cures, it ended all my sufferings.

Just to think, after doctoring three years, and spending dollar after dollar during that time, Cuticura cured me. It has now been two years since I used it and I do not know what sore hands are. I never lost a day's work while I was using it or since, and I have been working at the same business, and in acids, etc.

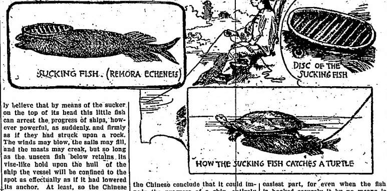
SUCKING FISH WITH WHICH CHINESE CATCH TURTLES

Probably the most remarkable fish in existence is the little fish known as remora echeneis. By means of a sucking device on the top of its head and shoulders the remora echeneis, or sucking fish, as it is called more commonly by fishermen, attaches itself so firmly to smooth surfaces that it is impossible to detach it.

This property of the sucking fish gave to it its curious name, remora echeneis, which signifies ship-holder. Just why it is called ship-holder has never been learned with any degree of certainty, but fisheremn will tell you a yarn of how this little fish can stop ships. The Chinese most implicitly believe that by means of the sucker on the top of its head this little fish can arrest the progress of ships, however powerful, as suddenly and firmly as if they had struck upon a rock. The winds may blow, the sails may fill, and the masts may creak, but so long as the unseen fish below retains its vise-like hold upon the hull of the ship the vessel will be confined to the spot as effectually as if it had lowered its anchor. At least, so the Chinese believe.



SUCKING FISH. (REMORA ECHENEIS)

DISC OF THE SUCKING FISH

HOW THE SUCKING FISH CATCHES A TURTLE

Whether it possesses the power which the Chinese claim for it or not, the fact remains that once the fish has attached itself it cannot be removed without tearing the disc, or sucker, from the body.

The disc which enables this little fish to accomplish such big feats is composed of several flat, bony laminae, arranged in parallel lines much in the same manner as the slats in the common wooden window-blind. These laminae are capable of being raised or depressed at will, and are moved by a set of muscles set obliquely.

The fish attaches itself to a surface by pressing the soft and slimy edge of its disc against the object and depressing the laminae, thus forming a complete vacuum. By reason of the vacuum so formed the fish adheres tightly to the spot upon which it has placed its disc, and can detach itself only by sliding its body forward in a direction corresponding with the set of laminae.

When the sucking fish attaches itself to a moving body it always takes care to fix itself so that the water cannot wash it off, and, from that fact, the Chinese conclude that it could impede the progress of a ship, entirely overlooking the fact that the ship would drag it through the water.

The power of the disc does not disappear when the fish is dead. Even when cut off from the body of the fish, this curious contrivance can be applied to any smooth surface, and will hold with astonishing firmness.

The Chinese employ the sucking fish to catch turtles, using it as a fishing hook. They catch one of these fishes and before it is dead pass a ring through the tail fin and attach a line. The fish then is put back into the water and allowed to swim in search of turtles which are found sleeping on the surface of the water. When the fish has attached itself firmly to the shell of the turtle the wily Celestial at the end of the line draws the fish in with its prey.

Before you can eat a fish you have got to catch it. The same thing applies when you want to use a fish as a fishing hook. And that is where the Chinaman finds his hardest job, for the sucking fish is probably the hardest fish to catch. A piece of raw meat is used as a bait. The sucking fish is lively and takes the hook eagerly. The hooking of the fish, however, is the easiest part, for even when the fish is hooked securely it by no means is caught.

As soon as it feels the sharp prick of the hook it darts to the bottom of the boat or some other smooth surface and affixes itself so strongly and with such a Spartan-like determination not to be taken alive that the hook may be torn out of its mouth before the fish will relax its pertinacious hold.

By drawing the fish smartly out of the water just as soon as it is firmly hooked, however, it can be caught without much trouble. And in this way hundreds are caught by the Chinese and used to catch turtles.

The sucking fish is seldom more than twelve inches long and is dusky brown in color, being darker on the back than on the abdomen.

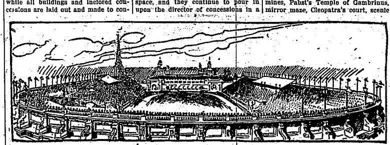
THE PAN-AMERICAN MIDWAY

The midway at the Pan-American exposition is not a middleway, but, including the stadium, which seats 12,000 people, runs across one end of the exposition grounds and sweeps gracefully around and down on one side, while all buildings and inclosed concessions are laid out and made to conform in harmony of architecture and color scheme with the buildings and decorations of the exposition proper.

The original midway at the Chicago fair, which has given a new noun to the English language, "growed" like Topsy, but this one has been prearranged with scientific and artistic prevision, and promises to be one of the best selected and most compact amusement features ever attempted, advantage having been taken of all previous experiences of the kind. Some 2,000 applications, covering over 600 subjects, have been received and passed upon for concessions within the mile of space, and they continue to pour in upon the director of concessions in a most exciting manner, especially since the close of the Paris exposition. The house upside down and several other foreign attractions have recently been accepted. Among other novelties the Filipino village, covering eleven acres, is expected to be exceedingly variegated and picturesque. The following is a partial list of concessions granted to date:

Darkness and dawn, African village, Mexican village, infant incubator, Venice in America, trip to the moon, aerio cycle, Hawaiian volcano and theater, moving pictures, slot-picture machines, war cyclorama, Colorado gold mines, Pabst's Temple of Gambrinus, mirror maze, Cleopatra's court, scenic railway, captive balloon, Temple of Isis, Japanese village, ostrich farm, statuary while you wait, Johnstown flood, souvenir mailing cards, Alt Nurnberg, miniature Chicago World's Fair, glass factory, Indian concession, sod-house village and wild animal show.

Of the $10,000,000 expenditure to perfect the exposition, $3,000,000 go into the Midway.



STADIUM AT THE PAN-AMERICAN MIDWAY.

FROM GAY TO GRAVE

There is an usher at one of the downtown theaters, says a Philadelphia paper, who is a professional pallbearer during the day. "I get," he says, "$2.50 for every pallbearing engagement, and I like the work. It is, you see, such a complete and pleasant change from my theatrical employment. I must wear a gala smile at the theater at all times, and the gayety there, the mirth and light-heartedness prove very monotonous. I long for something in gloomy black, with a look of gloom in my eyes, and the sobs I hear, the groans, the lamentations and lugubrious music are very soothing to me after the eternal heartless jollity of the playhouse. The two kinds of work diversify my life; I touch on two extremes; I make, besides, a good deal of money. I have made $30 a week as pallbearer. At the theater my salary is only $7.50. There are certain perquisities at the theater, however, perquisities won through seating people, which materially increase my income. It is not an uncommon thing among us ushers to be pallbearers during the day."

Formosa's Revenue from Monopolies.

Mr. Goto Shimpei, head of the civil government of Formosa, says that during the six years which have elapsed since Japan obtained possession of Formosa she has invested 140,000,000 yen ($70,000,000) of public money in the island and it is now yielding a revenue of 15 per cent on the capital sunk. The main part of this revenue is obtained from the opium tax, the camphor monopoly and the salt monopoly, which yield 4,000,000 yen ($3,000,000) each. Three years ago, when the present governor-general went to Formosa, the revenue was only a little over 5,000,000 yen ($2,500,000), but there is every reason to think that it will soon amount to 20,000,000 yen ($10,000,000). According to the financial scheme originally mapped out, the central government was to furnish 2,000,000 yen ($1,000,000) annually for twenty years in aid of Formosa's administrative expenditures.—Chicago News.

Causes of Tender Feet.

Tender feet are usually caused by tight and ill-fitting boots and shoes, which also produce such painful complaints as corns, bunions, enlarged joints and ingrowing toenails. Avoid neat-looking boots with pointed toes, which cramp the feet like oriental bandages, and become instruments of torture to the wearer. Next to tight boots and shoes, the most potent factors for causing tender feet are badly fitting socks and stockings; these should always be chosen with as few seams as possible to keep the feet in good condition there is nothing better than frequently bathing them with warm water in which has been placed a handful of salt. This is especially efficacious for those who suffer from tired or tender feet.

Copper Production.

The copper production of the entire world is the subject of an exhaustive study by M. Leon Demaret of Belgium. The following table summarizes his statistics:

Copper production 1800—1900:

	Metric Tons.
United States	2,725,600
Chili, Bolivia, Peru	1,870,600
Spain and Portugal	1,189,600
England	855,800
Germany, Sweden, Norway	611,600
Australia	443,800
Japan	292,600
All other countries	860,400
Total	8,850,000

Church Membership at Newton.

The ministers of Newton, Kas., have just completed a religious census of that town. They found 5,353 persons in 1,458 families and of these people 2,316, or less than half, professed to be church members.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE

A timely hint to parents may be found in a news paragraph from Cincinnati telling of the harmful results following a distribution of sample packages by patent medicine vendors in that city. The packages, done up in envelope form, were left by boys on the doorsteps of residences. Directions were printed on the envelopes, but in many cases little children who were unable to read found the medicine, which are lozenge-shaped and candied, and ate it greedily. The medicine is a violent purgative, one tablet a dose for an adult, and the children who partook of the supposed candy were in several cases taken seriously ill.

Russian Outposts Near at Hand.

In the Bering straits Russia and America shake hands. Big Diomede island and little Diomede stand side by side, the former Russia's outpost, the other our own. A little strip of narrow sea lies between the two, and so clear is the air on a fair day that it seems as if from one island you could easily reach across a hand to the other. North, across Kotzeline sound, is Point Hope, a barren sand spit, extending far into the Arctic sea. It is the home of a tribe of Eskimos, who go to the mission school and church and learn to sing hymns, to speak a little English and to use soap.

Two Carpets Sold for $8,990.

According to a correspondent, two magnificent carpets, presented by the Infanta Donna Sancho to the royal convent of St. Antonio in 1500, have just been sold by auction at the municipal chamber in Lisbon to pay for repairs at the convent and church. The sale of the carpets, which were Persian, about eighteen feet square, embroidered with real gold, caused much excitement. The most eager bidders were two groups, French and German, and the Frenchmen secured the prize for $8,990, which is regarded as nearly $5,000 below the real value.

Lamp Chimneys

Millions of Them Made in This Country.

"The lamp chimney," said a man acquainted with the trade, to the New York Sun, "seems a simple sort of thing, but there are not many things of more common use the world over and in the aggregate the number sold is enormous. In this country there are 12,000 men and boys employed in making lamp chimneys, and the chimneys produced number millions annually. The greater number are now made west of the Allegheny mountains in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, where the majority of the glass works of the country are located, many of them in the natural gas regions. The first glass works in the country was established in Boston and formerly the glass-making industry was principally in the east. Now there are not nearly so many glass factories here as there once were. One not familiar with the business might be surprised with the great variety in which lamp chimneys are made. Lamps are made in these days in very great variety by many makers and of course there are made chimneys suitable for all of them. There is one American lamp chimney maker who, counting sizes and styles, produces 600 varieties. Among the great variety of chimneys made there are some that are of common use everywhere and then there are some that are specially suited to demands in this or that part of the country and are not in demand in other parts. Lamp chimneys are not only made in far greater variety than formerly, to fit perfectly every sort of lamp, but they are also made better than ever. In fact, lamp chimneys have advanced with everything else. But enormous and increasing as the production is, the demand scarcely keeps pace with the increase in the population, this being especially true in cities where gas is more and more used, and here in New York, for instance, by users through slot gas machines, which have some influence on the sale of lamp chimneys. Still the number of lamps used here is enormous. There are plenty of people burning gas, for instance, who have as well three or four lamps, and the number of people here who use lamps alone for the purpose of illumination is very great. There are used in New York and its vicinity millions of lamp chimneys annually. There are received in this city from western manufacturers, for domestic consumption, I suppose about four car loads of chimneys weekly, running from 1,500 to 2,000 dozen chimneys to the car. These are sold to jobbers who distribute them through their trade to customers to greater or less distances away. Perhaps half of these chimneys, or rather more, are used in the city or within fifty miles of it. To the chimneys thus brought here are to be added those produced here, the eastern chimneys being made chiefly for the local trade and for export. We import a few lamp chimneys of the cheapest and of the best grades, the cheap chimney from Germany and the costlier from France, but these imports cut only a small figure in the total consumption, and we export lamp chimneys in great quantities. We send very few to Europe, though we do sell them some of our best chimneys. But outside of Europe we sell lamp chimneys everywhere. We come into competition in some parts of the world with the Germans, who make chimneys very cheaply, but our exports are increasing and we send chimneys, as I said, everywhere; to Mexico, the West Indies, South Africa, China, in fact to all lands to which lamps are used, all around the earth."

Circumstantial Evidence

Lawyer's Wife Who Fell Under Its Baneful Power

"My whole heart goes out to anybody who is convicted on circumstantial evidence," said the lawyer's wife. "A fortnight ago I dined out, and I happened to sit beside the guest of the evening, who is a famous author rather newly come to town. I suppose I have read every line he has ever published, and I am one of his most ardent admirers. I ventured to let him see this, and we had a most delightful talk about his newest book. I read it at the seashore this summer, and the copy I read belonged to my cousin. I told the man how much I had enjoyed it, how many times I had read and reread it, and how I felt that no book in my library was more true and valuable to me than it. I didn't lay all this on with a trowel of course, and I meant it—every word of it. The author suggested that he'd like to write something in the book for me, and asked if he—no, come to think of it, I asked him to call, and he seemed pleased with the idea as if I, and not he, had been the famous one.

"Well, I bought a copy of the book, as my other one was quite badly worn, and laid it on the library table all ready for him. I was dressing one day when his card came up. I hurried down as fast as I could. Monsieur wasn't a bit as he had been at the dinner. He was as cool as a Novemb[illegible] twilight, and stayed not a minute l[illegible]er than civility demanded. I didn't dare suggest an autograph in the book. He didn't mention it. When he went away I picked the book up. His card was in it, and he had, with meaning, laid the card between two folds of un- in the book, and never, never shall I cut leaves. I'd forgotten to cut a leaf be able to explain matters."

More of the Wonders of Science.

"Hush!" said the great professor, holding up a warning finger as the reporter entered. "Don't disturb me. I am about to make a wonderful discovery. I have been studying at this problem for years, and now at last the solution seems to be almost within my grasp. I have strong reasons for believing that the sting of a male wasp is at least one and two-thirds less severe than that of the female. If I can only obtain pecuniary means for prosecuting my researches a year or two longer I am almost positive that I shall be able to place mankind forever in debt to me for furnishing undeniable proof of the correctness of my theory." Bowing low, the reporter humbly backed out of the presence of the great man and then rushed away to give to the world assurance that science was again about to lay her slim white finger upon the lips of Nature and bid her divulge another of her marvelous secrets.

FIRES CURVED BALLS.

Lawyer Relates Startling Circumstance of Shooting Affair.

"Speaking of pistols," said a New Orleans lawyer, "I am reminded of a remarkable case in which I was interested soon after the war, when I was practicing over in Alabama. A general shooting affray, growing out of a family feud, had taken place at a crossroads store, and an influential planter named McDermott was killed. He was standing behind a little shed a considerable distance away at the time, and a young man named Lee Allen was firing out of the store window at another of the crowd. McDermott was hit in the head, and the bullet was identified as coming from Allen's pistol, which was an English weapon of very unusual size—caliber 47. But the singular part of the affair was the place where the planter stood was out of range of the window. The corner of the shed interposed, and it was simply impossible to understand how the missile reached its mark. I was engaged for the defense, and after carefully measuring the ground and firing several test shots I became convinced that my client was innocent and that there had been another 47-caliber pistol in the fight. The circumstantial evidence seemed to bear out my theory indisputably, and I felt confident of an acquittal, when at the eleventh hour the unexpected happened and knocked out my props. It occurred to the prosecuting attorney to test Allen's weapon and find out exactly how it carried. Accordingly, he screwed it in a vise and blazed away a few times at a target at different distances. The result was astounding. Up to about fifty feet it shot all right, but at that point the bullet suddenly veered off at all sorts of extraordinary tangents. Sometimes it sailed up into the air, sometimes it plunged downward, and sometimes it swooped off to one side. The explanation, however, was simple. It seemed that Allen had found the barrel too long, and a week or so before the fight had filed off several inches. That operation completely destroyed the effect of the rifling, and instead of imparting a true circular twist to the bullet it gave it a peculiar 'English,' as billiard players would say, which was as liable to send it in one direction as another. That experiment fully explained the mystery of McDermott's taking off. My client was convicted of manslaughter and afterward pardoned. I don't know what became of the pistol. It should have been preserved as the only gun on earth that pitched curved balls.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

GIRL FIGHTS HAWK.

California Child Displayed a Wonderful Amount of Pluck.

Ida Duffy, the nine-year-old daughter of Thomas J. Duffy, of the Palatine Insurance company of San Francisco, had a desperate battle with a wounded chicken hawk at San Rafael and narrowly escaped with her life, says the Los Angeles Tribune. Several days ago the bird was given to the child and it has since been kept a prisoner in the yard of the family residence at that place. The other morning the hawk succeeded in making its escape and flew to a near-by tree, where a piece of string attached to its leg became entangled in the branches, again making the bird a prisoner. The little girl, seeing that the hawk was unable to fly away, ran to the tree, and, taking advantage of its spreading limbs, rapidly climbed to a spot many feet above the ground, where the bird was entangled. She attempted to undo the string from the tree, when suddenly the bird swooped at her and buried the talons of both feet in the little girl's face. The child screamed with pain, but pluckily fought the hawk off as again and again it attacked her with beak, talons and wings. The child's face was terribly scratched and her hands cut in the struggle, but the little heroine clung to the tree and eventually secured a hold on the bird's legs prevented it from doing further harm. Slowly and painfully she climbed down the tree and still clinging to the struggling bird she brought it with her to the ground and placed it in captivity. Then she ran to the house where her cut and bleeding face was promptly attended to. That the child escaped the loss of an eye or a bad fall from the tree was little less than miraculous, as her scratches show that the attack of the chicken hawk was a vicious one. However, none of her wounds is serious, and, with the exception of a few scars, she will be none the worse for her exciting experience.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE

St. Hilaire Spectator.

ST. HILAIRE, - - MINNESOTA.

Wednesday, February 13, 1901.

In a wood, near [illegible], on the edge of the Northern Carpathians, a woman went to gather sticks, leaving her baby in a secluded spot. Upon her return she saw two great eagles bearing away her child, whom they had dismembered. Upon a hunt being made by the inhabitants, the bones of the baby were found in the eagle's nest on the rocks amid the snow.

In the state archives at Rome it has been found that the X-rays may successfully exhibit the writing on manuscripts concealed in old book covers whenever this writing is done in red lead, ultramarine blue or cinnabar. They are being used also in attempts to detect forgeries of paintings and in efforts to discover signatures of old masters in paintings alleged to have been produced by them.

A novel still for the making of moonshine whisky was recently discovered in the mountains of Maryland. It was concealed in an oven standing out in plain view in a yard, and from the boldness of its position had long gone undetected. Inside the oven was a movable copper still, which could be taken out in times of peril, otherwise all suspicions could be allayed by innocently using the oven to bake bread.

One Sunday evening a rough-cast man rose in the Reform Club meeting and said: "I believe in owning up. When I get into trouble by making a fool of myself, or by letting somebody else lead me out of the way, I ain't goin' to shirk the blame. I am goin' to take my own load on my own shoulders. I shall just speak up and say, 'I, Bill Pike, did that!'" There's an example, as well as a rebuke, for several kinds of whimpering sinners, in high places and in low.

The marriage landau of the queen of the Netherlands is on exhibition on the premises of a carriage builder in the Boulevard Haussmann, in Paris. It has been sent thither to be relined, but has already been used by her majesty Wilhelmina on a few state occasions. It is painted in cream color, "Vernis Martin," of great purity of tint; the box seat, the springs and the hubs of the wheels are of a rich orange; the new linings are of white brocade, and the queen will, they say, have eight white horses, with orange-colored trappings, to take her to church on her wedding day.

The more one thinks about wireless telegraphy the more amazing it seems By Marconi's method, messages are sent over, or through, mountain ranges; and the curving segment of the earth, covered by the ocean, does not prevent communication between ships sixty miles apart. Still more marvelous is it that simultaneous messages can be transmitted by "tuning" the instruments so as to produce a difference in the vibrations; but it has long been known that countless waves of light and sound can pass and repass, crossing each other in every conceivable direction, without the least interference.

It is pleasant to record the fact that the consular service is gradually working out of politics, that more and more fitness is considered in the original choice of consuls, that efficient men are promoted from less important to more important stations, and that the effects of the improved system in advancing American trade are so marked that the new way is approved by all who study the subject. The cleverness of some consuls in getting at the facts which will enable American manufacturers and merchants to compete in foreign markets is much more pleasing to Americans than it is to those whom they are supplanting in trade.

It is singular, but true, that the industrial school system of the United States owes its origin, in large part, to Hawaii. General Armstrong, the founder of Hampton Institute, was the son of that Hawaiian educator who organized the schools of the Hawaiian Islands. Hampton this winter contains eight grandchildren of former Indian students. Honolulu, in the course of but a single generation, shows a still more notable instance of rapid aboriginal development. A former queen of Hawaii, awakened to a sense of a finer civilization, came with great pomp and retinue to express her wish for reform. Unwrapping from her body the seventy-five yards of broadcloth which had composed her royal robe, she burned it in the public square. Her niece, Lady Bishop, later bequeathed her entire property of over a million dollars to the cause of education in Hawaii. Today the compulsory school system of those islands is so admirable that Australia lately sent there for a teacher to expound in the southern continent the Hawaiian-American system of education.

Engineers of the cableship engaged in repairing the cable from Galveston to the Mexican coast found that the cable was destroyed by a submarine earthquake and the catastrophe at Galveston may have been due to the same cause. The destruction of deep-sea cables by earthquakes is so common that it attracts little attention nowadays. In the East Indian archipelago submarine earthquakes are so common that they are reckoned among the chief causes of the destruction of cables.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Management of Alfalfa.

A correspondent of the Kansas state board of agriculture says:

After the alfalfa has been sown in the spring, it will be necessary to run a mowing-machine over the ground two or three times during the summer to keep down the weeds. The sickle-bar should be set high, so as to injure the small young plants as little as possible. If the vegetable debris is so abundant that it promises to smother the young alfalfa, it should be raked up and removed. In harvesting mow down as much of the crop at once as can be handled in one day. Let it wilt in the swaths and then rake it into windrows to cure. If the weather is fine, it can be stacked from the windrow by using a sweep rake and stacker. If the weather is threatening, bunch the windrows and cock the bunches to allow it to finish curing. It should be put into the stack with just as little handling as possible. To avoid molding, I have advised farmers to store alternate layers of dry straw and fresh alfalfa hay together in the barn or stack. The straw need not form more than about one-fourth of the total weight. I think this method especially applicable to the first crop in localities where old straw stacks can be easily acquired.

When possible, alfalfa should be stored under a roof, as it does not turn rain well. A cheap hay shed can be built by setting telegraph poles in the ground, braced by two-by-sixes, and putting a good shingle roof on the structure. The sides should be left open and the hay stacked under this shed in ricks. A stacker of some sort or other should be used, as it does not pay to hire men to handle the hay with a fork. They waste too much by snaking off the leaves, which are considerably better to feed than wheat bran, pound for pound. Where a roof cannot be had, the hay should be stacked in high, narrow ricks and covered with long slough grass. Alfalfa should be cured and stacked, if possible, without being rained upon. No other crop is so easily injured by rain. Alfalfa hay rained upon is worth about half what it would be were it unexposed.

Harvesting alfalfa at the righ time and in the right manner very largely determines its feeding value. The majority of farmers wait too long before starting the mowing-machine. Alfalfa should be cut for hay when one-fourth to one-half of the blossoms have opened. When let stand longer, many of the leaves fall off and are wasted. Mowing early stimulates the growth of the following crop. Allowing it to go to seed seemingly exhausts the plant for that season.

Alfalfa fed green, either as a pasture or as a soiling crop, has few equals in its nutritive value. In localities where there is no difficulty in getting a stand, the cheapest way to feed it is probably to pasture it. It should never be pastured until the plants are more than a year old. Owing to their liability to hoven or bloat, it is always risky to pasture cattle or sheep upon alfalfa. Before turning animals liable to bloat upon the alfalfa give them all they will eat of some other food. Death from bloat is often very sudden.

Value of Kansas Live Stock.

The compilation of Kansas assessors' returns, showing the value, at home or on the farm, of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter and the poultry and eggs marketed in the year ending March 1, just completed by Secretary F. D. Coburn, of the state board of agriculture, evidences that Kansas not only is well forward but continues to rapidly advance in the rank of meat-producing states.

The value returned for animals slaughtered or sold for that purpose in the year named is $54,321,888, or 7½ per cent greater than in 1899, and the largest value in the history of the state. In 1896 the value was $36,592,057, since when there has been a handsome increase each year, aggregating a total gain of $17,729,831, or 48.5 per cent.

The value of poultry and eggs marketed within the year was $5,060,332, a gain over 1899 of 19.3 per cent, and likewise the largest value ever reported for the state. There has been an increase annually in the value of poultry and eggs marketed since 1895, and the total gain made during the five years is 52.65 per cent, or $1,745,265, the largest increase being 1900.

The combined values of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter and of poultry and eggs sold in the year is $59,382,220, and for the five years (1896-1900) they aggregate $249,260,683, making an annual average of $49,852,136.

Horticultural Observations.

It is a noticeable fact that the influence of horticultural conventions is on the increase. This is perhaps largely due to the advance being made in horticultural education at our agricultural colleges. The colleges are annually turning out students and are also every year supplying more professors as speakers at such meetings. In the last few years a distinct improvement has been noticeable in the quality of the papers presented. This condition should be recognized by the great mass of farmers and the conventions should be more freely attended. The improvement in traveling facilities makes this possible.

For years there has been keen controversy between the men that favored keeping pear orchards in sod and those that favored keeping them in a state of high cultivation. The on-lookers have been of the opinion that it did not make much difference so far as the blight was concerned whether the orchards were in sod or not. Now, however, the Maryland Agricultural College has come out with a circular stating that at that institution it is considered proved that pear orchards that have become affected with blight should be got into sod as soon as possible; that high cultivation and fertilization help the blight rather than stop it. This of course is not advised for orchards that are not affected by the pest. We doubt, however, if the opinion of the Maryland college will settle matters in the minds of many of our readers.

* * *

In keeping of apples the temperature is of course of great importance. The ideal degree is said to be 35 above zero. This is, however, not possible to be obtained constantly except where the apples are placed in cold storage houses where the temperature is regulated by appliances for that purpose. In the cellar even where a low degree of temperature is obtainable the air around the apples should not be permitted to change constantly, as the result will be to draw the moisture from the fruit and cause shriveling. For this reason the storage of apples in barrels induces better keeping, as the cool air around the fruit cannot change freely. Some follow the practice of burying the apples out of doors, and this practice is a good one if the pit is dry and is placed below the frost line. The temperature of the ground in winter is seldom likely to rise above 40 degrees at a depth immediately below the frost line. This should be an ideal temperature. In fact it is altogether probable that storage cellars constructed for the keeping of fruit will be found easier to regulate than the best appointed house cellars.

Destroying Clods.

If you have a piece of hard land to break, which is so baked as to come up in clods, we would suggest that you run over it with a disc or cutaway harrow ahead of plows, and break with very small scooters, says a southern farmer. Do not try to turn such land. If you still have clods do not wait for them to harden, but run a heavy roller or drag over and follow with some pulverizing harrow the same day. An hour or so will do this for each day's plowing. Thus you will pulverize most of them quite easily. Run roller ahead of harrow so as to crush as many as possible, and fasten the others so that they cannot dodge the harrows. It will pay to take time to do this, your crop can be cultivated so much cheaper afterwards; and the yield will be so much greater. Every time you go over with harrows and crushers you will increase the yield of the crop.

We once selected one acre in a twenty acre field, average spot, and plowed and harrowed this acre fourteen times right along before we quit. We then planted and cultivated this acre just as we did the rest of the field, running the rows right along through it. The yield was much more than double any other acre. This has continued to be true for five years, in all kinds of crops. All through the growing season this acre can be distinguished as far as you can see the field. All crops grow off quicker and yield heavier. "Culture is Manure" is true.

But after all the old proverb "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" holds good here also. If the hard pan is broken up and the water permitted to go on down, so as not to saturate the soil and remain in it too long, the baking will be prevented. If the baking or running together is prevented the clods will not form. This is as true of bottom land as of upland. Stop the soaking and you will prevent the clodding. One other point is worth considering here. Do not burn any vegetable matter in your farm. Plow it into the soil. This will enrich the soil and prevent the baking and clodding.

Desirable qualities are not the only ones that are perpetuated by inheritance. Undesirable qualities are also handed down from generation to generation to be an annoyance to the breeder. It is said that the variations are as apt to be toward deterioration as toward improvement. While in a state of nature the standard of the breed is kept up by a natural selection that we call the survival of the fittest. This not only keeps the good qualities in the foreground, but also establishes new ones that appear if they are of enough consequence to survive. When the wild birds and wild animals are domesticated it is no longer a case of survival of the fittest, for the old laws are set aside by man. Thereafter the chief factor in improvement must be artificial selection. The birds are no longer able to exercise any volition in the matter. The need, therefore, of careful study on the part of the breeder is apparent.

Scarcity of Cavalry Horses.

The Salt Lake Tribune says: "There is a great scarcity of the cavalry type of horses," says Veterinary Surgeon John Tempany, of the Ninth cavalry, at the Cullen yesterday, "because of the great draft by the United States and other governments, made in the last two years. In Wyoming, for instance, our government gathered in all the desirable, high standard horses, and then the English army officers came along and picked up 600 others, for the Englishmen are content to put up with a lower grade of animal than the American army authorities. There are no more cavalry horses in Nevada, and the market generally is bare and will be for some time. Prices are stiff, and our government was paying $100 to $125 for the grade of animal required; but the demand for the Philippines is falling off with the return of quieter times there, and the war in South Africa is over, so there is not much call now for horses for army purposes, and general prices are going down."

Horses Remember.

That horses remember their racing days is evidenced by the performance of Rachel B., 2:28½, by Allie West, at the Meadowlands farm one day last fall. After she had weaned her first colt by Wood Boy, it was decided to turn her out in the infield of the farm track. It was expected that the old mare would cross the track to the tract of clover in the infield, but instead she went to the stand, took the outside of the track and jogged around it three times, and then, turning above the wire, took the pole and went around. She kept going until stopped by the men. The next day when turned out she went through the same performance, and she made it necessary for the farm to find a new paddock for her. Rachel B. is 24 years old, and has not been raced in seventeen years.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Good and Bad Children.

Children, you are very little,
And your bones are very brittle;
If you would grow tall and stately
You must try to walk sedately.

You must still be bright and quiet,
And content with simple diet;
And remain, through all bewild'ring,
Innocent and honest children.

Happy hearts and happy faces,
Happy play in grassy places—
That was how, in ancient ages,
Children grew to kings and sages.

But the unkind and the unruly,
And the sort who eat unduly,
They must never hope for glory—
Theirs is quite a different story.

Cruel children, crying babies,
All grow up as geese and gabies,
Hatred, as their age increases,
By their nephews and their nieces.

About Dolls.

The origin of the word doll is curious. Centuries ago, when saints' names were much in vogue for children, St. Dorothea was the most popular, and her name the best and luckiest that could be given to a little girl. The nickname was Dolly, or Doll, and from giving babies the nickname, it was an easy step to pass it on to the little images of which the babies were so fond.

The word doll is not found in common use in our language until the middle of the eighteenth century, and as far as can be discovered, first appears in the Gentleman's Magazine for September, 1751, in the following: "Several dolls, with different dresses, made in St. James street, have been sent to the czarina, to show the manner of dressing at present in fashion among English ladies."

Previous to this the word used to describe the favorite plaything of all girls in all countries and in all ages was "baby," which is to be found, together with "poppet," or "puppet," in this sense in the works of most of the earlier writers.

The wax and china doll originated in the middle of the seventeenth century. There were no ladies' fashion papers as now, and in order to show what was being worn on the continent dolls were beautifully and expensively dressed and sent to the various European countries, and from the models orders were taken. The dolls, to show off their costly garb, must be made of more precious stuff than wood, so wax and china and even ivory ones were made.

Thuringa is the land where most dolls are born—puppetland, it is called on this account. About 200 years ago most of the dolls were made in Flanders, and they were called, not dolls, but Flanders' babies. There used to be an old English couplet which ran thus:

The children of Holland take pleasure in making
What the children of England take pleasure in breaking.

At one European doll factory of the present day 100,000 dolls are produced annually, some 500 men, women and children being employed. To make one talking doll requires the joint labor of thirty men. Dolls' eyes are made in underground rooms, into which the sunlight rarely peeps, and violet orbs are the most difficult color. There is one town in Germany where three-fourths of all the dolls' eyes in the world are made. Only in the case of the most expensive dolls is human hair used. In a doll factory are wood-carvers, headmakers, leg and arm makers, eyemakers, portrait artists, hair dressers, doll sewers and doll stuffers, also a small army of fashionable dressmakers and milliners.

The Hindu child is probably the only doll-less child in the universe. The little Egyptians have their wooden "Ushabti"—the same in style as 4,000 years ago. These were sometimes made of porcelain. When a child died its dolls were buried with it, in the expectation that their spirit forms would rise and do service in another world.

The paradise of dolls is Japan, where they are most elaborately and gorgeously attired affairs; so are the dolls of Kioto—"genroku," as they are called. They are often valuable wood carvings, enameled in colors, or statuettes of great artistic merit.

One of the most interesting collection of dolls in this country is that belonging to the bureau of ethnology, Washington. They are dolls of the Zuni Indians of Arizona, and are made from the roots or subterranean branches of the cottonwood tree, being whittled out with knives; they are decorated bright red, yellow, green and represent the gods of the tribe—the god of the snow; the god that eats up the rain clouds; the fire god; the sun god and the corn goddess. The Zuni children play with these dolls as other children do. Any one who goes into a Zuni habitation is certain to see a row of these dolls suspended from the ceiling—not being in use they are hung up until wanted.

La Infantila is a doll with a history. It is made of clay and is considered by its owner—a Mexican lady—and by hosts of other people, to be a worker of miracles, and quantities of costly gifts are constantly being offered to it. A room in the house of its owner is set aside for its exclusive use; here it reclines in a canopied bed of solid silver; it has beautiful tresses and rich jewelry, valued at thousands of dollars. Among its latest gifts is a magnificent piano, which is played by those who visit the doll, as a part of the service of adoration paid to it.

A Criminal Tree.

We hear many stories of many trees, but they are not often endowed with human characteristics; but you must take Uncle Abner's word for it. He was sitting on his porch telling it to the young man from the city, who had leaned his bicycle against the gate, and was resting on Uncle Abner's step.

"You see that there tree by the snowball bush, do you? The one out there beyond the pump that looks sort o' sick and guilty like? You notice some of the limbs drag down a little, as if it wasn't very well. Don't you take any stock in it. That tree is just pretendin'. It's laying low and thinking of some dishonesty. It's the sharpest tree in the yard, and as I said to Ab'gail, there ain't an honest leaf on its top.

"You know what a dry season it was last summer? Well, the grass in the yard dried up, the trees begun to shed their leaves in June, and in August they looked just as if they had stepped out of a brush heap, as I remarked to Ab'gail. All 'cept that there maple tree I'm talking 'bout. It never withered, nary a leaf dropped off. The hotter and drier it got the greener and perter got that tree. While the other trees were drooping and hanging their heads that tree just stood up there as chipper as you please, and waved its limbs and rustled its green leaves in the hot wind as if it was the middle of May.

"Says I to Ab'gail, I wouldn't take a plumb thousand for that tree.

"I was proud of that tree, and called in all the neighbors to see it, and bragged 'bout it all summer, and got the editor of Grit to speak about the 'strange phenomonom' at my place. But all the time I was harboring a vegetable viper in the bosom of my yard—as the schoolmaster remarked.

"The summer went on and that tree never withered, and its leaves didn't drop off until snow flew. Along in December the pump gave out, and I sent for Lon Rogers. Lon can fix anything; he's best on watches and grindstones and such things with wheels in 'em, but he's good at pumps, too. He said it needed new valves, and he went to the tannery and got some leather, and he fixed it and charged me six shillings, which I paid. Still, couldn't get no water. So I went for Lon. This time it was the piston all wore out, so he fixed that, and charged me a dollar forty, which I likewise paid.

"No water, however. So I went for Ben Harkaway, and he pried off the cover of the cistern and went down in, and hollered up there wa'n't any water, which was the reason the pump wouldn't pump. I had never known that cistern to go dry before in twenty years, so I says to Ben: 'Somethin's wrong. Look about and find it.' He snooped around a minute, and says he: 'Well, if there ain't a pesky tree root 'most as big as my arm come through the side, and put out morn'n a million little roots, and drunk up all the water slick and clean.'

"Then I saw what that scand'lous maple tree had been doing all summer, while I was bragging 'bout it—sucking the life-blood from my cistern like a South American what-d'ye-call-it—vampire—as I said to Ab'gail."

Some Good Advice.

If I felt tempted to do a young person a good turn I should arm him with a pair of scissors, sheathed for his pocket in a neat case, and add thereto the simplest and cheapest form of indexed file or portfolio. Then I would ask the young person what subjects really interested him. They might be anecdotes of uncommon intelligence in the animal world, new feats in amateur photography, ingenious applications of the electric current, or fresh triumphs of mechanical ingenuity. On these, or any other attractive themes, I would ask him never to miss the prompt clipping out an article from his newspaper; then, in the course of every year he would have a budget of information on a subject near his heart which would astonish him, whenever he gave an hour or two reviewing it, by showing him how much richer he was than if he had never started this savings bank of knowledge. Scores of valuable facts and hints which, at the time of first reading, he felt sure he would never forget, here confront him with all the surprise of new found treasure. And as the clipping habit becomes confirmed, it redeems the newspaper reader from the utter gainlessness of the desultory skimmer of articles and paragraphs. Empty, indeed, must be the Clarion of the cross-roads that doesn't yield some small spoil to the eye alert for accumulation. It may be no more than the weight of a prize pumpkin, or the results of introducing a Norwegian apple, but shall it not fit into the B compartment in which botany has its due garnering? That compartment, doubtless, is already swollen with new facts intended to be presented in an essay on "Acclimation" for the local horticultural society. It is the intention to use one's store that gives zest to its gathering. Hence the cardinal importance that the young person should at first be sparing, rather than lavish in clipping.—Geo. Iles.

He Forgot the Tip.

Justice Garoutte relates an amusing incident which occurred to him while crossing the Atlantic this summer, says the Argonaut. "The band played every night in the second cabin," he says, "and one evening I invited my family, Mr. McGee, his wife and a few other friends to visit the second cabin and listen to the music. After a few pieces had been played I called a kellner to me and told him to give the band a glass of beer at my expense. I paid him the charges, the beer was brought to the band, they stood up, rattled their glasses, seemed greatly delighted, and said 'good luck' to a big, red-faced German who was sitting on the opposite side of the room, and then drank their beer. He then arose and made a speech, after which the band played 'Hail to the Chief,' amid great applause. I asked a gentleman who sat near me and who understood German what all the fuss was about, and he said the fellow who had just made the speech had treated the band to beer. It came over me like a shot that I did not tip the kellner and that he had put up the job with the red-faced German.

The Spider's Web

Almost Human Intelligence Shown by This Insect.

The spider is the original telegraph lineman. Indeed, he is something more. After his lines are stretched, he establishes a "central," to which he runs as soon as any sort of vibration tells him that prey is entangled anywhere in his web. Once at central, he listens a minute, then having gathered the direction glides away to weave still further netting of silken web about the luckless wasp or fly that has fallen into his clutches. "He" would more properly be written "she." As in case of so many insects the female spider is ever so much bigger, more powerful and more resourceful than the male. In substance spider web is nearly identical with silk. But the spinners of it are far to wise to reel it up into cocoons, which may be plundered by men to feed the desire of the eyes, and the pride of life. Web spinning is very wonderful work. The workers indeed deserve high rank as civil engineers, and often deal with knotty problems in ways bespeaking almost human intelligence, as for instance when they spin loose threads so deftly and with such nice calculation of wind force that the loose ends are carried exactly to the chosen spot, often a couple of yards away, and there anchor themselves of their own motion. It is thus the fairy cables which net trees and boughs, and stretch across all summer paths, are set in place. They are invisible save where the full sun glints upon them, or else when a misty morning strings them with dewdrops. None the less they hold firm, and serve as aerial passageways along which the spiders run to and fro, safely and swiftly. Or else they serve as guys to brace the main web. In spinning the spider shows architectural genius to match her engineering skill. First she surveys a site, then stretches across it a strong thread. She is not particular about having this first thread very taut—all that can be managed later. She spins another thread from the end of this diagonally to another point, whence she goes to a third anchorage, a fourth, even a fifth. Now she has a clear central inclosed at irregular angles. The inclosing threads have been spun of pure silk. The next thing is to go over them with a viscid exudation which will make whatever touches them stick. When that is done she spins the web proper, running from side to side, with a thread trailing behind her, until all the web-spokes are in place. Before she weaves the rays together with crossing-threads, she must know that both they and the anchor threads are dependable. So she runs about, stretching, straining every one, and if it breaks spinning it over. Where there is pronounced slack she either takes it up by splicing a new thread next the center, and fastening it outside, or by attaching light weights, pebbles, bits of stick, and so on, to the web's lower edge. Now begins the last work—running round and round. The crossing threads are spun double—first very fine, then with a coarser ply. At the middle where the ray threads meet and cross, she either builds herself a snug station, or after everything is done cuts away the tangle and leaves a small clear space. This is the parlor into which the traditional fly was invited—with disastrous results—but Madame Spider does not habitually sit in it. Instead she lurks out of sight, ambushed at the foot of a ray thread. When vibrations tell of prey, she seeks the parlor, locates the disturbance, and straightway goes to see about it. A strong-winged insect, as a wasp or bumblebee, left to himself, will soon break out of her flimsy toils, though he may so entangle his wings in doing it that he never flies again. So she takes no chances. Nimbly she runs down the nearest ray thread, spinning as she runs. When she is a little beyond her victim she dexterously loops her new cable around him, draws it taut, and fastens it. When this had been repeated half a dozen times, the prey bound wing and foot, is ready for removal. She fastened a new thread at the parlor, loops it around the fly or wasp, carries it back, and pulls it as tight as she can. Sometimes she moves her prey a whole half-inch with one thread. The next thing is to cut away all the outer threads that hold him. This she does quickly, then spins a new cable from the parlor. Thus spinning and cutting, unless the prey be disproportionately big, she brings it at last to the parlor, or very close about it, and there sucks its juices in leisurely content. But if it is too big to be moved, she gnaws off a leg at a time, sucks them, and after awhile attacks the carcass. Sometimes, with fierce-stinging insects, she bites them just back of the neck so as to paralyze them.

Tom Jones' Cat

Knows as Much About China as Do the Newspaper Men

Writing in Donahoe's Magazine on the situation in China, Rev. Father Joseph M. Gleason, who is with the American forces in Pekin, maintains that the Boxer movement with all its attendant horrors was not a result of the presence of missionaries in China. It was an anti-foreign demonstration rather than anti-Christian. The reverend gentleman takes the newspaper correspondents to task for attributing the trouble to the missionaries and says of them:

"A newspaper man rushes into a country of which he hardly knew the existence before his arrival, takes no trouble to learn a word of the language, corners a few residents, and after a few cigars, and more drinks, closes the interview, and writes for his paper. He is paid a fancy salary as special correspondent and must write something for his paper, and this something is, as a rule, superficial generalizing of the veriest rubbish. Yet the public opinion of intelligent nations sometimes hangs on the presumed omniscience of a correspondent who flits in one day and skips the country the next. What did the ordinary correspondent know or find out about the Chinese question? Nothing, and many of them did not try hard to learn that much. Yet these men have told the general public that the missionaries did it all. They caused the whole row etc., ad nauseam. The ordinary correspondent who has written to the United States on this matter knows no more about it than Tom Jones' cat Now I am not writing a diatribe on newspaper men. I have been thrown in quite intimate relations with them for one year and a half, but that does not blind me to the fact that they don't 'know it all' and they can't 'know it all' in a week or two, and that much of their inflated verbiage is nonsense written simply to fill the bill for the editor who pays them."

Armour's First Baths.

When Phil Armour was a boy living on a farm in Madison, N. Y., he did not take his weekly bath in a marble tub nor was he rubbed with perfumed soap. Saturday nights his mother used to take him and the other boys down to the creek for their weekly scouring. Home made soft soap would be poured upon their heads and then rubbed in Long after Philip said:

"Often when the soapsuds were running into my eyes, making them smart like fire, I felt as though I would like to bite my mother's hand, and I knew better than to do it. I felt that her power was supreme, and that I must submit to it, as it was for the best."

FAST STEAMERS.

New York Wants Them for the Benefit of Suburban Residents.

Steamboats that can go forty miles an hour are soon to make several suburbs a part of all-devouring New York as Greenwich, Woolwich, Gravesend, Hampton Court, Chelsea, Kew, Clacton, Windsor, Margate, Ramsgate, etc., are part of London, says the New York Press. The steamboats on the Thames are perhaps the vilest in the world. Those in New York waters are the most palatial. The St. Johns, Sandy Hook and Monmouth have made the approach to the Hook a long stretch of the most delightful summer homes. Similar boats will line Jamaica bay with cottages as soon as Barren Island is cleaned out. The proposed forty-mile boats on the Hudson will extend New York thirty miles up the shores of the American Rhine in an incredibly short time. Many thousands of New Yorkers who now refuse to leave the city on account of the crush of morning and afternoon travel on the railroads will joyfully take up a residence in the country when they can go forty miles an hour by boat, with plenty of unconfined air, plenty of elbow room, no smoke, no cinders, no dust, no every-day train annoyances. The day will bring two outings of the most delightful and fascinating description, with attendant health. Instead of breathing another man's contaminating breath in a close and foul-smelling car, the boat commuter can fill his lungs with the pure ozone of heaven. Instead of contracting himself twice daily into the smallest possible space he may expand with an honest, fearless inflation. Even in the most inclement weather the decks will be free to him should he desire to brave and breathe the elements.

Curious Warning Against Lying.

At least one monument has been erected as a warning against lying. Such a monument exists in the Market Square of Devizes, in Wiltshire, England. The inscription reads as follows: "The Mayor and Corporation of Devizes avail themselves of the stability of this building to transmit to future times the record of an awful event which occurred in the market place in the year 1753, hoping that such a record may serve as a salutary warning against the danger of impiously invoking the Divine vengeance, or of calling on the Holy name of God to conceal the devices of falsehood and fraud. On Thursday, the 25th January, 1753, Ruth Pierce of Posterne, in this county, agreed with three other women to buy a sack of wheat in the market, each paying her due proportion towards the same. One of these women, in collecting the several quotas of money discovered a deficiency, and demanded of Ruth Pierce the sum which was wanted to make good the amount. Ruth Pierce protested she had paid her share, and said 'she wished she might drop down dead if she had not.' She rashly repeated this awful wish, when to the consternation of the surrounding multitude, she instantly fell down and expired, having the money concealed in her hand."

Pitch Cloak for Life-Saving.

A pitch cloak is the newest form of life-saving apparatus. It is a Swiss invention. It weighs about one pound and will keep even a fully-equipped soldier above the surface of the water. It has water-proof pockets in which food and drink may be carried, as well as blue lights, in case the wearer is shipwrecked in the night.

In some instances where it is fed the animals are taken with a breaking out of sores, and swelling of the abdomen, and where the animal is allowed to continue on the feed it sickens and dies. The authorities are advising farmers to feed their flax straw to their horned stock and let the horses have the oat straw.

It is often wondered way men who work in the woods—the lumber jacks—wear bright colored clothing, says the St. Paul Globe. In the conduct of the business of this world very few things are done without reason. It is the object of the man whose life is spent in the woods to make himself as conspicuous as possible, so that he cannot be shot by accident by a sportsman or felled by a tree that a fellow workman is chopping down. Gray and blue and brown, the common colors of work-day clothing, are too near the shades of earth and sky and the barks of trees and the furs of wild animals to be readily distinguished, so foresters and tree choppers wear the brightest colors, often in plaids of clear green, yellow, red and blue.

The New York Herald well says that the man who has a little farm clear of mortgage, with a market for his produce near at hand, is the happiest and most independent fellow on the planet. He doesn't think so; but it is true, nevertheless.

Farmers Need Watching.

The "honest farmer" will bear watching. The legislature of 1899, in the interests of good roads passed a law exempting from taxation farm wagons with a certain width of broad tire, whereupon the farmers began to claim exemption for all kinds of farm machinery on wheels whose tires where of the requisite width, although they might never be taken out on the road. The law was repealed on Tuesday by the House. The "honest farmer" will bear watching as well as the rest of us honest people.—Minneapolis Journal.

Paulson Convicted.

The jury in the case of Erick Paulson, arrested at Fosston for the murder of Mary Seldon at Pepin, Wis., agreed late Saturday upon a verdict of murder in the first degree. Paulson retained the same cold composure that he showed throughout the trial and did not exhibit the least sign of emotion until he bade goodbye to his aged father with the tears running down his cheeks. The sentence is imprisonment for life at Waupun. A motion for a new trial was denied. The verdict is in accordance with public opinion. Mrs. E. Eikhoff of this village was one of the witnesses in the above case.

Board of Health Rules.

The law in regard to the reporting of births and deaths in the state of Minnesota, reads as follows:

Within ten days after the death or birth to which it relates under penalty of not more than $20 by parents of their children by every household of every death or birth occuring in his household by the keeper or other proper officer of every work-house, poorhouse, training school, jail, prison, hospital, asylum, or other public or charitable institution of any death or birth occurring among persons under his charge.

Sec. 2. Any physician having attended a person, during his last illness, or having attended a case of confinement shall within ten days furnish a certificate to the clerk or health officer as the case may be, under penalty of $25. Chapter 114, laws of 1887.

The St. Paul Globe sizes up Towne's senatorial career as follows: Charles A. Towne closed his senatorial career with a speech of 20,000 words, lasting three hours and two minutes. The Chicago American says: "Mr. Towne's salary as senator amounted to $712. His mileage from Duluth to Washington and return amounted to $288 so that he will draw about $1,000 for filling Cushman K. Davis' shoes for fifty-six days. His speech contained 20,000 words. Thus Mr. Towne has been paid by the United States just five cents a word and $5.50 a minute for his service as senator from Minnesota." Now supposing he had made no speech he would have received the same salary. The member of congress from this district has received over $20,000 salary and we have yet to see any of his eloquence or advice to congress or the country.

Sure Cure for La Grippe.

The good book (Bible) tells us to love our neighbors as ourselves, and all things whatsoever we would that others would do to us to do the same to them, and as the following treatment for la grippe has been such a great blessing to me and my family. I hasten to send it to all that others may enjoy the same blessing. Here it is, copied from an eastern paper, the Advent Review and Sabbath Herald, published at Battle Creek, Mich., by A. T. Jones editor.

If you have not had experience so that you are acquainted with la grippe you may know that it is upon you by your eyes burning, your nose tickling, your head feeling large and full, and, perhaps, every joint and muscle of the body aching. But you need not wait for all these symptoms; one or two of them is enough to justify you in beginning proceedings.

First—As soon as you discover that you have la grippe, put your feet, and up to the knees if possible, in water as hot as can be borne.

Second—Keep the water as hot as can be borne, by putting in boiling water.

Third—Continue this until perspiration is started; as the same time it is helpful to sip hot lemonade.

Fourth—When perspiration has been well started, take out your feet, dry them quickly, wrap them in hot flannels, and lie down with hot water bottles, hot bricks or something of the kind, at your feet.

Fifth—Lie there till you choose to get up, and la grippe will be killed.

You will probably be too weak to do much, but as la grippe is gone your strength will soon return. Now do not pass this treatment by as too simple to be followed, and go to taking medicine, or even a full bath. Follow these directions strictly, simple as they appear, and you will find la grippe effectually broken. There is true philosophy in it. And the philosophy lies here: La grippe at its seizure is peculiarly a disease of the head. Plainly, therefore if the blood can be drawn away from the head, so that the disease shall have nothing to feed on la grippe will have to fail.

Holding the feet in water so hot does effectually draw the blood to the farthest extremity from the head, and keeping the feet hot so long, holds the blood away from the head, so that the disease is robbed of support; it cannot spread, and inevitably fails. A full bath, even though it be a Turkish or Russian, is not effectual against la grippe because the whole body is equally heated, the blood is made to bound more rapidly, and the disease is fed rather than starved. Follow these directions strictly and nothing will fail but la grippe. Will all editors please follow the writer's example and love their neighbors by printing this in their papers?

The Only American Girl to Marry a King

But one American girl has ever married a King, and she, a New England woman, now a widow, is living in a royal palace in the country of her adoption, almost lost sight of by her American sisters and friends. The romance of this fascinating gifted American girl who won the hand and heart of a King—one of the prettiest of love stories—will be one of the features of the March Ladies' Home Journal.

Boer Eyesight.

Remarkable stories are frequently told of the wonderful eyesight of uncivilized tribes. Travellers have told of guides who could see four of Jupiter's moons with the naked eye, and lately Sir Redvers Buller has declared that the average Boer can see at least two miles further than the British soldier. The cause of this enormous difference between two pairs of healthy normal eyes is a question of much practical interest—whether it is due to a real optical difference in structure or merely to some special ability to interpret slight difference of impression which has been acquired by practice. In a recent letter to Nature, A. S. Percival discussed this question and while coming to no very definate conclusion, seems rather inclined to favor the latter explanation.

A Swearing Room.

In some of the largest eastern cities, so the story goes, a crusade is being made against the use of profanity on the streets. Each policeman carries a register, which he uses to count oaths. Every time he hears a man swear he presses the button and rings it up as a conductor rings up fares. Then when the man comes into the police court the register shows how many oaths he used, and he is fined a dollar apiece.

It is needless to say that sensible men will swear in Chinese or under their breath if the indulgence costs them a dollar a throw. Swearing is often due to nervousness, due to bad digestion or similar causes. The wise man always looks after his health as well as his conduct, and so, he drinks "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It is a delicious and nourishing drink, and will do you good for it is brewed from pure barley malt and hops. If you work hard you not only deserve it but need it. CONGRESSMAN HOWARD

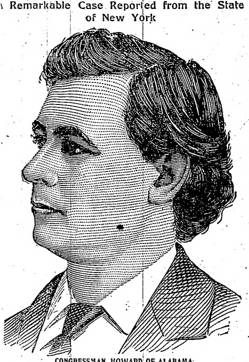
Of National Reputation Are the Men Who Recommend Peruna to Fellow Sufferers

A Remarkable Case Reported from the State of New York



CONGRESSMAN HOWARD OF ALABAMA

House of Representatives,
Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio—

Gentlemen—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."—M. W. Howard.

Congressman Howard's home address is Fort Payne, Ala.

MOST people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head and nose. Nothing is farther from the truth. It may be that the nose and throat is the oftenest affected by catarrh, but if this is so it is so only because these parts are more exposed to the vicissitudes of the climate than the other parts of the body.

Every organ, every duct, every cavity of the human body is liable to catarrh. A multitude of ailments depend on catarrh. This is true winter and summer. Catarrh causes many cases of chronic disease, where the victim has not the slightest suspicion that catarrh has anything to do with it.

The following letter which gives the experience of Mr. A. C. Lockhart is a case in point:

Mr. A. C. Lockhart, West Henrietta, N. Y., Box 58, in a letter written to Dr. Hartman says the following of Peruna:

"About fifteen years ago I commenced to be ailing, and consulted a physician. He pronounced my trouble a species of dyspepsia, and advised me, after he had treated me about six months, to get a leave of absence from my business and go into the country. I did so and got temporary relief. I went back to work again, but was taken with very distressing pains in my stomach.

"I seldom had a passage of the bowels naturally. I consulted another physician with no better results. The disease kept growing on me, until I had exhausted the ability of sixteen of Rochester's best physicians. The last physician advised me to give up my work and go south, after he had treated me for one year.

"I was given a thorough examination with the X-ray. They could not even determine what my trouble was. Some of your testimonials in the Rochester papers seemed to me worthy of consideration, and I made up my mind to try a bottle of Peruna. Before the bottle was half gone I noticed a change for the better. I am now on the fifth bottle, and have not an ache or pain anywhere. My bowels move regularly every day, and I have taken on eighteen pounds of flesh. I have recommended Peruna to a great many and they recommend it very highly. I have told several people that if they would take a bottle of Peruna, and could then candidly say that it had not benefited them, I would pay for the medicine."—A. C. Lockhart.

Mr. W. P. Peterson, of Morris, Ill., says:

"I was nearly dead with catarrhal dyspepsia and am now a well man, better, in fact, than I have been for twenty years or more.

"Since I got cured by your Peruna I have been consulted by a great many people."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Marriage Without Consent.

A girl's right is to be married with dignity from her father's house. There are instances, as in the case of Mrs. Browning, where a parent is relentlessly prejudiced and tyrannical; but they are very exceptional. After a sufficient period of waiting, if the two are very sure of each other and are of mature age—over twenty-five, at least—if they cannot obtain their parents' consent they may be justified in marrying without it, hoping for time to bring about a reconciliation of the inevitable.—Ladies Home Journal.

ONE DOLLAR PER PILL.

Miss Nettie Hixon Says the Remedy That Cured Her Would Be Cheap at That Price.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 11, 1900—(Special.)—Miss Nettie Hixon is Sergeant-at-Arms of Camp No. 1, Patriotic Order of America. Her home is at No. 1717 Hughes street, this city. She is a very popular and influential lady. For three years she has been ill. Now she is well. She says: "I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly for what they have done for me. I was troubled for three years with weakness, and often had dizzy spells, so that I dared not go out alone. My head would ache continually for four or five days at a time, until life simply became a burden.

"All the medicine I took did me no good, until my physician advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I secured a box, and found that my headache was leaving me. I felt encouraged and kept on taking them and getting stronger. The pains gradually diminished, until I had used four boxes, and all trace of pain had gone. I am today a strong and well woman, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills. If the price was one dollar per pill, instead of 50c a box, they would be cheap compared with other so-called medicines placed before a suffering public." This is but a sample of the letters received every day by the hundred. They all tell the same story of sickness and soreness, changed into health and vigor by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They never fail. 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he can't supply you, send to the Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

IN SOMALILAND.

Paper Read by Dr. A. Donaldson Smith on Country East of Upper Nile.

At a meeting of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia recently, Dr. A. Donaldson Smith addressed the society on "Explorations to the East of the Upper Nile." Dr. Smith said that the expedition was mainly an extension of his earlier journey in Somaliland, which he had had in contemplation for some time before being able to put it into execution. After surmounting many difficulties he got under way Aug. 1, 1899. Dr. Smith recounted briefly the part of his travels, which covered the retraversing of the country explored in 1895, until he reached Lake Rudolf, on Dec. 9. Here he was surprised at the poverty which had overtaken the Murle people, who, when he visited them in 1895, were rich and well-to-do, but discovered that the secret of their distress was to be found in Abyssinian raids. After crossing the Nianam he was struck with the remarkable change that occurred in the fauna. Not only were a completely different set of birds found between the Nianam and the Nile, but scarcely any of the mammalia that they had been accustomed to see were to be found in this western section. The Soomerings gazelle had given place to the larger Boran gazelle, and this had disappeared to make place for a smaller variety without any longitudinal black stripe on its side, which Mr. Thomas has proven to be new. The bouncing, nervous, long-necked Waller's gazelle, which had been a constant companion, was now no longer to be seen, but oribi and reedbuck took its place. Speake's gazelle was replaced by the beautiful Gazella Thomsoni. The hartebeests had differently curved horns and went under the name of Bubalis lelwel. The birds were represented by curious scarlet-breasted barbettes with enormous dentated bills for cracking hard berries; by curious tiny fly catchers, with large scarlet wattles around their eyes; and by more than a hundred other different species, all strikingly beautiful, belonging principally to the West African types. Many troops of monkeys made the tall forest about the rivers and ponds ring with their chatter. The most beautiful of these was a large horse-tailed colobus (colobus guereza pollura), which was also found to be new. From the time they left the Boran gallas until they reached Arabic-speaking natives near the Nile they could communicate with none of the tribes except by signs. The natives refused to give guides, principally because he refused to pursue any other than a westward course. The doctor referred to coming upon at one place a school of hippopotami disporting themselves in a lake, and then in continuation described the scenery, mountains, soils, flora and fauna, and natives encountered during the rest of the journey. He reached the Nile on March 10, and Cairo in June, just ten months from the time of starting from the Somali coast.

SPENT HIS MONEY FREELY.

Fred Piper's Ten-Days' Honeymoon Cost Him $25,000.

From the San Francisco Chronicle: Fred Piper, natural son of the late Congressman Piper, who got some $100,000 of the estate because his mother acknowledged her life secret, including paternity, married in haste and is now repenting at leisure. His days of marital bliss numbered just ten, and his experience cost him $25,000, half of his ready cash. It was on Oct. 7 that he married the handsome Gertrude Aiken, in Maple Hall, at the Palace hotel. Since that day the waiters and other attendants about the big caravansary have been talking of the tears the bride shed after the ceremony. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Piper left for a tour of the world, which ended in Santa Cruz when the honeymoon was just a third of a month old. It was during the days when Piper was trying to propitiate his bride, who was palpably unhappy, that he gave her half of his $50,000. Despite his love and devotion and this material expression of good will, Mrs. Piper told her husband that she would not—simply could not—live with him, and so, instead of continuing their journey, they took the train for San Francisco, where Mrs. Piper flew to the home nest and under her mother's wing for protection. Piper, like a little man of his word, signed over to her all he had promised, and sorrowfully went back to his home in the Santa Cruz mountains.

An American Type

Harper's Weekly: Is there any class of men in this country and generation that is better worth notice than this class of which "Phil" Armour was a familiar type? For the moment, money-making, which happens just now to be going on in this country on such a gigantic scale, is the most interesting thing in sight, and some of the princes of trade, egregious, untiring, seen both—the system marvelous in man creatures now breathing. There came to the present writer a year or two ago a description of Armour and his system, from some one who had seen both—the system marvelous in its precision and order, the man a man who knew business, alert, warm-blooded, tremendously hard-worked, yet an easy-running machine. No money could pay a man for working as Armour worked for fifty years, unless the work was his life and he would rather do it than anything else. That fact complicates the descent of a great business from father to son, for what was fun for the father may be terrific drudgery for the son, and drudgery which there is no pecuniary inducement to undergo. But there training comes in, and family pride, and a legitimate love of power, and the sense of duty, and provided the son happens to be a chip of the old block these considerations will be ample.

Safer than Ever to Travel.

Statistics seem to prove the falsity of the general opinion that modern forms of travel are more dangerous to the ever-moving public than the old methods. The proportion of passengers injured in the "good old stage coach days" as compared with the present is as 60 to 1. So far as means of safe travel are concerned there is no reason why we should wish for "the days of our daddies."

WHEN WRINKLES COME.
Departing HEALTH and BEAUTY Called Back by
Dr. Greene's Nervura

YOUR mirror will tell you the bitter truth.
Healthy women look younger than their age, but you look far too old for your years.
Time deals lightly with the woman in good health, but the wasting hand of sickness and disease spares neither your youthful looks, beauty, nor complexion.
The Creator has endowed every woman with beauty, and every woman in good health is beautiful and comely to look upon. A clear, fresh, wholesome look is the result of the possession of good health, and no woman can be beautiful and attractive without good health. The dull, dead, gnawing pain, the sense of nervousness, weakness, oppression, and discouragement, the tired, listless, languid feeling, the shooting pains, the aching head, the pain in the back, all these are symptoms of a disordered system, and all these are beauty-killers, producers of dull leaden complexions, unnatural flushings, dark circles under the eyes, humors, eruptions, blackheads, lustreless eyes, and other disfigurements which divest women of their natural gift of beauty.
Why be homely when you can be beautiful and attractive?
Get good health and with it those looks and attributes which attract, please, and fascinate. It is within your power to do so, for it is within every woman's power to be well and strong, and hence look her best, if she will use Dr. Greene's Nervura to give her strong, vigorous nerves, pure, rich blood, a clear complexion, and thus restore the energies and vitality of sound and perfect health.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA Makes Health and Happiness

Good health means youthful good looks to every woman, and it behooves women to restore and maintain their health by taking that greatest and best of all health restoratives, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will build up the health, cleanse and purify the complexion, restore brilliancy to the eye, make rich, red blood and strong, steady, and vigorous nerves. Dr. Greene's Nervura will make you look and feel young and restore your energies, vivacity, and enjoyment of life.
MRS. KATE AUSTIN, 40 Jenny Lind Ave., Somerville, Mass., says:
"I had a pain in my side for seventeen years. I also suffered with terrible backache and headache; such an awful headache, and I had not a bit of appetite. I cried with pain from womb trouble, and was as pale as a ghost. I was terribly nervous. I could not sleep for a long time, and had rheumatism in my shoulder and arm. I suffered everything; nobody but God knows how I suffered. I weighed 128 pounds. A friend recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I commenced to take it. I was so weak and run down that the first bottle did not do me much good, but I kept on, and the second bottle did me good and I began to gain. After taking the Nervura I never had a pain in my side, nor any headache, and I sleep well and have a good appetite. I don't believe there is any medicine in the world so good as Dr. Greene's Nervura. It did me good right off and I have had no return of my womb trouble. I had leucorrhoea, but since taking Nervura that has disappeared. I feel strong, and last summer was able to do the work for fourteen in a family, and I weigh 163 pounds. I was so weak before, nobody knows how I worked, but I had to work for my children. I sent two bottles of Nervura to my brother in Nova Scotia, and it did him lots of good. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to every one."

Ill Health Destroys Beauty and Happiness. DR. GREENE'S NERVURA Makes You Well and Restores Your Good Looks.

Women have absolute confidence in Dr. Greene's Nervura, more so than in any other remedy, because it is purely vegetable and a famous regular physician prepares it, which is a guarantee that it is perfectly adapted to cure. As an additional assurance of cure, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City, gives you the privilege of consulting him without charge or cost, either by calling or writing about your case.

THE NEWS RESUME

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Washington.

Connecticut, Louisiana, Tennessee and Washington have beenselected at the names of the four warships authorized by the house, and the bill for the construction of which is now pending in the senate.

The president has sent to the senate the nominations of J. H. Wilson of Delaware and Fitzhugh Le of Virginia, now brigadier generals of volunteers, to be brigadier generals in the regular army. The nominations were confirmed by the senate, and, later, the two generals were placed upon the retired list.

The Associated Press is requested by the British ambassador and Lady Pauncefote to express their heartfelt thanks for the many cards of condolence and marks of sympathy which they have received o nthe occasion of the death of her majesty Queen Victoria, all of which it has not been possible, owing to the great number, to acknowledge individually.

People Talked About.

Don Ramon de Campoanor, the Spanish poet, philosopher and statesman, is dead.

David Hunter McAlpine, the millionaire tobacco manufacturer in Ohio, died in New York city. He was eighty-five years of age.

Henry J. Elliott, the sculptor, long identified with public works of importance, died suddenly at his residence, in Washington, from pneumonia. He was fifty-three years of age.

Judge Jacob B. Blair, surveyor general of Utah, an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln and a man widely known in public life, died of heart disease, aged eighty years.

Ex-Congressman Samuel Maxwell is dead at Fremont, Neb., from heart failure. He sat on the supreme court bench from 1872 to 1894, and was in congress from 1897 to 1899.

Sins and Sinners.

In a fight over a woman at Hollister, Ohio, Albert Stitzer shot and killed Mike Johnkae and Joe Fobish. Stitzer was badly cut but will recover.

Johson and O'Neal, who have been held in Joplin, Mo., several days, suspected of complicity in the Cudahy kidnapping case, were identified as the men who killed the marshal while robbing a bank at Bronaugh, Mo.

The steamer Dolphin arrived at Seattle from Alaska with news that Geo. T. St. Cyr, a member of the well known Canadian family, has been found guilty at Dawson of the murder of H. Davis, and has been sentenced to the gallows.

Charles Carroll Mann, aged seventy-two years, a retired stock broker of Philadelphia, and for years a prominent Democratic politician, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He had been suffering from a complication of diseases.

Don Beck, a noted Indian Territory character, was killed in a fight near Kansas, I. T., by Deputy United States Marshal Frederick Sill and a large posse. Beck shot a man at the last Cherokee election, and has killed several people during his career.

Foreign.

All of King Edward's race horses, it is said, have been leased to the Duke of Devonshire for the season of 1901.

MISSING WITNESS APPEARS.

Defense Produces Another Sensation in the Hamilton Case.

Minneapolis, Feb. 16. — Yesterday's introduction of evidence by the defense in the Hamilton murder trial in Minneapolis was accompanied by several surprises. These were unpleasant surprises for the prosecution. However the county attorney appears as confident as at any time since the trial began.

A. M. Barbe, the commercial traveler whose absence all along has caused a good deal of speculation, was perhaps the principal actor yesterday. Barbe, it had been reported, had ignored the subpoenas which both sides mailed him at St. Louis. Now the man comes suddenly to the surface, takes the witness stand, and makes a statement which is of unquestionable value to the defense. Barbe makes the somewhat surprising statement that the prosecution did not desire his presence at the trial. He says the county prosecutor telegraphed him not to come to Minneapolis.

The testimony of Barbe is valuable mainly because it helps very materially to show that it was a general rumpus, instead of two separate and distinct fights between Day and Hamilton in one spot and between Force and Evans in another. And in another respect Barbe was important for his side. He said hamilton had been in the fight but had come out from the bunch before Day was stabbed.

Dr. Murray, Guy S. Canfield and City Editor Francis were the other important witnesses.

MEET AWFUL DEATH

AT LEAST SIXTY LIVES LOST IN A MINE ACCIDENT.

An Explosion Ignited the Mine, Wrecking the Shaft and Imprisoning the Miners — Village of Cumberland, B. C., Terribly Bereaved — Definite Details of the Horror Not Yet Obtainable—Rescue Parties Fight Nobly, but Are Blocked by Fire — Little Chance for the Imprisoned Miners.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 16.—An explosion that it is feared will be one of the most horrible mine accidents in the history of the dominion occurred yesterday forenoon at the Union mines owned by the Wellington Colliery company, of which James Dunsmuir, the premier of the province, is the principal shareholder. Telegraphic advices received so far give no complete story of the accident, but newspaper correspondents are now hurrying by steamers and tug boats to the scene and the full facts will shortly be obtainable. As near as can be gathered the explosion took place at about 11 o'clock in No. 6 shaft, one of the workings of the big coal mine there. This particular shaft is situated in the village of Cumberland. There were sixty men in it when the explosion took place and not one of them escaped. The explosion

Ignited the Mine.

The shaft was wrecked from midway down to the bottom and filled it with a solid mass of rocks, earth and timbers. The first explosion was followed by several more, while the dense volume of smoke issuing from the vent-holes indicated only too truly that fire as well as gas was doing its destructive work below. As soon as practicable after the accident the men of the morning shift in No. 5 shaft organized a rescuing party. No. 5 is situated about a mile from No. 6, but the two workings are connected by a tunnel, and through this channel an attempt was made to help the unfortunate fellows in the wrecked shaft. They had not cut their way many yards through the debris when they encountered fire, which rendered the place untenable and obliged the party to desist for a time. They soon returned to their apparently hopeless task and labored heroically until overcome at last by gas and smoke, they reluctantly withdrew from No. 5 and commenced work on a long cut from No. 4, the only other means of reaching the men. Work on this was prosecuted until abatement of the fire in No. 5 enabled them once more to return there.

With the Greatest Vigor

Later news is somewhat encouraging, it being stated that the fans are again working and that the cage has got 175 feet and is still going down in No. 4 shaft. Immediately upon receipt of the news yesterday at the head office of the Dunsmuir company here a special train was made up and proceeded at 1:15 to Nanaimo.

John Byrnes, ex-member of parliament, brother-in-law of the premier and ex-manager of the Dunsmuir mining business, said that scarcely any hope could be held out for the men. The only way by which any of them could escape would be by reaching some of the remote portions of the mine to which the fatal gas and smoke could not penetrate. The gas in a coal mine he said did it work in a few minutes. Hence the hopelessness of the task of saving men who had been in its for hours. The last report of the inspector of mines reported the shaft as complying with the regulations governing coal mines.

Hope Entertained That Some One From the Lucerne May Have Reached Shore.

St. John's, N. F., Feb. 16.—The agent of the British steamer Lucerne, supposed to be the vessel wrecked recently near Bacalleu, has returned from the scene of the wreck and brings portions of a charred plank, leading to the conclusion that the vessel's cargo was on fire before she struck and that the shipwreck was due to her running at full speed through a fog in an effort to make some port before the fire had obtained mastery. The government has dispatched the steamer Ingraham to visit Bacalleu, in the hope that some of the survivors of the disaster may be ashore there.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Stockwell's Resolutions Killed in the Senate.

St. Paul, Feb. 18. — Senator Stockwell's ship subsidy resolution was indefinitely postponed by a decisive vote in the senate Saturday. The Hennepin senator immediately sent up an anti-imperialistic resolution which met the same fate.

Senator McGill introduced a measure providing for the accumulation of funds to retire aged, disabled and worn out public school teachers. The measure is practically a pension system.

Senator Chilton presented a new marriage bill to take the place of his measure previously introduced, that requires physicians' certificates before licenses are issued, but does not make the presence of certain diseases among immediate relatives a bar. The actual condition of the contracting parties alone determines their rights of union.

In the House.

The following measures passed the house:

Making the office of sheriff of St. Louis county a salaried one; fixing the wolf bounty; preventing fraud in the branding and sale of process and renovated butter; the alternating ballot law.

Among the bills introduced in the house were the following:

SIXTY-ONE LIVES LOST.

No Hope for the Entombed Miners—Fires Quenched by Flooding.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 18.—Additional details continue to come from the Union mines on Vancouver island, where the horrible fatality occurred Friday forenoon. The accident has thrown the towns of Cumberland and Nanaimo into a state of gloom. The Canadian Pacific Railway company's steamer Tartar arrived at Vancouver yesterday afternoon from the coaling station at Union, twelve miles from Cumberland. She brought two passengers, H. R. Raymond and George Bennett, both coal miners. Neither had any theory as to the cause of the explosion in No. 6 shaft. They say the cause is not known and that it will never be known. When the Tartar left Union at 7 o'clock in the morning, the latest news from No. 6 shaft was that the flooding process was being still continued. The fire was still burning although not so fiercely as during the preceding thirty-six hours. The tremendous volume of water pouring into the mines from the continuous supply furnished by an eight-inch main, was gradually performing the desired service and by to-day it is confidently expected the fire will be extinguished. It will be several days Raymond says before the bodies of the sixty-one entombed miners can be recovered. After the fire has been completely put out it will be necessary to pump the water out of the mine before a rescuing party can hope to get at the corpses now lying at the bottom of the shaft. The families of the dead miners require financial assistance which will be forthcoming from more than one source. The mayor Vancouver has already taken steps to aid the bereaved families and other cities are taking similar action. In the meantime Premier Dunsmuir has ordered the storekeepers at Cumberland to give the distressed families what supplies they may need.

His time until the inauguration will be taken up with attending his vast correspondence, the accumulation of six weeks. A public reception will be tendered him in this city this afternoon at 5 o'clock. WILL PREVENT VOTE

OPPOSITION TO SHIPPING BILL MAKES FRANK ASSERTION.

No Chance to Gain Unanimous Consent to Take a Vote at the Present Session—Mr. Teller Announces His Purpose to Prevent a Vote—Mr. Hanna Denounces the Methods Employed by the Opposition to Defeat the Measure — Democrats Catch Joe Cannon Napping and a Filibuster Ensues.

Washington, Feb. 16.—That the opposition to the shipping bill in the senate will not permit a vote to be taken on the measure at the present session was made clear during the closing hour of yesterday's session. For several days it has been evident that it would be difficult to gain unanimous consent to take a vote upon the measure, but not until late yesterday was the frank assertion made that a vote could not be had. At the conclusion of several hours' consideration of the bill Mr. Teller of Colorado anonunced his purpose to prevent a vote at this session. In an impassioned speech he declared that he would not consent to any agreement to vote, and that it must be evident to the advocates of the bill that no vote could be had. The statement by the Colorado senator elicited a sharp response from Mr. Aldrich of Rhode Island, who insisted that despite the declaration of Mr. Teller the business of the senate would proceed in accordance with the wishes of the majority. Mr. Teller's statement also drew the fire of Mr. Chandler of New Hampshire, who asserted that the position of the opposition was preposterous. Mr. Hanna of Ohio replied to Mr. Teller in a forceful speech, in the course of which he became impassioned in his denunciation of the methods employed by the opposition to defeat the measure. The advocates, he said, were honestly endeavoring to advance the best interests of the country, and he resented the insinuations against their honesty of purpose. During the day the agricultural appropriation bill was passed after being under discussion for nearly four days.

In the House.

Under the leadership of Mr. Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, a long filibuster consumed the time of the house yesterday. Mr. Cannon, who desired the house to proceed with the sundry civil apprapriation bill, was caught napping by the Democrats, who desired to devote the day to the consideration of private claims. It was the last day under the rules which could be devoted to claims at this congress and notices had been sent out asking the Democrats to be in their seats. As a result Mr. Cannon was outwitted, but he kept up the fight all day, forcing roll calls for three hours and later filibustering in committee of the whole and winding up by making the point of no quorum against two small bills favorably reported upon in committee. The net result was that the whole day was wasted.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Delegate Wilcox of Hawaii scored a distinct triumph in securing a unanimous vote of the house committee on elections No. 1 confirming his right to a seat in the house of representatives and holding that the charges filed against him were not sufficient to warrant his removal. The case was not considered so much in its technical aspects, but rather on broad ground, all the circumstances, conditions and surroundings applicable to Hawaii as one of our new insular possessions being taken into consideration.

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.—Much startling and sensational testimony was presented by the state in the Hamilton murder trial yesterday forenoon. Thomas J. Rooney, the then policeman who took Hamilton into custody shortly after the murder, was the man who furnished the most thrilling evidence in the trial thus far. He testified that Hamilton confessed that he had killed Day, but had done it in self-defense. Robert Hill, a newspaper reporter, testified that he spoke with Hamilton shortly after the crime and that in answer to a question whether or not he had committed the crime Hamilton replied that he did not know whether he did it or not. The prosecution rested its case at the conclusion of Rooney's testimony. To-day the defense will commence the presentation of its side of the case. It is possible that the case will be concluded this week.

NEARING AN END.

Defense in the Hamilton Case Practically Closed.

Minneapolis, Feb. 16.—The defense in the Hamilton case practically rested yesterday afternoon. The court adjourned until 2 o'clock to-day. This was owing to the fact that Judge R. D. Russell's funeral occurs at 11 o'clock this forenoon, and is a mark of respect for the departed jurist. The evidence which the state has to offer in rebuttal will not consume more than two or three hours, so that arguments to the jury will be made Monday. The case will doubtless go to the jury Monday afternoon. The defense concluded not to use Ryan, the Des Moines plumber, who said he witnessed the fatal row and saw some one strike Hamilton with a billiard cue.

Woeful Ignorance.

Farmer—See here, you! You remember putting two lightning rods on my barn last spring, don't you? Well, that barn was struck six weeks after and burned down.

Peddler—Struck by lightnin?

"It was."

"In the daytime?"

"No: at night."

"Must 'a' been a dark night, wasn't it?"

"Yes: dark as pitch."

"Lanterns burnin?"

"What lanterns?"

"Didn't you run lanterns up 'em on dark nights?"

"Never heard of anything like that."

"Well, if you don't know enough to keep your lightnin rods showin you needn't blame me. G-lang!"—New York Weekly.

Bright Little Sammy.

Sammy (who is never allowed to stay out of school)—Howdie Hurlburt didn't come to school all day.

Mamma—Why not, Sammy?

Sammy—'Cause his mother died. When you die, may I stay home all day?

Mamma—Yes, darling; you may stay out a whole week.

Sammy (suspiciously)—Oh, I know! You mean to die in vacation.—Harlem Life.

The Conceited Peer.

A certain conceited nobleman once observed to Charles Townsend, "When I happen to say a foolish thing, I always burst out a-laughing." Townsend eyed him curiously and at length remarked in the most deliberate manner, "Ah, I envy you your happiness, for you must certainly live the merriest life of any man in Europe."

When you are invited to a real old fashioned woman's house for supper, she always has floating island. This is a sure test.—Atchison Globe.

The temple of fame stands upon the grave. The flame that burns upon its altars is kindled from the ashes of dead men.

A Poet With Vigor.

The McMillans of London published a book of poems by T. E. Brown, which the English critics lauded because of the "vigor of the poet's descriptive style." Here is a little sample of it referring to the sailing of a fishing smack:

So to the jetty gradual she was hauled;
Then one the tiller took
And chewed and spat upon his hand and bawled,
And one the canvas shook
Forth like a moldy bat, and one, with nods
And smiles, lay on the bowsprit end and called
And cursed the harbor-master by his gods.

And, rotten from the gunwale to the keel,
Rat riddled, bilge bestank,
Slime slobbered, horrible, I saw her reel
And drag her oozy flank
And sprawl among the deft young waves that laughed
And leapt and turned in many a sportive wheel
As she thumped onward with her lumbering draft.

We believe this is a poet who could almost do justice to the Chicago stockyards. The rhythmic swish of the pig sticker's knife and the thrilling splash of the hog in the scalding vat ought to thrill such a bard to the very core of his immortal soul. Give us a call, Brown.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Sneeze Wood Tree.

The remarkable sneeze wood tree is a native of Natal and other parts of South Africa. It's funny name was given to it because one cannot saw it without sneezing violently.

The dust of its wood has just the same effect as the strongest snuff and is so irritating to the nose that workmen are obliged to sneeze even when they are planting it.

If a piece of the wood of this tree is put in the mouth, it is found to have a very bitter taste, and no doubt it is this bitterness which prevents insects of any kind from attacking the timber of the "sneeze wood" tree.

The fact that insects find it so disagreeable makes its wood very valuable for work that is required to last a long time.

Blamed the Planets.

In the middle of the fourteenth century in Paris a new ordinance enjoining the cleansing of the streets and the shutting up of swine was carefully neglected, as usual, and a terrible plague was the consequence. The faculty of medicine, called upon for a remedy by the king, sent to inform him after long discussion that the plague was the result of a hostile conjunction of the planets Mars and Jupiter.

Early Football Players.

Football was for many years the national game of Florence. The season was from January to March, and the ladies and gentlemen of Florence and the populace as well were wont to assemble on the Piazza Santa Gloce to witness the game, which was called "Calcio," from the word meaning "to kick." The last game was played in 1739.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HE WHISTLED ON THE WAY.

No deeds of fame enshrined his name,
No laurel wreath or bay,
And yet he made earth happier;
He whistled on the way!

When sorrow frowned and stars were drowned
In stormy skies and gray,
He saw the light stream through the night;
He whistled on the way!

And even grief found sweet relief,
Hope shed a brighter ray,
And hearts he knew not blessed him
For whistling on the way!

And when from life's dark shadows
He passed into the day
They wrote above this line of love,
"He whistled on the way!"
—F. L. Stanton in Atlanta Constitution.

THE BAND PLAYED "DIXIE."

And Sousa Won the Hearts of the People at Fayetteville.

When North Carolina celebrated its centenary, the Marine band was ordered to Fayetteville to participate in the ceremonies, said Bandmaster Sousa. The little southern town was much interested in the advent of the "president's band," and the prevailing opinion was that "Dixie" would be tabooed music with us. Before the exercises a local committee waited upon me and intimated that "Dixie" was a popular melody in that vicinity.

"Of course," said the spokesman, "we don't want you to play anything you don't want to, but please remember, sir, that we are very fond of 'Dixie' here."

Bowing gravely, I thanked the committee for their interest in my programme, but left them completely in the dark as to whether I intended to play the loved song of the south or not.

The ceremonies opened with a patriotic address by Governor Fowle lauding the glories of the American flag, and naturally the only appropriate music to such a sentiment was "The Star Spangled Banner," which the crowd patriotically cheered.

The tone of the succeeding oration was equally fervid, but the speaker enlarged upon the glories of the commonwealth whose one hundredth anniversary was being celebrated. The orator sat down, and there was a momentary pause, and then as I raised my baton the strains of "Dixie" fell upon the delighted ears of the thousands round the platform.

The unexpected had happened, and such a shout as went up from that throng I have never heard equaled. Hats were tossed in the air, gray haired men embraced, and for a few minutes a jubilant pandemonium reigned supreme. During the rest of our stay in Fayetteville the repertory of the Marine band was on this order: "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie," "Star Spangled Banner," "Dixie," "Red, White and Blue," "Dixie."—Youth's Companion.

Settles the Counterfeits.

When a person comes into "Old Man" Smith's cigar store and hands him money in return for something purchased, the old man can ascertain by a single glance or touch whether the money is good or counterfeit. If the money is bad, he puts it under the tobacco cutter, or his money tester, as he calls it, and severs it in two.
